Mr. Avent suggests field trials for hunting dogs and says he will enter them with his "plugs." It seems to me that the suggestion ought to be that so long as it is the general that our field trials are intended to develop high-class hunting dogs, and most trainers are supposed to train their dogs with that view, that awards ought to be made accordingly. And that if it is the purpose to develop what Mr. Avent calls high class field trial dogs—dogs unfit for practical shooting, that the public ought to know it so as to be on an equality with Mr. Avent.

As matters now stand, Mr. Avent and a few judges who think as he does, are on one side of the fence, and the vast body of American sportsmen on the other.

The system of training to fit a dog for fast, wide and brilliant ranging, where little else is considered, and those calculated to make the dog obedient and hunt to the gun, are essentially different. As Mr. Avent suggests, there ought to be separate trials for the two classes of dogs, and each club owes it to its patrons to let it be known in advance by which standard they are to be judged, and require judges to award honons accordingly.

Protect the Fish.

It has been reported to us, says the San Jose Mercury, that a considerable number of fish, many of them being mountain trout, have been found in the irrigating ditches leading off from Los Gatos creek, and that many of them, being unable to find their way back again to the stream, perish in the ditches. A similar condition of affairs probably prevails wherever there are irrigating canals or ditches connected with fish-bearing streams, and as a consequence the destruction to fish life which is going on continually at this season of the year must in the aggregate be very large. It is at any rate sufficiently great and wasteful to make it worth while for us to guard against it. The State has been at a large expense to stock our rivers and creeks with fine fish, and an expensive Fish Commission is maintained to assist in preserving and in propagating them, but unless more watchful care is taken in future, much of the benefit that might be derived from them will be lost. A simple and effective remedy against the evil spoken of would be to place wire netting across the openings from the creeks into the irrigating ditches. These nettings, while permitting the free passing of the water, could be made small enough to exclude all fish that would be likely to enter the ditches, and in this way the present loss would be stopped. Perhaps a law requiring such a netting would be the most effective way to deal with the matter, but in the absence of such a law, public opinion, if expressed resolutely enough, will have considerable effect. Nearly all classes of people are interested in protecting our fish streams, and we trust therefore that some steps will be taken to prevent the loss of fish in the way complained of.

The California Kennel Club.

The primary arrangements for the coming bench show are now all settled and no doubt but that from the 4th to the 8th of May inclusive the Wigwam will be crowded with "our friend the dog" and his admirers.

The office of the club is, as of old, at 436 Montgomery street, where all business pertaining to the coming exhibition will be transacted.

Let nothing be left undone to make the show a success. Every lover of a dog should do all in his power to roll up the entries for this event for there can be no questioning the fact that bench shows have been and still continue to be most important factors in the development of the kennel interests of the country.

With Mr. J. K. Mortimer, the eminent authority on dogs, looked upon and recognized as such by all the kennel men of the country, as judge, this exhibition should not fail of meeting popular approval as well as to gain the support and respect of all our better-informed kennel men. For all information regarding the show, address the secretary at 436 Montgomery street.

John Heffernan's St. Bernard dog, Chancellor, has improved wonderfully, He is the tallest St. Bernard we have seen on this Coast, His coat and color are excellent and if his head keeps on improving during the next year as it has in the last, he will prove a hard one to beat. He is one of the kind that mature slowly and they generally prove the best.

On Sunday last a number of the membership of the Lincoln Gun Club enjoyed a practice shoot at the grounds of this club at Alameda Point. Among them we noticed Messrs. Allen, Cate, Quinton and a number of others.

Mr. Dave Thom, of E. T. Allen's, was an interested spectator at the Selby medal contest on Sunday last.

It is announced that Prof. David S. Jordan, of the Stanford University, will address the Sportsman's Protective Association early in April.

COLT AND STALLION ENTRIES.

Entries to the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association for Fall Meeting—Big Entry List and Promising Outlook.

The following is the list of entries received for the purses and stakes for colts and stallions to be trotted at the fall meeting of the P. C. T. H. B. A., entries to which closed on the 1st inst. The list is published at the suggestion of the president, who has called a meeting of the Board of Directors for next Monday at 1 o'clock P. M., to pass upon it. It is the longest list of entries that the association has received at any one time, which shows that the programme committee arranged a popular list of purses and stakes. A large number of breeders have taken occasion to join the association to make entries in these purses and stakes. They have all filled well, and from the number and qaulity of the horses entered, it promises to be the most interesting meeting the association has ever held:

COMBINATION AUCTION SALE.

Representatives of Soudan, Sidney, Antevolo, Eros, Director, Dexter Prince, and Other Sires to be Sold Next Wednesday.

The horsemen throughout the Eastern States have their eyes upon the California-bred horses, and the prices obtained at the auctions there are the best criterion to judge of the value set upon them by these astute breeders and judges of fine horses. The few auctions of young, well-bred stock held this year in this State have not been noted for the real excellence of the animals offered, but it affords us pleasure to announce that the sale which will take place next Wednesday will be one worth attending. Besides Mr. J. B. Cole's offering of the Antevolo stallion, Jay-Bee-See, and several other good ones, Mr. D. J. Murphy of the Moorland Stock Farm, sends a consignment of individuals which embrace many fashionable strains that will at once attract the attention of horsemen. As the blood of the great Moor family appears through Soudan, 2:27½, and as this son of Sultan is just coming into the prominence he deserves, perhaps a sketch of him would be of interest to our readers.

Soudan is a black stallion, sixteen hands, and weighs about 1,175 pounds. During the past year he has developed into a horse of magnificent proportions. When Soudan first appeared upon the turf he looked thin and drawn; no one would recognize him to-day except by his head, which is strictly of the Sultan type. His arms and gaskins have filled out, his loin, breast and girth have become smooth and muscular; his neck is fine and straight, his cannon bones, pasterns and feet are perfect, and his disposition is of the gentlest; all these qualities he transmits to his progeny.

As a two-year-old, Mr. L. J. Rose looked upon him as a wonder. He was pure-gaited, fast and game, and no young horse was more promising. As a five-year-old he met with an accident, yet he trotted in races and got a record of 2:30. Nothing was done with him until 1890, when he was again started in the circuit. He lowered his record to 2:27½. His owner then thought it best to give him a rest and endeavor to cure his lameness. He did nothing last year; this year he has been jogged, and as he will not be allowed to serve any mares, he will be given a chance to get a record which he deserves. He is as sound as a dollar and fit to "trot for a kingdom." Those who have seen this "line trotter" move say that he will be in the "'teens" this fall.

Soudan's breeding commends him to all who are seeking the Moor-Hambletonian cross. His sire is Sultan (sire of Stamboul, 2:11, and 27 others in the 2:30 list at 17 years of age, by The Moor, dam Lady Babcock (dam of Elector, 2:21¼, sire of Edwin C., 2:15, and Soudan, 2:27½), by Hambletonian 725, second dam, the Dubois mare, a famous road mare, whose pedigree has never been traced. The value of The Moor blood has never been over-estimated, and year by year it is becoming more precious. Hambletonian 725 is now regarded as one of the best horses ever brought to California. His progeny have nicked well with every other trotting family.

In the catalogue issued it will be seen that a number of Soudan's progeny appear. It is Mr. Murphy's desire to have the colts and fillies scattered as much as possible, for every one who has ever purchased one of the Soudans in the past seems anxious to have the district races come so that they can enter them. They are all level-headed, smooth-going, fast and promising trotters. There are a number of other stallions represented, which will be mentioned in their order, besides some fine booodmares and geldings. The latter will make splendid roadsters, while the owners will have a good prospect of having some capable of entering the 2:30 list. Every animal on the list will be sold without reserve. No by-bidding will be tolerated.

Miss Gaines is the name of a good-looking bay mare by Grosvenor, he by Administrator, out of Sylvia, a daughter of Edwin Forest 49, and Corinne by Mambrino Chief 11. The dam of Miss Gaines is Mollie, and she is by Jack Patchen, a son of Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, out of Prairie Flower by Belmont, etc. This mare has a nice way of going, and will prove a treasure to whoever buys her.

Minerva is one of the old-time trotting mares that "could pace like a streak." She is by Jim Lick, out of a daughter of Hardwood. Very few horses could pass her on the road, and as she is in foal to Soudan, the youngster should prove as "game as a pebble." Minerva's bay filly is an example of what she has done as a matron, and as she will also be sold, buyers can have an idea by seeing this one move. She is only three years old, is a natural born trotter, and should make a record.

The person who buys the standard-bred filly Moorland Lass will get a prize; she is a grand individual and a most promising trotter. She will be three years old in May. She is by Soudan out of Carrie Malone (sister to Chas Derby, 2:20, and H. R. Covey, three-year-old trial 2:27) by Steinway 1808, second dam Katy G., by Electioneer 125; third dam, Fanny Malone (grandam of Maud C., 2:19), by Niagara; fourth dam, the famous twenty-mile trotting mare, Fanny Wickham, by imp. Herald, and then on to the eleventh dam all thoroughbreds. As the catalogue truly says, "This is one of the choicest-bred fillies ever offered; in her veins runs the blood of Sunol, Palo Alto, Cricket, Stamboul and the Beautiful Bells family." She comes from producing families on both sides. The lessons of the past have taught us that such a mare is worthy of gracing the harem of the finest stock farm in the land even if she never trotted a step, but she can trot, and very fast if given any training. She would be a safe investment for any trainer who wished to have a game campaigner.

Almoone (sire of Delmas, 2:29½), by Algona 11,543, is represented by a stylish chestnut gelding, suitable to be driven in the best of company.

The bay gelding by Harold Cossack 4,402, out of Fillet by Viscount, he by Abdallah 15, is a strong, blocky-built youngster that will trot fast with very little work.

The standard-bred bay mare Kittie is by Irvington. She is a small, squatty-built mare, but her colts are all large and rangy. She is out of a daughter of John Nelson; second dam by St. Clair, and is heavy with foal by Soudan, 2:27½.

Sonoma Belle, by Gen. Dana, out of a daughter of John Nelson, is a resolute trotter, and is broken single and double. She will prove useful anywhere.

The standard bay filly Marline, by Eros, 2:29½, out of M'liss by Nephew 1220; second dam by Gen. McClellan; third dam by Belshazzar; fourth dam by Chieftain, is another gilt-edged one that is worthy of being placed anywhere either on the track or in the harem, and would do credit to either place. The Eros colts and fillies that were sold in the East are held in higher esteem than the progeny of any other son of Electioneer; they are all good lookers and fine trotters. Not one of them has ever been offered at auction to be re-sold. This statement is convincing proof of the value set upon them by their owners. Marline is the equal of any of them in every way.

P. J. Williams has a large chestnut colt by Soudan out of Belle, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, which he calls Hindoo. This fellow is a "corker," and will be seen in races this fall; a full brother of his will be sold, and whoever is the lucky purchaser will congratulate himself on securing such a prize. This one will be a fast trotter.

The sorrel colt by Soudan, out of Signa, by Sidney, 2:19¾, second dam Young Lady Hanna by Arthurton; third dam Old Lady Hanna, by Langford, son of Williamson's Belmont, is a second Adonis. His dam, Signa, is a full sister to that game campigner, Maggie McDowell 2:21¼, and this strong-limbed, easy-moving, level-headed youngster will prove valuable anywhere. His blood lines can hardly be excelled, and need but little comment, for the above pedigree speaks for itself, while as an individual he can be truthfully classed among the choicest of the lot."

The standard trotting colt, Vivian, 16,906 by Soudan, out of Viva, by Antevolo, 2:19½; second dam Lady Wilson, by Nutwood 600; third dam Rebel Daughter (grandam of Lida W., 2:18¼ by Belmont, is a fine individual of great promise. As a stock horse he should prove of inestimable value, combining as he does the Electioneer, Moor, Nutwood, Hambletonian 725 and the stoutest of thoroughbred blood. Vivian is entered in the State Fair Futurity Stakes. Two payments are made.

When Mr. Murphy purchased some A. W. Richmond mares and their colts from Mr. Hill, of Santa Barbara, two years ago, the mares were all in foal; he decided to sell their produce, and in this offering four of them appear. One is a brown gelding by Fayette King, out of Kate R. by A. W. Richmond; second dam Jenny Lind, by Reavis' John Morgan, etc. This fellow is just the right size and age to commence working. Another by Fayette King is a filly out of Minute by A. W. Richmond; second dam by Ben Wade. She is also a candidate for trotting honors.

The brown filly by Ulster Wilkes (he by Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, dam by Ulster Chief), out of Wren, by A. W. Richmond; second dam is by Reavis' John Morgan, etc The blood of Guy Wilkes and A. W. Richmond blends most kindly in this individual, and she is a credit to her finely-formed sire and dam.

The bay filly by Ulster Wilkes out of Jessie M., (dam of Ben Corbitt, 2:30, and another that can trot in 2:25 as soon as an opportunity presents itself), is a grand little filly, and a careful perusal of her pedigree will prove that she is an exceptionally well-bred one. Jessie M. is by A. W. Richmond, out of Jessie C., by Ben Wade, son of Woodburn; dam Miss Rose, by imp. Knight of St. George. This filly as an individual is equal to what one would expect from such breeding.

The brown gelding by Soudan, out of Hagar by Dick Patchen (one of the best grand sons of George M. Patchen) would make a fine roadster. Dick Patchen's dam was Lady Fisher, one of the most noted road mares in Santa Clara Valley.

Corrector, by Director 2:17, out of Brainy by Echo, 462; second dam by Tom Dudley is represented by two of his get, one is a filly out of the broodmare Kitty, by Irvington, spoken of above; the other is a filly out of Nutty, by Nutwood 600, second dam by Sam Purdy, 2:20½. They are both fine individuals, and need only to be seen to be appreciated. Such a combination of fashionable blood lines is rare.

The Dick Patchen filly out of Fillet, by Viscount, by Alexander's Abdallah, ought to be a good one.

One of the standard-bred fillies offered is by Sterlingwood, out of Carrie by A. W. Richmond. This one's pedigree is rich in the blood of such horses as Egmont, Nutwood, John Nelson, Sterling, Blackbird, Rattler, Ben Wade and Old Traveler, and she shows that she inherits speed from such fountainheads.

The black filly by Soudan, out of Elmer, by Elmo, will be sought for by some one who needs this breeding to cross on their good young Hambletonian horses.

A brown colt next attracts our attention; he is also by Soudan, out of Patchen Mollie (dam of Commodore Nutwood 2:32), by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31. He will need no long address on the day of sale to explain his merits.

There are but three more in this string which will entirely clean out every one of Soudan's yearlings. One is a colt out of Patchen Mollie, another is out of Lady Topham, and she is a fine filly. Lady Topham is by Grosvenor out of Lady Syer, by Geo M. Patchen, Jr. And the last, but not the least, is the dark gray filly called Grayling, out of Lucy by A. W. Richmond. She will prove "hot goods" anywhere. Aside from her great promise as a trotter her breeding should commend her.

Messrs. Emerson, Burke and Vioget have decided to sell out all the stock they are jointly interested in to the highest bidder, and as these mares, colts and fillies are all well bred and very good lookers those attending the sale will have an opportunity of securing bargains. Such mares as Nerea, 2:23¼, the best daughter of John Nelson, Juanita, Amaryllis, Fallette and Dolly Taylor will be sold.

The mares are all in foal to Eros 2:29½, and as they will cross well with any stallions on this Coast, all of them should bring fair prices. If there was any other way of settling up this partnership none of these animals would be sold, but this is the only alternative.

The above list of fine individuals will be brought before the public in splendid shape, and will be sold without reserve.

G. Valensin to make the sale still more interesting sends the following nine mares, all of them are heavy in foal to Sidney. He did not intend to sell any of these choice ones, but believed he would divide up his lot of mares and breed them to his young stallions Red Sid and Dictator Sid, but on mature deliberation he has decided not to breed these youngsters to any mares this year, and he finds that Sidney's services are almost overtaxed he offers these.

Clara P., bay mare, record 2:39, by Don Victor, sire of the dam of Legal Test, 2:29¾, Monterey, 2:25½, Coquette, 2:29½, and Minet, 2:27¾, son of Williamson's Belmont, sire of Venture, 2:27¼; first dam by Colusa, son of Belmont; second dam by Oregon Charlie.

Miss Trehern, bay mare, by Gen. McClellan 143, 2:29, son of Drew horse 114; first dam Belle Mahone (dam of Memorandum, three years, 2:34½, and grandam of Voucher, 2:22), by Norfolk; second dam Maid of the Oaks, by Jack Hawkins, sire of the dams of Balkan, 2:15, Mollie Drew, 2:27, Echora, 2:23½, Little Doc, 2:35; third dam, s. t. b. by imp. Glencoe.

Miss Casserly, chestnut mare, by Eugene Casserly, 2:45, son of Gen. Taylor; first dam by Whipple's Hambletonian 725; second dam Belle Rene, by Volscian, son of imp. Glencoe. Her produce are noted for their size and gameness.

Belle Patterson, bay mare, dam of Vengeance, 2:30¼ to cart, Don Pedro, 2:26, Paulino, 2:34, by Williamson's Belmont; first dam by Handley's Hiatoga 497, etc.; second dam by Grey Eagle.

Towhead, bay mare, dam of St. Nicholas 2:27¼, three years, trial, by Echo, 462, son of Hambletonian 10, and Fanny Felter, by Magnolia; first dam Silvertail, s. t. b., by Woodpecker, son of Bertrand. This is an exceedingly fine-looking mare, and as the Echo mares are becoming more valuable every year, she should be secured by some of our young stock farm owners.

Maye, bay mare, by Newland's Hambletonian; first dam, by Langford; second dam. (full sister to Belle Alta, sire of Henrietta, trial 2:21), by Williamson's Belmont.

Newland's Hambletonian, by Speculation (sire of Crown Point 2:24, sire of the dam of Fausta 2:22¾, champion yearling pacer; Mission Maid 2:22), dam by Joseph, sire of the dam of Allen Roy 2:17½.

Jennie O'Jones, bay mare, by Hubbard; first dam, by Gen. Taylor. Hubbard was sired by Planet (sire of the dam of Palo Alto 2:08¼, Gertrude Russell 2:23¼, Big Jim 2:23½).

Lurline, bay mare, dam of Monroe S., 2:20, by Belle Alta, son of Williamson's Belmont (sire of Venture 2:27¼); first dam by Langford; second dam, by Williamson's Belmont. There is no better Belmont mare in the State than this mare.

Dagmar, bay mare, by Hambletonian 725 (sire of fifteen 2:30 performers in the 2:30 list), dam The Ralston Mare, s. t. b., by Woodpecker, son of Bertrand.

Death of L. Lichtenberger, of Los Angeles.

Louis Lichtenberger, a pioneer and capitalist of Los Angeles, died at his residence, 128 East Fourth street, after a lingering illness, at the age of 56 years, 6 months, 3 days. He was born at Otweiler, Prussia, August 25, 1835, attended school there, and when 16 years of age emigrated to America, going to Chicago.

He served an apprenticeship to the trade of carriage and wagon-making, and remained in Chicago until 1860, when he came to the Pacific Coast. He worked at his trade in San Francisco, and in 1863 came to this city. After being employed at his trade for a time, he formed a partnership with Louis Roeder in 1866, which firm continued successfully for nine years, about opposite to where his block now stands at 103 to 111 North Main street. Having been successfully engaged in his business for over twenty years, in 1886 he retired from active business, after an honorable record. He had little or no capital when he began life, and his success is owing to his own efforts. He did not invest in real estate as a speculation, but always as an investment, and leaves valuable property. Mr. Lichtenberger was elected a member of the City Council, and, having served one term, was elected City Treasurer in 1878, and served as President of the Sixth Agricultural Association during about ten years. Los Angeles had no more generous citizen or one more identified with the progress and development of the city and county.

He was married November 2, 1865, to Miss Amelia Bohse, a native of the city of Bonn on the Rhein, Germany. He leaves a widow and four children.

Mr. Lichtenberger has been ill with Bright's disease for nearly two years. During the last two months he has been almost without interruption confined to his bed.

The funeral, under the auspices of the Germania Turnverein will occur to-morrow at 2 P. M. at the late residence of the deceased No. 124 East Fourth street. The interment will be in Rosedale cemetery.—Los Angeles Herald.

J. Willetts to C. Durfee.

Having heard that Mr. Chas. Durfee, in conversation with some gentlemen, amongst others, H. W. Lawrence, of Santa Barbara, who remarked he should patronize Silkwood, said that Silkwood was the most overrated horse he knew of. He evidently intended to cast a reflection upon Silkwood and at the same time give the impression that McKinney was not overrated. Therefore, to give Mr. Durfee and the public an opportunity to judge whether Silkwood is overrated or not and to show the merits of the two horses, I will show Silkwood with six of his get against McKinney and six of his get at the annual fair of Orange county, in 1892, for a special premium of $200—he, Durfee, to put up $100 and I $100—size, style, action and line finish to be the requisites to be judged upon, judges to be chosen at the fair, and to be free from bias or prejudice. I will also match a yearling Silkwood against a yearling McKinney, to trot half-mile heats, three in five or one mile and repeat, for $100 a side, race to take place during the Los Angeles fair.

I will also match a two-year-old, the get of Silkwood, against a two-year-old McKinney, to trot one mile and repeat, for $100 a side, the race to come off during the Orange county fair.

The money to be deposited in bank or with the treasurers of the fair associations, and the races to be made play or pay. These propositions to remain open for one month.

J. Willetts.

EQUINE STUDIES.

More Important—Trotting Handicaps—Artificial Impregnation—Trotting Battue.

More Important.—Of far greater importance than granting standard rank to pacers under the present rules for registration are questions which have agitated breeders long before the standard was promulgated.

The fundamental principle which governs in the pursuit of horse-breeding is the return for the outlay, a monetary return for capital, skill and labor invested; in a few words, to make it a paying business. There are other inducements, inducements which have a greater influence in many instances than mere money-making, and which exert a powerful fascination on the minds of a large proportion of the breeders who are engaged in producing horses for use on the turf, the track and the road. Success is the star which attracts, not sordid success which is measured by returning dollars, but the intense gratification attendant upon producing the highest type of animals in their sphere, or so nearly the highest as to be very close to the top. The element of uncertainty, which is so universally admitted to prevail, intensifies the interest and gives the most piquant zest to the pursuit. Experimental from the time of selecting sires and dams until the final tests, competition on the racecourses, on the trotttng track, or an exhibition of the qualities which are held in high esteem on the road.

Wealthy men who have engaged in the business, or, it would be better to state, have joined the ranks of breeders of fast horses, have been influenced by the desire to gratify their inclinations, and, with the hope that success would follow their experiments, without going into a close calculation of the cost or profits of gratification.

Much more pleasant, even to that class, to have the credit sale of the ledger display a balance over the debit page than a worse showing, but for all that a money return is a secondary consideration. And in many instances these wealthy men have proved to be not only staunch supporters of trotting sports, but have also been instrumental in furthering the interests of breeders by marking out new lines in breeding, rearing and training trotters, by carrying expensive experiments to a conclusion that demonstrated their value, and the benefits of which were shared by all. Notwithstanding the aid, so freely given, it is of paramount importance that the breeding, rearing and developing of fast trotters should, in the main, be fairly remunerative, and that people who are engaged in these pursuits be encouraged by pecuniary success, commensurate with good management and ability displayed.

In order to make this a business that can reasonably be expected to have stability, the first thing to consider is the prospective market for the productions of the breeding farms, i. e., the rough material, and the manipulated article, viz., horses in readiness for the track and road. Future markets are proverbially uncertain, and articles which can be classed as luxuries are more subject to fluctuations than those which are of necessity. Demand and supply govern prices, although not an absolute criterion of values; though rarity brings celebrity, and celebrity attracts attention. From the day that Flora Temple was sold for $8,000, at the time regarded an extravagant sum for a trotter, until now, horses which held the fastest records have commanded high prices, and met with ready sale. The largest prices have been paid for stallions to place in the stud, and it is somewhat singular that the very largest have been given for animals untried as progenitors, and yet so far as has been tested the investments have proved to be sound. But reasoning from analogy, the conclusion reached is that ultimate values must depend upon performance and the value of performance be guaged by earning capacity. The object in paying large prices for sires and dams is with the expectation of producing colts which can trot fast, and by their speed and endurance bring a return for the outlay. Under present estimates, speed is the criterion, and the capacity to show a fast mile, with all the conditions favorable, the main thing sought, without other reward than the record, that the only prize, and that obtained by purchasing the privilege of "going against the watch."

It is evident that when the novelty of this queer kind of racing is worn away it will have to be restricted and contests of that description confined to horses which are expected to display a high rate of speed, a very high rate, as championship winners will have to be the stake to induce attendance, and the contestants of such renown as to warrant expectations that they will secure the prize. When such horses as Sunol, Palo Alto, Nancy Hanks, Allerton, Nelson, Direct and Hal Pointer are billed to lower the record for all ages, and when celebrities in the younger division great celebrities of the stamp of Arion, Monbars, Ralph Wilkes, Frou-Frou and Fausta are the stars the public will be attracted, and large assemblages pour in their "money at the gate." Even such grand displays of trotting speed cannot be called legitimate sport, and if the "sports of the track" were restricted to that class of contests, breeders of trotters would find small encouragement to continue the business. As an adjunct to trotting it may be supported, and even as that of doubtful benefit. But the indiscriminate rush to fast tracks to obtain records and lower records heretofore obtained can only be of transitory interest, and as the means of swelling "rolls of honor" lose its prestige.

The objective point of every breeder of fast trotters is speed, and through it may be claimed that success or failure to produce that is determined by trials such as I now deprecate, and that, furthermore, it is the easiest method of testing speed, and, consequently, that the system must prevail. But those who contend that trials, which are only obtained through these easy methods, are sufficient to remunerate the breeder, lose sight of the fact that the foundation of value must rest on the uses to which the possessors of speed can be put. Trotting in actual races is the alembic which tries the various qualities, and incidentally thereto, but still subject, the breeding farm and school for trotters. The road is in a great measure separate, and yet with some traits of consanguinity. Now $15 purses and prize cups will not pay in the long run, and the time is not far off when these and the certificates accompanying them will not pass current. There is danger, however, that while the false system is upheld, trotting will dwindle, and that which has been termed the national sport of America sink into comparative insignificance.

It will not to do to claim that the present and prospective decadence of trotting sports will be entirely owing to races against time, although there are a few who assert that it is the heaviest incubus. With anything like harmonious action on the part of the majority that is easily remedied, and he refused to grant standard rank or give a place in the Year Book to animals which depend upon these trials for admission, will be of some benefit. The greatest good will come from the necessity of trotting in bona fide races to secure the coveted honor, and that being compulsory, the plea that it Is against their principles to take a part in contests which are open to the public and are recompensed by a "purse" of some value in place of a "prize cup" will not prevail. I do not intend to convey the idea that principle must be sacrificed to aduvance trotting interests, or that a person who has determined upon a certain course shall be forced into another, but I do insist that the man who does all in his power to aid in popularizing trotting sports shall have due recognition and not be placed on the same level as one who will not lend a helping hand. That the patron of honest trotting shall be rewarded for his enterprise and liberality, and not be compelled to share with those who endeavor to obtain the same results by practices which are certainly detrimental to the interests of trotting, and which eventually will cripple the business of breeding trotters.

Trotting Handicaps.—How shall trotters be handicapped to obtain like advantages which follow unequal weighting of racehorses? The conditions are so different that the problem is anything but easy of solution, and though of importance enough to warrant careful study, it is a good deal of trouble to get a starting clew to the labyrinth. In the first place there are comparatively small differences to overcome, when racehorses are to be brought together, and a few pounds will have a potent effect in equalizing those of different grades. Then the weight schedules are so arranged as to equalize ages, so that two, three, four and five-year-olds can compete on terms of equality. Penalties and allowances figure prominently in turf affairs, and then there is the handicap proper to give all a fair chance for victory. The consequence is that a fair racehorse, that is a horse which is outclassed so much that with regular "weight-for-age" he would be entirely useless, under the present system will stand a good show to win a share of purses and bring in a good return for the money invested. Public interest is also maintained and the varying conditions present new features, every turn of the equine kaleidoscope presenting a new picture. John Randolph, of Roanoke, once asserted in his emphatic manner, "that there were three tolerable things which were intolerable, a tolerable egg, a tolerable oyster and a tolerable racehorse." That was in the old days of the turf when handicaps, penalties and allowances were unknown in this country, and programmes were restricted, or practically so, to heats of one, two, three and four miles, but now even a tolerable racehorse will bring a good price, when offered for sale, and land as much clear money as one a good deal superior. The old cry was that handicaps, penalties and allowances were premiums for inferiority, but it is a "moral certainty" that if the turf were placed on the same basis as it was erected upon in the good old times when he, of Roanoke, was an eager spectator, that was in the days of Eclipse and Henry, it would be shorn of its fair proportions, reduced to "a beggarly array of empty boxes" in place of the grand spectacles which now greet the eyes of tens of thousands.

Time classification among trotters is the only thing which is at all analogous to racing handicaps and that has proved so unequal an equalizer that it may be termed a very poor substitute indeed. Smart, very cute rogues, occasionally have managed to deceive handicappers by running horses when out of condition, or with still greater rascality "pulled" them in order to obtain concessions of weight which would insure victory. That has also been practiced on the tracks, and horses have gone through meeting after meeting without being permitted to win a heat in faster time than their drivers desired. Not to win, if that entailed "getting out of their class," was the governing motive, and many held that it was sufficient justification for downright robbery when that was the plea in extenuation of acknowledged guilt.

It may be that a double classification will have a beneficial effect; that is, a dual requirement for eligibility when records are to govern, and in that way bring contestants more closely together.

For instance a 2:20 class for horses which have trotted inside of 2:25, and so on with such boundaries fixed as may be deemed necessary to insure the grouping of public performers, and what is also important hold out inducements to obtain records, trot in public races, $15 purses and prize cups not to count. It would be the death blow to "ringers" unless in the slowest classes, and these for amounts which would not pay the track Ishmaelites to secure.

Racing handicappers pile on the weight when there are good reasons for the belief that horses have been started and not "meant" or when not in condition, and dark horses are also weighted under the supposition that they are likely to be of a high class.

There is only one escape, however, in the time handicap, that being a direct bar ruling out by name those which will interfere with other entries.

Important as it is to secure "all-aged" horses which will give promise of closely-contested races, some way must be devised to give the "outside" colts a show if colt-trotting receive the support of small breeders and keep the place it so richly deserves on the bills.

Penalties are inadmissable, as victorious youngsters cannot be handicapped by heavy vehicles and the bright stars have their own way, the fairly good hopelessly in the rear. The large breeding establishments and the owners of proved stallions have a monopoly in the estimation of a majority of would-be subscribers to stakes, and engagements will not be undertaken when the image of defeat is presented to their vision, willing, perhaps, to try what Dame Fortune may have in store for them in an occasional battle against the big guns if awarded the opportunity of a skirmish among themselves, but will not incur the expenses of training if no chance is offered. In one case there is a lack of inducements, a well-grounded fear that all the cost of breeding, rearing and training will not bring an inadequate return, and that there is nearly an absolute certainty of heavy losses. Under opposite conditions, or rather with other opportunities, viz., the chance to compete on equal terms, outside of other engagements which are not restricted, the small breeders are encouraged to train their colts, and this confidence may lead to accepting risks which would not have been hazared without such a guarantee.

The speculative propensities of the human race, it may be called the gambling instinct, will persuade people to accept chances which a cooler judgment will discard.

There are always expectations that something extraordinary will happen in their favor and the breeder of a few colts be stimulated by that hope to imagine that his few will be able to successfully cope with the many. But as year after year rolls around and he learns that he is no exception to the general rule, and that the goddess who presides over the fortunes of all has a manifest favoritism for big and well-equipped armies, and large and scientifically conducted breeding farms. he loses faith and is no longer imbued with an implicit belief that his own number will be the first drawn from Fortune's wheel when another has a score or a hundred numbers to depend upon. He also learns that in point of management he is inferior.

Capital has a pull in trotting affairs as it has in all other pursuits, and gives advantages which are beyond his reach. The big establishment employs renowned professors in the art of educating and driving colts, the best vehicles, harness, boots, every known adjunct to advance its interests.

He clamors for an equal representation, to be given a chance whereby he can reasonably hope for success, and then with a "stouter heart for the steep brae," he will attempt what he would have regarded as a forlorn hope before the stimulus was administered.

While it seems to be an impossibility to place the small breeder of trotting colts on as favorable a plane as the small breeder and owner of racing youngsters, from the greater difficulty of equalizing the chances of winning, something may be done which will prove an "encouragement" to continue in the business. There are twenty of the minor division to one in the major, and though the last named are the powerful factors in securing public attention, if trotting were restricted to that class alone it would decline in popularity.

In the old days racing was denominated "the sport of kings and the recreation of gentlemen." To sustain the expenses incidental to breeding, rearing, and especially racing, wealth was an essential and "honor and glory" were the rewards.

But changes were instituted and it became a business which could be prosecuted with success equivalent to the management displayed, hundreds are engaged to tens in the old days, racecourses have multiplied in like proportion, and it is now the sport of the country, the recreation of the masses, the means of support to thousands, and the breeding of racehorses a "leading interest" in many sections of the United States. The breeeing of fast trotters is far more widely disseminated, the bright particular stars of the tracks aud paddocks bring fabulous prices, the fairly good have little value, the surplus going for prices below the fees for the services of the stallions which got them. What is the remedy?

Artificial Impregnation—It will be better to call it Natural Impregnation, accomplished by artificial means, the experiment which Dr. Farnum has carried to a successful termination. So highly important to the horse breeding interests of the world is this application of the science of reproduction that it comes with overwhelming force, and I shall defer considering it with any fullness until Dr. Farnum has published his promised article. I met Dr. Farnum a few years ago at Palo Alto, and at that time was strongly impressed with the feasibility of the plan. Dr. Sutherland, of Saginaw, Michigan, one of the owners of Sphinx, was also there, and he agreed in the main with Dr. Farnum, but thought it might be difficult to make it available in practice. The success that has followed in the case of the Sister to Ruth Ryan removes all doubts, and that success came under circumstances which were, to say the least, an extreme test, that is, if the after treatment was similar to that pursued on the others, as described in the paper of last week. I have had by far the best success in getting mares in foal by limiting the "teasing," the first after service with twenty-one days intervening and thereafter at intervals of seven or nine days, but with brief trials. There will, of course, be doubters and all manner of fanciful objections raised. Dr. Farnum's certificate is irrefutable evidence to those who have the acquaintance of that gentleman, and the guards were such that imposition would be difficult. The foal coming three days before eleven months expired is further proof if that were necessary, and should that be emphasized by resemblance in the foal to her sire, Suwarrow, even the captious will have little to rely upon to question the legitimacy of the offspring.

Mr. Lopez. who brought Suwarrow from Australia and sold him here, was one of the witnesses to the experiment, and he advanced an idea that struck me at the time as having some weight. That was that in withdrawing the semen from the vagina the ovum might accompany the spermatozoon, and the foal, consequently, would be the offspring of the mare which was served, the experimentee being little more than a foster mother. On cogitating over the matter, however, I came to the conclusion that contact does not take place between the male and female germs until they meet in the womb—the ovum being introduced through another channel, the fallopian tubes, but my limited knowledge of anatomy and physiology forbids an authoritative contradiction, though D Farnum can settle that point satisfactorily.

Trotting Battue.—Not at all surprising that the type made trotting battle in place of trotting battue when that term was used in connection with sixty races in one day on the Independence track. Not very appropriate in the literal sense of the term when applied to trotting races, and yet it is somewhat expressive. In shooting, the coverts in game preserves are beaten, and pheasants, hares, etc., are driven in masses to be ruthlessly murdered by the gunners stationed at the termination of the drive, and this is called a battue. There is a good excuse for the wholesale slaughter of jack rabbits on the Merced plains, but to call either the California proceeding or the European battue sport is a slanderous aspersion which all lovers of true sport will join in denouncing. Some twenty years ago Bogardus, the champion wing shot, claimed to have made a match with an ex-champion, the conditions being that Bogardus should kill one hundred wild pigeons without a miss, eighteen yards rise, plunge traps. He had a gun of immense bore, single barrel, a whole handful of shot the charge, and as the spring trap threw the bird a few feet into the air, there was a momentary pause before the pigeon could commence its flight, and the veriest tyro could scarcely have missed. This was worse than a battue, and after a shot or two I would as soon have witnessed the butchery of as many sheep.

Nothing revolting, it is true, in being a spectator of sixty races in an afternoon; many pleasant features and some excitement to those who had an interest in the trotters, and very likely the habitues of the track were eagerly desirous to learn whether there was improvement or retrogression from former trials. More of the elements of sport than any battue, though ever so much behind a real good race.

That New Race Course.

If we have any gentleman in our midst with the enterprise of a Williams, now is the accepted and correct time for him to make his presence known. Is San Francisco to be overshadowed (as a racing center) by Stockton and Sacramento? We trust not, but indeed the mills of the track-building gods of this city grind slowly. Within a week it has been authoritatively announced that the inhabitants of the little city, Merced, which has within her precints a population of less than 4,000, have donated $20,000 toward the building of a kite-shaped course and grand stand, and Bakersfield is enthusiastic over the new course to be built there. San Francisco, the Queen City of the Pacific Slope, the great metropolis of the far West, is on the eve of having no race track, and to her shame be it said that with all her millions not one among all her money kings has shown that he has even a good-sized spark of local pride or a sufficient quantity of sporting blood in his composition to push him to the fore with a few thousands of dollars to start a track-building boom. Men are in a measure like sheep—they will follow a leader to almost any limit. Let some enterprising gentleman put his name to the head of a stock subscription roll, and $10,000 or $15,000 opposite his autograph, and see if some of the timid of the race-loving flock will not take courage and follow the (as yet undiscovered) bold leader.

A good race course, with suitable grounds, stables and grand stands, a city of the size of San Francisco should by all means have. Every other city in America of half her population has a first-class track and grand stands, and no reason can be assigned why we should not have it. How can Independence, Iowa, Memphis and Nashville, Tenn., Terre Haute, Richmond and Cambridge City, Ind., support first-class racing associations and have financial success? Independence, Iowa, has a population of perhaps 4,000, and not a more populous or prosperous country surrounding it than has San Francisco. If that little Iowa town can, by having a first-class track and giving good-sized purses, draw immense audiences to its races and clear money on every meeting, and the other small cities we have mentioned can do likewise, cannot the great city of San Francisco, with her 350,000 inhabitants and cities but six miles away with 65,000 more people, double discount the places across the Rockies that we have referred to when it comes to drawing crowds? With a race track in which San Franciscans could take pride, there is no reason to believe but that vast crowds would flock to it if attractive programmes are offered. From the number and quality of entries to the Trotting Horse Breeders fall meeting, a grand season of sport is in sight. Let the Blood Horse Association put a few old-fashioned races of two to three miles on their programme, and see if they could not get such a crowd as used to attend such events here eighteen to twenty years ago. We aver it is worth trying, and have no doubt of the result.

"How are you going to make a track near here pay interest on $125,000?" said a prominent breeder to the writer a few days ago. The amount seemed a large one at that time; in fact, so large that it was rather dumbfounding, making an answer at the time well-nigh impossible. And when he further remarked: "How many men will put their names down for a thousand dollars apiece on a track-building scheme?" we were utterly stumped. There are two ways out of it, however. One is for some rich individual to build the track under a guarantee from the Breeders and Blood Horse Associations to rent the place for two meetings each per year, the former for three weeks, the latter for at least four, paying a fair sum therefor. The other and far better way is for the two associations to purchase the ground and build a track, grand stand, stables, etc. There are now over 150 members of the Trotting Horse Breeders Association, perhaps 100 of the Blood Horse. This makes 250 men out of which to form a joint stock company, and if the matter were placed before them lucidly few indeed would object to putting up his pro rata toward carrying out this project, for we believe that it can be shown to them that the place would be made to pay at least 8 per cent. per annum on the sum necessary to be invested, say $125,000. When that can be demonstrated the most modest will come forward.

If the Iler proposition be accepted and the track, stables, etc., are built and land purchased near Baden at a total expense of $125,000, this would mean $500 per member of each association, provided every man concluded to take a share of stock. While many could not afford to come in to this extent, the wealthy members would doubtless make up the deficiency when it came to a test. Owning their own track, and every member having a financial interest therein, there would be a grand boom in racing, and the members would use every endeavor to make the institution pay good interest on the investment. It is a poor meeting, even in these days, where $2,500 are not cleared, and with a revival of racing interest here and every member working like a beaver to make the new track a financial as well as "artistic" success, there is no reason to believe that the receipts would not be nearly doubled. Say only $10,000 were cleared on the four meetings from gate receipts and money from the privilege men. The electric and Southern Pacific railroads would surely agree to divide a little with the associations—say $2,000 per annum from that source. That brings the total up to $12,000. Then the place would undoubtedly become popular as a wintering resort for horses. Say seventy-five horses were kept there at $2 per month each for stalls for a space of four months. This means $600 more, or $12,600. Allowing that it would take $1,600 per year to keep the place in repair, this would leave a balance on the right side of the ledger of $11,000—very good interest on the amount ($125,000) invested. This is not counting in anything but regular race meetings. Live stock shows could be given, and a track could be built in the enclosure fit for bicyclists, who might have a series of races there every year, further swelling the bank accounts of the stockholders. It would be much better for the associations to jointly own a track than to lease one, for where a person's coin is at stake to an extent worth mentioning he is sure to prove a worker, to say nothing of a feeling of local pride in the success of the organization.

Some Sanguine Views.

The prospects for the year 1892 were never brighter. From all parts of California comes the welcome news that the "rains have just come right," and the growing grain, the budding orchards and the thrifty vineyards, the fields of luxuriant alfalfa and clover, the emerald-clothed hillsides and meadows are all indicative of a prosperous spring, and the first great fears and anxieties of a farmer's life are now all allayed.

The latest reports from our large breeding farms are also encouraging, and the number of royally-bred youngsters that are making their advent in the equine world, adding bouyancy to the hopes of the breeders and bright promises for their future wealth and fame.

The long siege of epidemics that stalked spectre-like through the paddocks and looked in at the stalls where the choicest-bred mares, colts and fillies were, has noiselessly departed, and from everywhere in the State almost, are reports of good health received.

The various agricultural associations throughout California will soon be heard of through their directors making out programmes for the fall meetings; therefore these officials are busy investigating and making inquiries among the leading breeders as to the best means of bringing out the horses and the best plan to insure large audiences at their annual gatherings.

The State Fair will eclipse all former efforts, and the programme the officers will present is sure to attract thousands of people to the Capital City to witness the "battles of the equine kings."

The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association has met with unprecedented success so far, not only in the increase of membership, but in the large lists of entries made. The officers and members consequently feel highly elated over the prospects. Taking everything into consideration, the farmers, the breeders and (with properly conducted fairs and meetings) the sport-loving community can look forward to the best year California has ever had.

Mixed Programmes a Necessity.

Although trotting and pacing races may have a charm for a large number of lovers of the light harness horse who go to witness the contests at our annual fairs, the people of this State have hardly arrived at that critical point where they can eschew the racing of thoroughbreds altogether. There is a "something so exciting about the circus-like performances" of the light-limbed thoroughbreds which are ridden by gaudily-attired, agile jockeys, that the most phlegmatic individual cannot help becoming interested. The idea of giving a week's trotting and racing at any fair has been tried, and although a certain amount of success has attended the efforts of the directors, yet the crowds have not been so large as when at least two days of the meeting were devoted to the racing of thoroughbreds.

On inquiry we find that there are more thoroughbreds in training in this State than ever before, and while admitting that a number are to start East on the circuit, there will be enough good ones left to make up some extra good races. The same fact is true of the trotting horses. A look over the list of entries in the P. C. T. H. B. A. is convincing proof that there will be "a few good ones left" to battle for honors on the Pacific Coast.

The lessons of the past have taught the district fair managers that an exclusive trotting and pacing programme is not as attractive to the masses as a "mixed" one. As none of the associations are aiming to make a large amount of money from these annual gatherings, and only desire to give the people the worth of their money and come out a little ahead every year, it would be advisable for them to turn over the leaves of their ledgers to find that the greatest success has attended the mixed meetings. Therefore a word to the wise is sufficient.

Equestrian tournaments and cattle displays also help to attract the masses, and everything should be done by the management to make the district fair the event of the year. The State Fair is an excellent example to follow, and if the various district managers will only make their fairs more attractive to the public and not close their eyes to the fact that with a little more energy and push and a little more regard for what the general public expect, and also give good purses to bring out large fields of thoroughbreds as well as liberal purses for their trotters and pacers, success will crown their efforts.

THE Sonoma and Marin (Petaluma) Agricultural Society last year restricted their "District" colt stakes to the get (wheresoever owned) of stallions owned or standing in that district, and were so well pleased with the support given the small breeders and farmers, in consequence, that they have decided to keep up the innovation. By adopting this rule, it matters not where the winning colt is owned, the "district" gets the credit and advertisement of owning the sire. It might be well to encourage the breeding of good mares owned in the district to the best of "sires everywhere or anywhere," to offer a set of stakes for the produce of those home mares from "stallions standing at large," i. e. in or out of the district. The first protects home interests, the second would encourage "reciprocity," We commend these plans to all district societies as worthy of consideration.

Artificial Impregnation.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In compliance with your request to describe the operation for artificial impregnation in the mare, I send you the following:

The operation consists essentially in the introduction artificially of a small quantity of seminal fluid of the horse into the womb of the mare to be impregnated. The mare must be in "season," and the seminal fluid must have its spermatazoa, its essential fructifying elements healthy and in a healthy state of active vitality. The active vitality of the spermatazoa can be preserved for quite a long period of time by maintaining artificially, without more than slight variation, the normal temperature of the semen, which is about 100 degrees Fahrenheit, and by preventing admixture with foreign substances, such as water, dust, etc.

The seminal fluid, to be used for impregnating artificially, may be obtained: First, by collecting the waste semen that passes from the horse when he withdraws from a mare that has stood to his cover, this being ordinarily lost upon the ground; second, by collecting what comes from the mare at the time the horse withdraws himself; third, by collecting what comes subsequently from the mare as the result of straining or expulsion of parts of her womb, after she has stood for service; fourth, by withdrawing seminal fluid from the womb of the mare, by use of a syringe, either immediately after she has been given natural service to a horse or within a few hours or a few days subsequent to service, the active vitality of the spermatozoa and their fecundating power being maintained within the cavity of the womb for a long period of time, eight to ten days, provided the mucous membrane of the womb is in a healthy condition. The first and the last sources above mentioned are to be preferred; the first for the reason that the seminal fluid is obtained unmixed with any foreign material, and the last because it is obtained with the addition of only a very slight quantity of mucous from the cavity of the womb. What flows from the mare subsequent to actual service is not to be preferred, for the reason that it is liable to be mixed with urine and that it is also more or less mixed with the mucous secretion of the vagina, this mucous being acid in reaction, and acids having the effect of lessening the activity of the spermatozoa. The activity and presence or absence of spermatazoa in the semen collected, can be readily determined by use of the microscope.

The mares to be experimented upon being hobbled, the stallion is permitted to give natural service to some other mare. The semen of this service being collected from the different sources mentioned in the foregoing, is received in the warm vessels before it has had time to cool, and it is quickly placed in an oven of the temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit. With a warm syringe, capable of containing half a teaspoon or more, some of the semen is drawn from one of the vessels in the oven, and is quickly introduced into the womb of one of the mares to be impregnated. Then more semen is introduced into the womb of another mare, and so on until all of the mares to be impregnated artificially have been operated upon. The womb of the mare may be reached for insertion of the semen by opening the vagina (the external portion of the genital passage) with a Sims speculum of the proper size for a mare, the syringe being sufficiently elongated by insertion of a flexible silk catheter over its nozzle, or it may be reached by inserting the hand and forearm into the vagina for the purpose of inserting through the neck of the womb and into its cavity the catheter attached to the nozzle of the syringe. All instruments used should be perfectly clean.

The quantity of semen necessary for impregnation is certainly very small, a single drop of the semen containing a very large number of spermatazoa, and only one spermatazoon being necessary for fecundation. However, considering the physical properties of the semen and of the mucous in the cavity of the womb, I infer that half a teaspoonful or more of semen introduced artificially is more liable to be followed by impregnation than in the introduction of a smaller quantity. The semen in the cavity of the womb is more or less mixed with mucous secreted by the lining surface of the womb and fallopian tubes, and this mucous, having less fluidity or greater specific gravity than the semen, would, when only a very small quantity of semen is used, have the effect of lessening the active and constant motion of the spermatozoa; and their movements being lessened, there would be less probability that they would come in contact with and fecundate the ovum, or female cell.

Physiologists have ascertained that spermatazoa in the womb, and fallopian tubes retain their active vitality for a period of eight or ten days. This being a fact, there is most probably no reason why, within this period of time after natural service, it is not practicable to withdraw semen from the mare's womb and use it successfully in impregnating other mares.

There are concerning artificial impregnation other matters of which I desired to make mention, but the length of this letter forbids. Yours respectfully,

C. E. FARNUM.

The people of Empire City, Oregon, are to be congratulated upon their good fortune in having such a fine young standard trotting stallion as Santa Rita 18,018 to improve their stock of light harness horses. Santa Rita has been purchased by Mr. G. W. Loggie, of that place for a long figure, and will have a horse that he need never be ashamed of. Santa Rita is by Buccaneer 2656 (sire of three in the list), by Iowa Chief; dam Nettie Lambert (dam of Sister, 2:18½, and Valensin, 2:23), by John Nelson 187, etc. It can be seen that Santa Rita is by a producing sire out of one of the best producing broodmares ever on the Valensin farm. Individually he is handsome as a picture, of good color, fine disposition, and although never trained for speed, there is no doubt of his ability to trot fast if given an opportunity

Mr. Loggie is quite a student of blood lines and is taking an active interest in building up the industry of horse-breeding. In selecting this stallion to cross on his stock of well-bred matrons he displays excellent judgment.

A secondary programme will be announced by this association later on for aged horses, trotters and pacers.

Important Corrections.

The secretary of the Sonoma and Marin Agricultural Society sent in a correction that he wished to have in the advertisement of that association's programme. The forms containing the advertisement having been printed, it becomes necessary to announce that the notice of the Stallion Produce Stakes should be worded exactly the same as it appeared in the P. C. T. H. B. Association's advertisement last week; and that there is also a transposition in that portion of the advertisement relating to Colt Stakes; the words, "three-year-olds," being where the words "two-year-olds," ought to be.

A COSTLY race track is now being constructed by Senator Fair on his ranch between Sonoma and Lakeville. It is the Senator's intention to shortly erect extensive training stables where will be quartered some of the finest horses in the State. The race track has already been surveyed, and the work of grading will commence immediately.

EQUINE MELANGE.

Dreams Dispelled by Facts and Figures—The Eastern Sales—Interesting Gossip,

Editor Breeder and Sportsman: — While looking over the list of 2:15 trotters not long since, I thought of the opinion held by a great many—formerly more generally held than it has been of late years—that stallions had not as much speed as either mares or geldings, and concluded to investigate the matter to some extent and see how the stallions stood in this respect. According to the records, I find no foundation for this idea.

To begin with, of the eighteen new-comers to the 2:15 list during 1891, I find that fourteen are stallions and four are mares. Not a gelding gained entrance to the list during the year.

Of these fourteen stallions there are four that made faster records than the records held by the fastest of the four mares.

There are just fifty-one horses, all told, that have trotted in 2:15 or better, and twenty-five of these are stallions, fourteen are mares and twelve are geldings. A trifle less than fifty per cent. of the whole number are stallions.

Of the thirty that have trotted in 2:14 or better, there are of mares and geldings together sixteen, and fourteen are stallions.

The whole number of trotters in 2:13 or better are nineteen, of which nine are stallions and ten are mares and geldings.

Stallions that have trotted in 2:12 or better are seven in number, while of 2:12 mares and geldings there are six—three of each—making thirteen in all in the 2:12 list.

There are ten animals altogether that have trotted in 2:11 or better, of which five are stallions, three are mares and two are geldings.

Of the seven horses that have trotted in 2:10 or better, three are stallions, three are mares and one is a gelding.

Four animals have trotted in 2:09 or better, one of which is a stallion and three of which are mares.

The 2:08 or better trotters we will learn of in 1892.

Three of the new-comers to the 2:15 list had no records at the beginning of the season, namely, Arion, 2:10¼; Pat Downing, 2:13, and Incas, 2:14½. Two of these, Arion and Incas, are California bred.

Of the remaining fifteen that entered ths 2:15 list during '91, Delmarch, Alcryon, Pennant, Vic H. and Mary Marshall had records better than 2:20 at the close of the season of 1890. The other ten had records between 2:20 and 2:30 to begin the season of 1891 with. The greatest reduction of a record was made by McKinney—from 2:27 to 2:12¼.

From the reports of the sales of trotting stock in various parts of the East, it would seem that Lexington, Ky., is the place and Woodard & Shanklin the firm to sell your trotting stock. The prices received for the stock at Woodard & Shanklin's sale were "far and away" ahead of the prices received elsewhere with the possible exception of those received for sons and daughters of Electioneer at Kellogg's sale in New York. And then the average Electioneers brought more in Lexington than they did in New York.

That Monroe Salisbury should sell Margaret S. and her dam, May Day, has been quite a surprise to more than one of our horsemen. That they should not bring more money—especially the former—is a still greater surprise to some. Why Margaret S. should bring but $10,230, while the mare, Mary Marshall, sold for $12,850, is difficult to understand. Margaret S. has a record a quarter second better than Mary Marshall, has proven herself a game and consistent race mare, and when we compare the breeding of the two we find it is quite unfavorable to Mary Marshall. It is probable that the difference in price is owing partly to the fact that Mary Marshall is in foal to Allerton. Again it is quite likely that the right crowd of bidders were not at the sale on the day Mr. Salisbury's stock was sold.

One of our Eastern horse papers in, speaking of the recent purchases made by Miller & Sibley from the Palo Alto stock farm, says: "Miller & Sibley have about cornered the Electioneer—Beautiful Bells family. It is rather surprising that Senator Stanford should sell all the sons of his greatest mare, the daughter of The Moor, etc." It is evident that the proprietor of Palo Alto considers the "Electioneer—Beautiful Bells family" far better material for a sale than to help a stock farm on toward producing the two-minute trotter. Descendants of The Moor, although many of them get into the 2:30 list, do not, as a family, seem to possess extreme speed. Sultan, the leading one of The Moor family, has produced three trotters in the 2:20 list, namely: Stamboul, Ruby and Lucy R.; and it looks very much—"to a man up a tree"—as though they owed their superiority to that daughter of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, Fleetwing.

Fleetwing is the dam of Stamboul 2:11 and Ruby 2:19¾; and her daughter, Lady Mackay, produced Lucy R., 2:18½.

According to the law of precedent Stamboul should be far superior to his sire, Sultan, as a producer of speed, as he is superior to him as a trotter; but as yet, although he is ten years old, he has produced but five (possibly six) 2:30 trotters. And most of these are literally 2:30 trotters, as the fastest of his get, Redondo, has a record of 2:28½, the next a record of 2:29½ and the others are in the exact 2:30 notch.

No; The Moor family and the Sultans "are not in it" to the extent that they were a few years ago.

The February number of the Fresno Turf—the first number since the change in proprietorship—is at hand. I see that it can be relied upon for nothing if not for accuracy (?), especially in the matter of records of the trotters of which it has occasion to speak.

Thus, it gives the record of Frou Frou, the champion yearling, as 2:24½; that of St. Julien as 2:12½; that of Nancy Hanks as 2:11¾; Jack's as 2:12½; Anteeo's as 2:16¾; Dexter's as 2:17½, etc. Some but one-quarter of a second out of the way, and from that to 3½ seconds—still all wrong. And in the article on Hambletonian Mambrino the records are placed after the name of the sire of the dam, or the dam of the sire or some dam—or other horse than the one intended. And Great Cæsar's Ghost! Did you ever "in all your born days" behold such sublime—such exquisite—"nerve," "gall" or what not, as exhibited in the announcement of the subscription price of said paper?

Four dollars per annum! And the paper a monthly! But 33 1-3 cents per copy—for seven pages of reading matter and a few advertisements.

Speaking of the 2:15 list! I wonder how many have given thought to the fact that the fastest of the new-comers to that select band—both trotting and pacing—was a green horse at the beginning of the season! That both—the trotter and the pacer—were bred and owned in California. Arion 2:10¾ leads those of the trotting fraternity, and Direct leads the pacers.

Not only was this the case in 1891, but also in 1890, when Homestake 2:14½ led the trotters, and Cricket 2:10 led the pacing brigade. I venture to predict that the records will show a similar state of affairs, when the smoke of battle has cleared away at the close of the 1892 campaign.

I wonder if it was noted, farther, that the leaders of 1890—I am speaking of the new-comers to the 2:15 list, remember—belonged to the same stable—that of the Pleasanton Stock Farm Co. controlled by that boss horseman of them all, Monroe Salisbury; and that the leading pacer, the "King of Harness Horses," of 1891, belonged also to the same stable.

It is even money that that stable will bring out one or both of the fastest ones for 1892 as well.

I understand that J. H. Neal, clerk of the Pleasanton Stock Farm Company, received a communication recently from C. W. Williams of Independence, Iowa, asking what they had in their stable this year.

Williams says: "Salisbury came back here in 1890 with a green mare. had her entered in all of the classes from the three-minute class down to the free-for-all, won nearly everything, and wound up the season with a pacing record of. 2:10. Last year he came again with a green horse, entered him in everything, as was done the year before, won his races and closed the season with the 'World's Pacing Record' 2:06. Now, this year, you have another 'green' one entered in everything from the slow classes down. What have you found now? I should really like to know what Mr. Salisbury intends to spring on us this time."

A new register has become necessary, and has been established under the auspices of the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders, styled the "National Trotting Stud-Book." I have read their rules for admission to standard rank very carefully, and consider them very good with one exception. That exception is rule sixth of the "Standard Governing Admission to the Stud-Book" and rule fourth of the "Rules Governing Admission to Advanced Standard."

These are two separate rules, to be sure, but an objection to one is an objection to both of them.

The first rule spoken of reads: "Any animal whose sire and dam are standard;" the second one reads: "Any animal whose sire and dam are recorded in the advanced standard department." In my opinion these rules should be eliminated entirely. Now, when I say this, I am aware that my opinion will have much weight in this matter, as much weight as that of any other person who is an unknown quantity; no more, no less. Could I have my way, I would have no such thing as "standard-bred." No. Let us have no more of this standard business by inheritance.

The old register is filled with culls—nonentities—through that channel of admission. In order to gain admission to standard rank let an animal either perform or produce. The The Stud-Book will be large enough even then.

The efforts of the Breeder in exposing frauds and impostors of various kinds is to be highly commended.

That in your issue of the 13th of February, in regard to "The thoroughbred trotting stallion, Ned Gifford," is good, and you did just right in calling attention to such an outlandish advertisement. Still I can't help thinking that there is something of a mistake in that. I have known W. M. Gifford, the owner of said horse—though not intimately—for a number of years, and I know that he is no fool. I can hardly think that he knew what the advertisement was to be. No one but a fool—one surely without horse sense—would make such a claim. The horse, Ned Gifford, was sired by Director, 2:17, the sire of Direct, 2:06, etc.

Semi-Occasionally.

David D. Withers' Will.

The will of David Dunham Withers, the turfman, which was made many years ago, and has since lain undisturbed in the office of Shipman, Larocque & Choate, by whom it was drawn, was opened yesterday for a private reading. There are no public bequests of any kind in the will, it was learned last week from one of the men present at the reading. The whole estate is divided among the members of Mr. Withers' family and his near relatives. Judge A. C. Munson, Mr. Withers' lifelong friend, is appointed the sole executor.

There are no specific sums mentioned, nor is there anything to give indication as to the value of the estate as a whole. The property is divided up into a number of parcels and distributed among the relatives in that way. The greater part is said to be in the hands of trustees for the use of Mr. Withers' sisters during their lifetime. On their death most of it falls to the nephews.

Neither Mr. Larocque, who was Mr. Withers' counsel, nor Judge Munson, the executor, professes to have an approximate idea of the value of the estate. According to the estimates of business acquaintances of Mr. Withers, it may be placed at about $4,000,000. At least $1,000,000 is said to have been invested by Mr. Withers in turf interests, and large plantations in Louisiana and Mississippi are said to be worth $500,000 more. In addition to these Mr. Withers is said to have had a large interest in the Bank of the State of New York, of which he was a director, besides the stocks, bonds and securities which he owned in many other corporations in this city.

Mr. Withers' closest relatives, among whom the greater part of his property will be divided, are his three sisters, Mrs. Emery Ludlow, Mrs. Virginia M. Payne, and the Countess de Rancourt, all of whom reside in New York; his brother, Reuben Withers, who is an invalid, now living in Paris, and his nephews, Robert Center and Alfred Withers, the son of Alfred D. Withers, who died a short time ago. Mr. Withers' other sister, Mrs. Euphanie D. Clason, and his nephew, Augustus Withers, have both died within the last two months.

The will will be offered for probate on Tuesday.—New York Sun.

Next Wednesday's Great Auction Sale.

Every horseman in the State, who can possibly attend should be present at the auction sale next Wednesday. The colts and fillies by Soudan, Eros, Antevolo, Fayette King, Corrector, by Director, Ulster Wilkes, Fresno and Directoire are all worthy of being trained for speed, while G. Valensin, to make the sale more interesting, offers seven of his well-bred mares that are heavy in foal to Sidney, a sire that will hereafter be kept as a private stallion. This may be the last opportunity horsemen will have to get bargains.

John Nelson's Breeding.

"The turf editor of the Newark Call seems to have implicit confidence in the authenticity of such trotting pedigrees as are vouched for by the late Mr. Wallace," says "Hannibal." And again: "According to Mr. Wallace, the great California stallion, John Nelson 187, was not a son of imported Trustee. What says Colonel Edwards? Wallace furthermore maintains that the dam of John Nelson 187 was a daughter of old Abdallah.

John H. Wallace has done more for the breeding interests of this country than any other man that ever lived. To him more than to any other man living or dead are trotting horse breeders indebted. This is asserted without the slightest fear of successful contradiction. Had he received three times the amount he did for his "Register" it would not have been one penny too much, although money is no recompense for a work of that character. That the "Wallace Register" is infallible no one claims, not even Wallace himself. That such a work could be compiled without errors creeping in is an impossibility. The compilers of the "Encyclopedia Britannica" offered a reward for every error discovered in the corrected edition of that work, and had to pay it several times. The various and peculiar channels through which information concerning pedigrees comes precludes absolute accuracy. The immensity of the task in collating the pedigrees of noteworthy animals for half a century is appalling to contemplate. To this great work Mr. Wallace lent all his energies and expended upon it the vigor of his best years. Considering that many of these pedigrees were enveloped in a haze, and that he had to grope his way back through the mists of long-gone years after them, it is remarkable that so few errors occur. It is the greatest work of the kind extant. One thing is certain, whatever is published in the "Wallace Register" is the best authenticated information that could be obtained. Wallace would accept nothing that did not appeal to his reason as being correct. There has been instances where he was deceived. That was not his fault. Unscrupulous men supplied pedigrees under the formula laid down by him; that they would lie did not enter into his calculation. The fact remains that through the "Register" the value of the trotting horse has been increased a thousand fold. That a trotting stallion can be sold for $125,000 is due to the "Wallace Register." No man of any age has written more ably upon any subject—religion, philosophy, science, political economy, or any other of the abstruse questions of the day—than has John H. Wallace on the breeding and development of the trotting horse. This is not the language of extravagance. It is an emphatic declaration that must be accepted by all who are acquainted with his writings. Pugnacious in argument, stubborn in adhering to his opinions, and frequently abusive to those who have an honest difference, he is, nevertheless, the ablest exponent of breeding theories in America.

The writer has faith in the "Register" as he has faith in the work of one who builds for himself a structure, laying the foundation, selecting the material and placing the stones with his own hand. He has faith in the "Register" because of the sterling honesty of the compiler, and the inflexible purpose, so frequently evinced, to take nothing for granted in establishing pedigrees.

The writer came in contact with him concerning the pedigree of John Nelson. Mr. Wallace gives the pedigree of John Nelson as follows: "By a son of imported Trustee, dam Redmond mare, by Abdallah 1." This is exceedingly doubtful. The history, in brief, of John Nelson, given by the man who owned him at four years old, and who kept him for service, and was therefore in a position to know his breeding, is as follows: "John Nelson, ch s, foaled in 1851, by imported Trustee, dam a Morgan mare bred in Vermont; bred by Thomas Evans, of New Brunswick, N. J.; passed through the hands of Alfred A. and Halsey Snyder, of Newark, N. J., to Horace F. Jones, of New York, and subsequently went to California." The writer is satisfied that the above is a correct history of John Nelson, so far as is known. It was obtained from Alfred A. Snyder, now living at Caldwell, this State, who owned the horse. Mr. Snyder says that when the pedigree of John Nelson was first published, years ago, and when the matter was comparatively fresh in his mind, he wrote Colonel Bruce that the dam of John Nelson was not by Abdallah 1. Mr. Wallace thinks that all that is known of the breeding of John Nelson is as he gives it. It is simply a question of who has obtained the best information on the subject. Referring to the grandam of Monbars, Mr. Wallace undoubtedly has given her breeding as he obtained it from the only man who knows anything about it.

The propensity of Mr. Wallace to reach for his tomahawk and forthwith lay open the cranium of those who presume to differ with him, and who are persistent in urging contrarywise opinions, is to be deprecated, a'beit one must admire the skill and facility with which the victim is dispatched. Mr. Wallace is never more lucid, never more convincing, never more incisive, never more reasonable than when exploding the humbug theory in breeding, that the best way to secure a desired trait is to breed into a family that does not possess it.

The Roy Wilkes Race at Lexington.

A celebrated turf law suit will be tried before Judge Brentano to-day, says the Chicago Tribune. It grows out of a pecular race paced at Lexington, Ky., October 16, 1889, which was won after five heats by the Chicago pacing stallion, Roy Wilkes, 2:08½, owned by L. A. Davies, of this city. The Lexington officials changed drivers behind Roy Wilkes after he had lost two heats, putting Ed Geers up in place of George Robens, of Grand Rapids, Mich., ruled off for fraud in connection with the crooked Nelson-Alcryon race, at Boston three weeks before the Lexington race, Geers then won the race in three straight heats. After Roy Wilkes had won, the Lexington officials, Major P. P. Johnston, President of the National Trotting Association, presiding in the stand, fined Davies $1,000 and Robens $500 for their work in the race, and ordered them to stand expelled until the fines were paid. Davies and Robens did not pay the fines. The $500 won by Roy Wilkes for Davies in the Lexington race was applied towards his $1,000 fine. He sought its remittance through the National Trotting Association without success, the Lexington Association being indorsed, and then sued the Lexington Trotting-Horse Breeders' Association for $650, which includes some driving fees and the $500 won by Roy Wilkes. Able counsel have been engaged on both sides. Secretary Ed A. Tipton, of the Lexington Association, is here to manage the case against Davies, who is still expelled with his fast horse from all national tracks.

MAMBRINO PATCHEN 58.

One of the Greatest of All Brood-mare Sires.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In the history of the trotting horse, as in that of the thoroughbred, we find certain horses and families of horses that exhibit their prepotency through one line only.

Of the thoroughbreds imp. Glencoe is a noted example. All the great qualities which he possessed were transmitted almost exclusively to and through his daughters, Vandal, his greatest son, is the only noted exception. He was a race horse and he sired some fairly good track performers. His son, Virgil, was also a prepotent sire. Glencoe's daughters were consistent performers and winners, and as producers of racers they had no superiors in this country. All race-goers of 25 years ago will call to mind the illustrious trio, composed of Norfolk, Asteroid and Kentucky, sons of the "old blind hero of Woodburn," from three daughters of Glencoe. They were foaled the same year, and as three-year-olds were simply unbeatable. It was through his daughters in this country that Glencoe's name will live, and it was through his daughter, Pocahontas, the greatest broodmare of the English Stud Book, that his name and fame will be perpetuated in England.

There are many other examples among the thoroughbreds less striking, perhaps, but which serve as illustrations.

Hambletonian 10, while an all-round sire, shows his prepotency much more markedly through his sons than through his daughters, and it is through the male line that he is breeding principally.

American Star, the contemporary of Hambletonian 10, was a female line sire. It was his daughters, mated with Hambletonian, which first gave the latter his great name, and it was that union which has given us some of the best racing families among trotters.

Mambrino Patchen 58, the son of Mambrino Chief 11 and the Rhodes mare, by Gano, son of American Eclipse, is another of the great broodmare sires, equal in many respects to American Star. His daughters did for George Wilkes what the daughters of American Star did for Hambletonian.

Mambrino Patchen was foaled in 1862, in the midst of the great Civil War, and when he was old enough to be put in the stud Kentucky was suffering from the devastating and destroying effects of that great struggle which had made camping grounds and battle fields of her finest farms. Five years of his life were almost lost from those conditions. In addition to this he was half thoroughbred, and many breeders were afraid of his blood. For years his patronage was not from those who had the best mares, but in spite of this fact he sired eighteen 2:30 performers.

His sons, thirty-six in number, have sired fifteen in the 2:20 list and eighty-five in the 2:30 list. More than forty of his daughters have produced seventeen in the 2:20 list and sixty-four in the 2:30 list.

The sons of his daughters have sired thirty-two that have beaten 2:20 and 141 that are in the 2:30 list. The daughters of his sons have fifteen that have beaten 2:20, and fifty-six in the 2:30 list.

His daughters' daughters have three below 2:20 and nineteen below 2:30. Of other descendants there are five in the 2:20 list and fifty-one in the 2:30 list. Eighteen-ninety-one gave the greatest proof of the prepotency of this great broodmare sire. His daughters gained twenty-one in the list during the year. The sons of his daughters have added fifty-two to the list during that time.

Two sons of Alma Mater, a daughter of Mambrino Patchen, have added twenty one to the list the past season. In all, Mambrino Patchen has eighty-three descendants in the 2:20 list and 447 in the 2:30 list. It is not only in these numbers that he is pre-eminent, but also in the gameness, resolution and training-on capacity of his descendants. Wherever this blood crosses, there you will see a race horse and a campaigner.

Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, three-year-old, 2:12; McKinney, 2:12½, Alix, three-year-old, 2:16¼, and the produce of Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, are proof of this.

The great prepotency of Mambrino Patchen's blood is shown in the case of Lady Thorne, his full sister, who was raced till past middle life, and still she has five descendants in the 2:20 list, twelve with records of 2:25 or better and thirty-two with records below 2:30.

No other sire of Mambrino Patchen's time has shown anything like his prepotency in the female line. This blood should be in great demand by our breeders, but it does not seem to be very largely sought after. Guy Wilkes is a grandson, and has been well patronized with great results. The Grand Moor is also a grandson, being by The Moor, a broodmare sire, out of Vashti, a producing daughter of Mambrino Patchen, thus combining the blood of two great broodmare sires. He is a grand individual, and has great natural speed. He is owned by Colonel Harry I. Thornton, and stands at figures that place him within reach of breeders of moderate means. By and by, when too late to get his blood, it will be discovered that his daughters are beyond price, like the daughters of Mambrino Boy, the sire of the dams of Allerton and Axtell.

Mambrino Chief Jr., owned by Mr. Smith of Vallejo, is out of a daughter of Mambrino Patchen and he is also a grandson of Clark Chief, another first-rate brood mare sire. He is a first-class individual, and a sire of speed, by the sire of Washington 2:20, at four years, and a race horse. He stands at $40, and his daughters will be worth their weight in gold. I believe there is a son of Alcantara in Sutter County, but I know nothing about him, only that whatever light he has is kept under the proverbial bushel. McKinney is another grandson, and in Durfee's hands will undoubtedly be well patronized. This Mambrino Patchen blood in a brood mare, which has been judiciously bred, will be a mint of money to the owner.

The tables of famous sires show that not only was Mambrino Patchen prepotent, and that it is blood which breeds on, but that a larger percentage of his descendants are in the 2:20 list than is shown of any other sire of his time. It is good blood to cure the "tired" feeling which troubles many trotting families at the last end of the 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th heats of a race.

The Star and Mambrino Patchen blood is noted for helping that tired feeling.

Campaign, a son of Electioneer, owned in Stockton, is out of a granddaughter of Mambrino Patchen. So far removed it would naturally be thought that that the Mambrino Patchen would have little influence upon Campaign's produce, but so stout and controlling is that blood that the form, finish and style of the great brood mare sire is plainly and uniformly to be seen.

Instead of adding Clay blood to Clay blood, and soft cross to soft cross, breeders had better get an outcross to Star or Mambrino Patchen. By such breeding they will help the "tired feeling" of their trotters and they will have a better feeling themselves at the end of the campaign.

Napa Stock Farm Coming to the Front.

Napa Stock Farm, the property of Professor E. P. Heald, and under the able management of H. H. Grisby, is fast coming into prominence as a breeding place for the trotter. This farm is in possession of some of the best broodmares in the State, and there is always a demand for their offspring. This picturesque place has been very unfortunate of late in having a number of its gilt-edged ones crippled, etc., but notwithstanding these accidents, it is coming to the front at a Sunol gait. Napa Stock Farm is the Palo Alto of Napa county. Its large barns and numerous paddocks only need to be seen to be appreciated. Its latest addition is in the royally-bred stallion, Pilot Prince, of which Napa county should well feel proud. Pilot Prince has a two-year-old record of 2:31¾, made in a race over the Napa track two years ago. Two-year-olds with a record of 2:31¾ are few and far between in the United States. Pilot made his record on an "off" day, and, further than that he was driven by an entire stranger to him. As a two-year-old he could trot eighths and quarters as fast as any horse in the country at the same age. A word as to his pedigree: Pilot Prince is by Dexter Prince 11,363, the sire of Chloe, 2:24; Lottery Ticket, at three years old, 2:25; Del Paso, 2:24; Crown Prince, 2:24; Dexter Princess, 2:24¼; Maggie, 2:27½; Princess Alice (p), 2:16½, and Pilot Prince, two-year-old record, 2:31¾.

Dexter Prince is by Kentucky Prince 2,470, the sire of Guy, 2:10¾; Spofford, 2:18¾; Company, 2:19¾; Bayonne Prince, 2:21¼; Fred Folger, 2:20½, and fifteen others in the thirty list. Here is the blue blood for you.

Pilot's first dam is Emma Nutwood, by Nutwood; second dam by McCracken's Black Hawk; third dam by Gen. Taylor; fourth dam by Williamson's Belmont. Pilot Prince has faster blood lines on both sides than any other horse in the world. In his yearling form he was driven eighths in 17 seconds, a 2:16 gait. Pilot Prince is a beautiful bay, stands 15½ hands high, and weighs about 1,100 pounds. He will be bred to some of the select mares on the farm and also to a limited number of outside mares.

Mountain King is the second stallion, a magnificent bay in color, and a prettier horse was never done up in horseflesh. King, like his name, is a lofty fellow, 16 hands high, and for conformation, style and carriage is second to none. King is by Whippleton, the sire of Lily Stanley, 2:17¾, Homestake, 2:16½, etc. His dam is Nono Y., 2:25; full sister to Sister, 2:19; Perrihelion, 2:24½; Huntress, 2:28. King's dam has shown trials in 2:20. As yet it is undecided as to what will be done with King, but it is more than likely that he will make the season at Napa and vicinity.

The numerous paddocks are well filled with weanlings, which are very highly bred. Owing to our limited space we are unable to speak of them on this occasion.—Napa Journal.

Catalogues Received.

The Abdallah Park catalogue of W. H. Wilson, Cynthiana, Ky., is a very handsome affair printed in brown ink. There are excellent cuts of the great stallions Sultan (sire of Stamboul, 2:11) and Simmons (sire of Simmocolon, 2:19). Among the stallions catalogued are Brignoli Wilkes, 2:24½ (by George Wilkes, dam Patsey, by Brignoli 77); San Gabriel, 2:29¾ (own brother to Alcazar, 2:20½), by Sultan, dam Minnehaha, by Stevens' Bald Chief; George Simmons, 2:28 (by Simmons, dam Crip, by Mambrino Time; Ottoman, 2:46 at two years (by Sultan, dam Montana Maid, by George Wilkes, 2:22); Noonday, by Wedgewood, 2:19, dam Noontide, by Harold; Arnold, by Abdallah 164, dam Sally Neal, by Mambrino Chief 11 and Kaffir, 2:30, by Alcazar, 2:20½, dam Flower Girl, by Arthurton 365. The mares are equally gilt-edged, among the number being Lady de Jarnette. 2:28 (the greatest of show ring winners); Flower Girl, by Arthurton (formerly owned by William Corbitt); Mambrino Kate, 2:24, by Mambrino Patchen; Ollie Wilkes, 2:23¾; Ruby. by Winthrop, dam Molly Drew, 2:27; Smuggler's Daughter, 2:24¾; Choice, sister in blood to Phallas, 2:13¾; Hettie Case and Ednal Sprague, sister in blood to McKinney, 2:12½; Berkshire Belle, by Alcyone, 2:27, dam Belle Brasfield, 2:20; Rosa Sprague, dam of McKinney, 2:12½, and Colon, dam of Simmocolon, 2:19. Altogether it is a grand collection, and doubtless there will be a number of turf wonders by the Abdallah Park stallions from such grandly-bred queens of the harem.

We are in receipt of the Tuscarora Stock Farm catalogue (C. M. de Garmendia, Frederick county, Maryland). Tuscarora Sea King 11,775 (by Lord Russell, dam Fairy Belle by Belmont 64) is the premier stallion. Besides this horse the following stallions are on the place: Monocacy 9893, by King Wilkes, dam Vivandiere, by Volunteer 55; Tuscarora, by Sea King, dam Duenna, by Woodford Mambrino, 2:21½, and Kioto, 2:25, by Marmion Golddust 1894, dam Mischief, by Volunteer 55. The broodmares are by Artillery, 2:21½; Belvidere 1218, King Rene, Woodford Mambrino, Aberdeen, Voltaire, Idol Gift, Commodore Belmont, Idol, Cuyler, Tattler Jr., Manxman 5622, Homer, Robert McGregor and Jupiter Abdallah, and most of them are young. The catalogue is well-printed and compiled in first-class shape, and the owner of the Tuscarora Stock Farm evidently knows what he is about.

Can You Guess the Record For 1892?

Last year's yearling record was: Frou-Frou, 2:25½; two-year-old—Arion, 2:10¾; three-year-old—Faustino, 2:14¾; four-year-old—McKinney, 2:12½. Adding these records and dividing by four, we get 2:15 13-16 as the average record for these four horses. The question is, What will be the average time made by horses of the same age during 1892?

As an inducement to horsemen to exercise their guessing abilities, the Two-Thirty Horse Remedy Co., of Rutland, Vt., offer $150 in gold as a prize to the person who first guesses the nearest to the average time made during this year.

This shows commendable enterprise in the company and will do considerably to create an interest in horse matters. Further details can be learned by perusing their advertisement in another column.

Senator Stanford on the Trotter.

NEW YORK, February 21.—"I have been frequently asked of late if I did not think that as far as high prices are concerned, the bottom was beginning to drop out of the business of breeding the trotting horse," said Senator Stanford last evening, when discussing the future of the breeding interests of the country. "To speak frankly, I do not think it is. While it is true that low prices prevailed at the recent sale in New York of my stock, as well as those of other California breeders, there are certain reasons why bids didn't average higher. I am not at all satisfied with the average prices received for my stock. I do not think there was a single colt of mine sold at the recent sale that could not have shown a forty gait if he had been developed. I have been taught a valuable lesson. I shall develop the colts in my next consignment. Every colt in the lot will have demonstrated that he possesses speed before he leaves the paddock of Palo Alto."

"Did not the fact that the major portion of the consignment were from untried sires also have something to do with the low prices that prevailed?"

Unquestionably so, but I nevertheless believe that every colt sold is capable, in proper hands, of getting a low mark, and I am firmly of the belief that every purchaser got a bargain. However, be it as it may, I shall be able in the future to demonstrate that my young horses can sire speed, and that the get of Electioneer will breed on and on. As soon as I saw how the tide was running I made up my mind that there was one colt by Azmoor, dam by the thoroughbred Don Victor, that shouldn't be sacrificed, and so I withdrew him and presented him to a friend rather than see him go for a low price, Then, too, outside of a very small circle of Eastern breeders, there is much prejudice east of the Rockies against what is classed as "running-bred foolishness in the trotter," and this, notwithstanding the fact that there does not exist to-day a trotting horse that has attained a low record that does not possess more or less of what is denominated as "running foolishness."

"Life is too short and time too precious to waste either in discussing the breeding problem with the major portion of these people. They are very much like the old Scotch woman who, in a theological argument with a clergyman of a different denomination, was told, "Madam, you cannot be convinced." "Can't be convinced?" she exclaimed. "Can't be convinced? I can be convinced, but I'd like to see the man that can convince me."

"Is it your intention to go into the breeding of the Orloff horse?"

"Not extensively. When I return to California next summer I shall select some Electioneer mares and ship them to St. Petersburg. Later on I shall follow them and select some Orloff stallions from the Czar's stables. I shall also select some mares of the same breed to mate with the stallions, in order to preserve the type. Were I to mate Orloff stallions with the Electioneer mares I would have neither one nor the other, for the produce would be a mongrel breed, in which the high type of each in a pure state would be destroyed. I have an idea that the Orloff would in time become a very popular coach horse for rich people in our cities. They are not, however, as fast as the American trotter, but I have seen an Orloff trot a mile in 2:30 hitched to a heavy cart with a small wheel, which, I think, is pretty good evidence that they possess more than ordinary speed. The colors that predominate in the breed are gray, black and bay. If my judgment is not at fault the future fame of Palo Alto will not suffer from the tremendous drafts that have from time to time been made upon it by the breeders of the country."

"What is there in the Hinda Rose controversy?"

"Nothing whatever. It is between eleven and twelve years ago that I purchased Hinda Rose and her dam. It was known to the world that she was in my possession. Why does Goose come at this, the eleventh hour, and claim her? It is true that no bill of sale passed between us, but Goose never questioned the transfer until now, and is possibly moved thereto at this time from the fact that he thinks I will settle with him rather than suffer litigation. But I shall never pay him a cent."

The Senator said that with his Palo Alto stock he expected soon to lower the stallion record to 2:06, and have fillies that ought to trot a mile close to Sunol's 2:08¼.

Nebraska's Futurity Stake.

The Nebraska Futurity Stake, guaranteed $20,000, is one of the coming events. Nominations are coming in fast from such States as Kentucky, New York, Maine, Massachusetts, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Tennessee, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Texas and California. Mr. Salisbury and Mr. McFadyen nominating from the last-named State. Breeders are aware of the fact that the earning capacity of the trotter must be increased, and they know there is no better opportunity than to nominate in this rich stake at a very small entrance fee. Breeders and horsemen will see at a glance that this is the best stake, with the most liberal terms, ever offered. The fact of a stallion being nominated in this stake will increase his patronage and encourage the development of his get; also shows the owner of a stallion, has faith in the ability of his horse to produce speed.

The readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN can read the conditions of this stake in the running advertisement in the paper. We ask your careful consideration of the many inducements offered: Can you, as breeders, allow such an opportunity to pass and not be "in it" with your neighbor breeder, who has nominated stallions? All foals of 1893, sired by nominated stallions, are eligible.

MR. GEO. H. FAIRBROTHER, who has so long been at the head of the interior land department of the Carnall-Hopkins Co., went East last week. It is the intention of Mr. Fairbrother to urge the claims California has on the attention of our Eastern horsemen as a breeding and training center. No gentleman in California has had a better opportunity of being able to judge intelligently of the adaptability of our soil and climate. He has placed some of our representative horsemen on their present holdings, and has a more varied knowledge of the wondrous advantages of California, north and south, than most any other man on the Coast.

THE California State Veterinary Medical Association will hold its meeting at the Baldwin Hotel next Wednesday evening. This organization is growing in numbers and strength: every fair-minded breeder is becoming more and more interested in the aims and objects for which these gentlemen have become so united.

Conducted by Wm. F. Egan, M. R. C. V. S., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by two dollars, and addressed to Wm. F. Egan, M. R. C. V. S., Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco.

L. R., San Francisco.—What is a splint and what causes it? Answer.—An exostosis, or bony outgrowth, caused generally by concussion.

P. C. R., San Francisco.—What is a safe purgative for a horse? Answer.—Linseed oil, varying in dose according to the horse, from a pint to a quart, or even more for a very large, strong-constituted horse.

C. R., Sacramento.—Please let me know through your valuable paper the best and safest method for castrating colts. Answer We prefer castrating with the ecrasure, though some of the other methods are also comparatively safe.

X., Santa Clara.—How would you advise me to treat a horse that is just getting a bone spavin. It has only lamed him for about a week or ten days. Answer—Get a good practical veterinary surgeon to fire and blister it, and give him six or eight weeks' rest.

M. H. N., Bay Pine, Cal.—What would be the necessary steps to take with a colt with distemper, he being partly or nearly well, but still retains a lump about the size of an egg in the throat. Answer—Feed him on soft food, poultice the throat, steam the head with hot bran in a sack. Give a dram of chlorate of potash three times a day in warm mashes. Keep him in a well-ventilated box stall if possible.

P. L., Sacramento.—I have a mare about eight years old that has a ringbone on the off fore foot. I got her fired and blistered twice in the last year, but she is still as lame as ever. Kindly let me know through your next issue what treatment is best to adopt. Answer. Neurotomy is about the only treatment that will prove effectual. This operation should be performed by a good, practical veterinary surgeon.

Subscriber, Berkeley.—I have a well-bred colt about eight months old that has got a splint near the knee of the right front leg. It does not appear to lame him and is rather soft yet, but I am afraid that it will get hard and sore later on. Please say through your valuable paper what treatment you would recommend. Answer. Paint that part daily with tincture of iodine until a scab forms, then discontinue its use for a week or so, or until the scab is all removed by applying vaseline to the part, when you may apply it as before, and proceed in the same way until the splint is removed.

C. K., San Mateo.—I have a horse that is troubled with corns for the last six or eight months, and nothing appears to do him good. What would you recommend? Answer. Get the shoes removed and see if there be any pus (matter) formed there. If so, make a free opening for it to escape and poultice it for a few days. When the matter has all disappeared, apply tar and oakum to the part, and when shoeing him use a bar shoe, taking the pressure off the heels, and apply tar and oakum as before, having a leather sole to keep it in place. The same treatment may be used even though there be no pus present.

W. H. B., San Francisco.—Kindly answer in your next issue the following: I have an English retriever, five years of age, who is troubled with worms. They are a grayish white in color about half to three quarters of an inch in length. The colt sometimes passes a few with her stool. The worms seem to keep drawing there heads in and out, when they are on the ground and move in that manner. Your kindly assistance in helping me rid my dog of this annoyance will be greatly appreciated. Answer—Give her a purgative such as castor oil, and some five or six hours afterwards give her five grains of Santonine on an empty stomach. Another purgative several hours after that will carry off the worms.

A. C. K., Covina.—Please let me know the best treatment for a horse that was cut above the hoof with barb wire and does not heal satisfactory. It has been cut for four or five months and seemed to heal at first, then got raw and sore and is much enlarged. A new hoof has grown about an inch and more larger than the old hoof. No weight is on the foot and the shoulder is shrinking away. Answer Clean off the sore well and remove all scabs from the part. Then apply nitrate of silver to the raw surface once every second day for two or three applications. Afterwards clean the sore daily and apply an ointment made of one part of Iodoform to four of vaseline.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Answers for this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Postively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

J. F., City.—How many times did Daisy D. win the Premium (or Daisy D.) stakes at Sacramento? Answer—Three times—in 1887, 1888 and 1889.

F. W., Stockton.—Please inform me through your paper if a horse sired by Richards' Elector, dam by Priam 1798, is standard-bred and eligible to registration. Answer—A horse bred this way is not; a mare is, under the rules.

Will some one please be kind enough to give us the breeding of Hyland (or Lady Hyland), who it is claimed made a record of 2:32 at Bay District track a number of years ago? We are informed that she was once owned by Hugh Creighton, of San Francisco.

J. T., Los Angeles.—Please state in next issue of the Breeder and Sportsman whether or not such a filly, now two years old, by the name of Lilly Dale, dam Conchita, sire Bachelor, is entered on the stud book or not? Answer—We do not find the filly.

C. N., Stockton.—Can any of our readers inform us of the history and pedigree of a horse called Kappock, by Altoona, that is said to have trotted a trial mile in Salinas in 1888 in 2:28. He was entered in the San Luis Obispo fair for a race there, but did not start?

D. R. H., Markleville.—In Breeder and Sportsman of April 4th, 1891, page 336, is mentioned a scheme for incorporating the "Pleasanton Park Breeding, Training and Pasturage Company." Please inform me if this was carried out; and, if so, what is the present status of the company. Answer—The subject was discussed some, but nothing worth mentioning has been done thus far.

R. G. H., Tehachapi, Kern County, Cal.—1. Give me the breeding of Lady Crum, by Young Bellfounder. 2. Has Young Bellfounder a record, and is he registered? How many 2:30 performers has Alexander 490. Answer—1. By Brown's Bellfounder, dam untraced. 2. Young Bellfounder (another horse altogether made a record at Milwaukee, Wis., of 2:54 in 1858. 3. Alexander 490 sired four in the list—Tommy Dodd, 2:24; Reliance, 2:22½; Alexander Button; 2:25½; Nelly Patchen, 2:27¼.

Reader, Ukiah.—Please inform us what constitutes a thoroughbred horse, how he is produced, and if it is proper to apply the name to any other animal? Also please tell me who has for sale steel engravings or lithographs of noted horses and stallions? Answer. Five uncontaminated crosses of thorough blood; that is, five dams, and five sires strictly "running-bred," with no blood of trotter or pacer closer than five generations away on either side of the house. The original "thoroughbred" came from a combination of Turkish, Arabian and Barb blood, which produced a grand type of race horse. It is not proper to term a trotter, pacer, coach or draft horse a "thoroughbred." They are spoken of as full-blooded and purely-bred. Sanborn, Vail & Co., this city, sell steel engravings and lithographs of noted horses.

P. & M., Marysville, Cal.—Give us the sire and dam of Constantine dark bay colt, foaled March 28, 1882, by Steinway, first dam Kitty, by Speculation (he by Rysdyk's Hambletonian), sold at Cook's administrator sale. Answer—Steinway is by Strathmore (no dam Abbess, by Albion, second dam by Marshal Ney, son of imported Emancipation, third dam by Bertrand, son of Sir Archy. Strathmore was by Hambletonian 10, dam Lady Waltermire, by North American (son of Sir Walter), second dam a son of Hambletonian 2. Speculation was by Hambletonian 10, dam Mattie Washington (dam of Whipple's Hambletonian), by Washington 332; second dam by Abdallah 1. Further on the dam's side, we cannot go at present, but if you will write to George Wiley, Oakwood Park Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County, Cal., he will in all likelihood give you the desired information about the breeding of Kitty.

T. B. C., City.—Can any of our readers give us any information of a horse called Fly-by-night, said to be by Dave Hill. What was his breeding? 2. Ethan Allen Jr., sired by Fly-by-night? These names appear in the pedigree of the handsome horse Trade Wind, that was foaled in 1875 in Sacramento.

Reader, Modesto.—1. How many sons of Woodford Mambrino have sired 2:30 performers? Give their names and their produce that are in the list. 2. How many has Woodford Mambrino in the list, or daughters of Woodford Mambrino that have produced 2:30 performers? 3. Please send number of Waterford, by Abbotsford, his registered number and record. Answer—1. Sixteen producing sons—Abbotsford, Adalbrino, Goodwood, Hannibal, Inca, Mambrino Dudley, Mambrino Russell, Oak Hill, Pancoast, Princeps, Parmenus, Sacramento, Vandergrift, Woodford Abdallah, Woodford Pilot and Vacher. They produced eighty-two list horses, consequently we can hardly find space to publish all their names. 2. Woodford Mambrino has produced twelve in the list to date. His producing daughters number eighteen, with twenty seven to their credit. Of the twenty seven six go the credit of sires from daughters of Woodford Mambrino. 3. Waterford's number is 10,165, and his record is 2:27.

T. B. M., Bakersfield.—Did Mollie McCarthy beat Mark L. a mile and a quarter at Oakland in 1878 after her return from the Ten Broeck race, or was it previous to that race? 2. What weights were carried by each horse and what was the time? Answer:

San Francisco, May 14, 1879.—Sweepstakes. One and one-quarter miles; 100 pounds on each.

E. J. Baldwin's Molly McCarthy, 6 years	1
H. Schwartz's Mark L., 4 years	2
T. Winters' Mattie Moore (Mattie Glenn), 4 years	3

Time, 2:08½.

The race between Molly McCarthy and Ten Broeck was run July 4, 1878.

J. S. B., Quincy, Cal.—Give the pedigree of Buccaneer with as complete a list of his kin and their performances as possible. Also give time made by Pacific at Marysville in a five-mile race against Bobby Burns, and Pacific's best mile record. His performances were along about 1870. Answer—Buccaneer 2656 was by Iowa Chief 528, dam Tinsley Maid, by Flaxtail 8132; second dam, Fanny Fern, by Irwin's Tuckahoe; third dam, by Leffler's Consul. Buccaneer sired Shamrock, 2:25 at two years; Bulwer, 2:26¼; Flight, 2:29, and the dams of Fleet, 2:24; Memo (trial at three years), 2:20¼; Frou-Frou, 2:25¼ at one year; Sid Fleet, 2:26¼ at two years, and two others. 2. Pacific's five-mile race at San Francisco on November 2, 1869, is the only race of the kind of which we have a record. It was made in 13:51. His best mile record was 2:44¾.

Don't

Keep on taking pills, powders or potions to act on the bowels every day, but take Simmons Liver Regular occasionally. It tones up the system, makes continual dosing unnecessary, and assists nature to act herself. L. M. Minton, M. D., Washington, Ark., says: "No other remedy within my knowledge can fill its place. I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid instead of weakening the digestive powers." W. J. Hannaford, Magnolia, N. C., writes: "We can speak cheerfully of the merits of the Regulator, but are not compelled to take it regularly, as our liver is all right now. Many of our friends also use and all speak in the highest terms of the efficacy of Simmons Liver Regulator.

DON MARVIN

Five-Year-Old Record 2:28.

DON MARVIN is a beautiful seal brown, foaled 1884; bred by Senator Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal; is 16 hands high and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by Fallis, 2:23 (sire of four in 2:30 list), he by Electioneer. Dam, CORA (dam of Don Marvin, 2:28, and Elected [trial] 2:26; by Don Victor, sire of the dams of five in the 2:30 list) by Belmont. Second dam, CLARABEL (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24½, and Rebecca, dam of four in 2:30 list, by Abdallah Star. Third dam, FAIRY (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:29¼, and Sweepstakes, sire of 22 in the 2:30 list, and three other producing sires and dams) by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Fourth dam, EMMA MILLS (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star.

DON MARVIN is a horse of great natural speed. His record was made with scarcely any preparation, after making a large season in the stud, and is no measure of his speed. His oldest colts (only five in number) are three years old this spring. One of them with very little work trotted quarters last fall in 36 seconds, and could have easily entered the 2:30 list in his two-year-old form had he been given an opportunity.

DON MARVIN will make the season of 1892 at $40, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—Four producing dams.

The Fast Trotting Stallion
SILAS SKINNER.

RECORD 2:17. STANDARD, 10,681,

Will make the season of 1891, commencing February 1st and ending July 1st, at De Turk's Breeding Stables on Donahue Street, opposite De Turk's Wine Cellars, Santa Rosa, Cal.

SILAS SKINKER, sired by Alcona Jr., 2:24; first dam Fontana (dam of Flora Belle, 2:21½) by Almont 33, sire of thirty-eight in the 2:30 list; second dam Fannie Williams, dam of Bay Chieftain, 2:28¼, by Alexander's Abdallah 15, sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14; Rosalind, 2:21½; Thorndale, 2:22½, etc.; third dam by Gaine's Denmark; fourth dam by Robert Bruce; fifth dam by Virginia Whip.

ALCONA JR. was sired by Alcona 730 (sire of Flora Belle, 2:21½; Clay Duke, 2:30; Prince Warwick, trial 2:18, etc.) by Almont 33. First dam Madonna by Cassius M. Clay Jr., sire of Durango, 2:23½ Harry Clay, 2:23½; Clay Davis, 2:26½; Cora, 2:30, etc.

The above is a condensed pedigree of Silas Skinner, but enough is given to show him to be as richly bred in the best trotting lines as any horse living, besides being a great individual with remarkable speed and staying qualities, which was shown by his performance on the California Circuit last season. In 1890 Silas Skinner started in six races, trotting in all twenty-three heats. Of these six races Skinner won four and was second in two, and closed the season of 1892 with a record of 2:19.

The performance of Silas Skinner during the season of 1891 has also been very meritorious, having started in seven races, three of which he won, being second twice and twice third. In his race at Sacramento, September 19, 1891, Silas Skinner trotted—80 horsemen said one of the gamest races ever trotted in California. His competitors were Frank M and Wanda, whom he defeated, winning the first, third and fourth heats, the second heat falling to Frank M. Time of each heat 2:17, 2:17, 2:17½, 2:19.

SILAS SKINNER is a black horse, sixteen hands high, and weighs in stud season about 1,100 pounds. In color, breeding and conformation he approaches very near the ideal stallion, and he descends on both his sire's and dam's side from ancestors who have few equals in the history of the American trotting horse.

TERMS: $100 FOR THE SEASON.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge, provided SILAS SKINNER remains the property of the present owners. Pasturage $3 per month. Every attention and care given to mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, apply to

FIXTURES FOR THE FUTURE.

March 8th—Olympic Club, boxing and wrestling exhibition in the gymnasium.

March 15th—Acme Athletic Club, exhibition in the clubrooms, Oakland.

April 12th—Olympic Club, handicap out-door meeting at the club grounds.

April—Young Men's Christian Association, first annual field day, at San Jose, Cal.

May 30th—Pacific Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, second annual out-door championship meeting, at the Olympic Club grounds.

May 30th—Alameda Bicycle and Athletic Club, opening of the new grounds, Schutzen Park, Alameda, Cal.

SUMMARY.

The Olympic Club will give a handicap meeting on Saturday afternoon, April 12th, and already the athletes have commenced training for that occasion. The University athletes are keeping up a steady practice which means that they are determined to make a better showing during the coming season than ever before. In a week or two the cricketers will resume practice. The oarsmen are not exerting themselves at the present time as nothing important is on the tapis for the future. The wheelmen are unusually active and several events are announced for the future.

THE ATHLETES, WHEELMEN, OARSMEN, CRICKETERS, ETC.

The Olympic Club is making great preparations for its coming boxing and wrestling tournament, which will be held in the gymnasium on the evening of March 8th. It is to be regretted that Dick Murphy, who was to have appeared against Brittan in a four-round contest on the night of the tournament, will not be able to make his appearance, as he was thrown from his buggy while out riding on Washington's Birthday, and in falling broke his wrist. An effort will be made to put some other good man against Brittain.

Al. Lean will soon commence training for the next championship games. It will be a good contest between himself and Purcell in the shot-putting and long-jumping events.

The cricket clubs have organized for the season and play will be resumed in a week or two.

The local wrestlers are taking a great interest in the coming Action-McLeod wrestling match, which will take place on March 6th. The men are of the same height and weight, and as both are strong and scientific, the struggle will no doubt be a great one.

Captain Pixley, of the San Francisco Bicycle Club is determined that his men will make a good showing during the present season. He is at present working on a list of runs to be held during the year, and he expects that all the members will turn out when called upon.

The members of the Alameda Bicycle and Athletic Club are still working on their new track at Schutzen Park and they hope to have it in fine condition soon. They will not hold any meeting until Decoration Day when a grand handicap tournament will be given. The races will be open to all L. A. W. riders and good prizes will be awarded. This club is trying to secure the League meet for the present year.

The Pastime Athlectic Club has at last flung off its mask and is now known as the "Frank Jones" Athletic Club. When the club first started we hinted that its amateur standing was very doubtful; but now all doubts are set at rest as the old Golden Gate Athletic Club has risen from the ashes of the Pastime Amateur Athletic Club.

There was a great game of football at Central Park a week ago last Saturday. The opposing teams were the Olympics and Universities. The ground was somewhat soft and slippery, but notwithstanding the struggle was grand. The Olympics had the advantage as far as previous practice was concerned, but the Berkeley boys were the strongest and knew more about the play than did their opponents. The game was finally won by the Olympics with a score of 6 points to 0. It is thought that the U. C. team will regain their lost laurels as soon as they get a little more practice. The teams were made up as follows:

Umpire and referee—Frank Owen, of Yale College, and Rosenfeld, of Stanford University.

The Black Cyclone.

The year 1891 will always be memorable for the great speed contests that were seen on the circuits of this State, in which the Black Cyclone, Silas Skinner, trotted against such game ones as Wanda, Frank M., James Madison and Beaumont. In his race at Sacramento, ably driven by Wm. McGraw, the excitement which attended his victory will never be forgotten. Silas is one of the handsomest horses seen on the turf. His fine head and neck, sharp withers and perfect limbs bear the stamp of a thoroughbred, and his gameness and great recuperative powers are admitted by all to be something akin to that which is only found among the greatest of the "children of the winds." His advertisement in our columns is complete and exhaustive, but no mention is made of what Silas Skinner is doing as a sire; it is only necessary to visit Napa and Sonoma valleys to be apprized of the fact that the progeny of Silas Skinner are all handsome, pure-gaited, perfectly-formed, level-headed, and fast trotters. Silas has made a name for himself as a game campaigner, but still greater fame will be awarded him as a sire of fleety race horses—for race horses they will surely be. Silas Skinner is by a horse with a record that is also a sire of speed; his dam is in the great broodmare table. His second dam is a producer, so owners will make no mistake in securing his services at the low figure at which he is advertised. This horse will appear in the free-for-all for stallions, and also in the 2:15 class. We put his mark this year at 2:12.

The Terre Haute (Ind.) Fair.

The advertisement of the above-named association appears in another part of this paper. A number of rich stakes with liberal conditions are placed before owners of trotters and pacers. The track at Terre Haute is a fast one, and here many great turf battles have been fought in the past few years, notably the one between Direct and Hal Pointer in 1891. The management is of the best, and as $30,000 in stakes, purses and specials are offered, there can be no complaint on the money proposition. The programme is a varied and interesting one, and owners should read the advertisement carefully.

Owing to the number of applications for the services of C. C. Bemis' two stallions, Lancelot and Saladin, by the horsemen of Santa Rosa, who are beginning to appreciate the merits of these horses, Mr. Bemis will not be able to have them brought to this city until next week.

If your blood is impure regulate your liver with Simmons Liver Regulator.

LATE ITEMS.

ATTEND the great auction sale next Wednesday in this city.

THERE will be a spring meeting held at Hollister about the 29th of April, trotting and pacing, two days.

THERE will be a grand exhibition of stallions and their progeny at Agricultural Park, San Jose, next Saturday afternoon at one o'clock. All are invited. Admission free.

DAVID GRUM, of Sacramento, sold his five-year-old stallion Bird, by Fallis, to F. H. Merwin last Monday. The price was $850. Mr. Merwin will take Bird to Carson, Nev.. where he will make the season.

SECRETARY WALTHALL, of the Stanislaus Agricultural Association, District 38, writes us that it has been agreed to hold the County Fair at Modesto on September 28th, 29th, 30th and October 1, 1892.

WILLIAM DELANO PAGE has bought an interest in his brother's stock farm. The firm will hereafter be known as Wilfred Page & Brother. Two pages should make a leaf in the trotting horse history of the State.

ORRIN HICKOK has named his Whips—Messenger Duroc gelding—now, ye Western brethren, let us get off right this time—he has named him Ah-rye (we can all pronounce that —'ll (heard something like that before, too!) but he spells it, Ariel.

DAN J. MCCARTY this week purchased of L. U. Shippee Stockton, Cal., the stallion Prince Wood, by Dexter Prince dam by Nutwood; second dam Maud (dam of Magdallah 2:23½, and Reliance, 2:22½) by Mambrino Rattler. From Mr. Wood's he purchased a four-year-old colt, full brother to Chloe, 2:24.

URANIA, by Kentucky Prince, dam Lady Belmont, by Hambletonian 10, the fine matron recently purchased at the Palo Alto broodmare sale by John McCord, of Napa, for $950, last Friday, foaled a pretty bay filly by Azmoor, 2:20½ (by Electioneer, dam Mamie C. by imp. Hercules). Mr. McCord is to be congratulated on the possession of the mare and filly, and Napa horsemen are rejoiced to see so notable an addition to the stock of the county.

THE members of the Santa Rosa Trotting Club met in the Supervisors' rooms the other evening in business session, President J. P. Overton presiding. A number of amendments to the constitntion and by-laws were passed. The admission fee was fixed at $2, and dues at the rate of $1 per month, to take effect the 1st of March. The executive committee was instructed to prepare for a stock parade, to be held at a date near the 1st of April, the parade to be followed by a few races. The members are taking an active interest in the club, and lively times are promised in trotting circles before the season is over.

THE stockholders of the Kern County Fair Grounds Association met at Bakersfield last Wednesday afternoon and perfected the permanent organization of the association. Sol Jewett, S. W. Fergusson, H. A. Blodgett, J. R. Simmons, Louis Olcese, H. A. Jastro, S. W. Wible and W. H. Scribner were elected permanent directors. The following permanent officers were elected: President, Sol Jewett; Vice-President, S. W. Fergusson; Treasurer, H. A. Blodgett; Secretary, J. M. Reuck. Captain Thomas B. Merry was elected superintendent of the racing department. It was decided to increase the capital stock of the association from $5,000 to $10,000, there being already more than $5,000 worth of stock subscribed.

KITTY IRVINGTON, by Dawn, first dam Nellie Irvington, by Irvington; second dam, Lady Allen, by George M. Patchen Jr.; third dam, Old Peanuts (dam of Billy Hayward), foaled a very handsome colt by Sidney last week. The mare and colt will be in A. L. Whitney's sale next month. Kitty Irvington is only four years old, and this is her second foal. The first one is Marchioness, the truly wonderful eight-months-old filly in Lee Shaner's string by Commodore. Ida Belle, full sister to Anna Belle, (three-year-old record 2:27½), will foal in a few days to Sable Wilkes. Anna Belle will foal in May to Sidney. She was carrying this foal when she made her record, and later when she trotted second to Vida Wilkes for the Stanford Stakes. All of the above, including the baby Marchioness, will be in the Whitney sale next month.

Anent the Kite.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—We do not see how the kite-shaped track could have been of so much advantage to Balkan, as claimed, when he made his record, 2:15. An analysis of the time, as given by the official timer, shows that he trotted the first quarter in 34¾ seconds, the second quarter in 32½, third in 34¾ and the last in 33. How can it be argued that his long stride would have kept him from making a good mile on an eliptical track on the same day, when it is seen that his fastest quarter was made on the turn?

a stallion takes to bad habits. Self-abuse wastes his strength and stamina. They all do it. The better bred, the quicker to learn it. What are you going to do about it?

Prevention isn't so easy. Until the Perfection Stallion Guard was invented, all kinds of things had been tried, but nothing did the work. There's something wrong with all of them. Either they are useless or, if they do any good in one way, they do much harm in another. Laceration and torture; that's what they depend upon, and everybody knows whether that's good medicine for a stallion with any spirit.

With the "Perfection," you put a stop to the whole business. You won't hurt your stallion, and he'll keep his self-respect.

Price $6.00 each. Send for catalogue and testimonials. Sold by all dealers, or address,

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world.. but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

THE BEST-BERD AND FINEST-LKOOING WILKES STALLION IN THE STATE.

No. 8707. BILLY THORNHILL Rec. 2:24 1-2

By BEVERLY WILKES, Brother of

PROSPECT MAID, 2:23½, WALSINGHAM, 2166 (sire of LATITUDE, 2:19¼ at 4 years).
GEORGIA WILKES, sire of VALENTINE, 2:18½, BASBLEN WILKES, 2:24½, BILLY WILKES, 2:29½, BESSIE WILKES, 2:31½.

Dam EMILY, Dam of

FORTUNA, 2:22, BILLY THORNHILL, 2:24½, COL. YOUNG, 2:30.

Second dam SUE STOUT,

Third dam LEAR MARE, Dam of

JIM IRVING, 2:23, and YOUNG JIM, sire of BUTTERFLY, 2:19¾, GARNETT, 2:19, and twelve other performers.

By GEORGE WILKES, Sire of

GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-four others in the 2:30 list, and seventy-five sires of 249 trotters.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of

Seventy-five producing sons and forty-six producing daughters.

By ASHLAND 47, Son of

MAMBRINO CHIEF 11 and sire of HIGHLAND WIN 1226, and others in list and the dams of EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, and others.

By LEAR'S SIR WILLIAM, Son of

HOWARD'S SIR CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES (who died when but three years of age) was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot 2:27½ (sire of Hannis, 2:17¾, and others), out of Julie[illegible], by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2½ hands, and weighs 1,080 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well-built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well-shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:40 without boots of any kind. His first colt showed trials last fall in 2:20 in his 3-year-old form, and all of his 2-year-olds that have been handled any show lots of speed and a nice way of going. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

TERMS, $75 WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGE.

I have a good pasture to turn mares in at $5 each per month. The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

For further particulars, address JAMES BOYD, Milpitas.

NUTWOOD WILKES is a handsome chestnut in color, stands 15½ hands high, is level-headed, kind and intelligent.

RAPID TRANSIT,

Limited to Fifteen approved Outside Mares at $75 for the Season.

RAPID TRANSIT is a fine-looking bay horse, stands 15½ hands high. He is by DIRECTOR 1989, 2:17; dam Lida W., record 2:18¼, dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½ at 3 years. (See above tabulated pedigree.) He is a horse of splendid individuality and excellent blood lines.

LONG BRANCH.

Limited to Fifteen Outside Mares at $50 for the Season.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¾ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, sire of seven with records from 2:17¾ to 2:30), by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Zola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25¾ (sire of seven with records from 2:10 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty Outside Mares at $50 for the Season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27¾, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¾ (sire of 77 with records from 2:11½ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11½ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track); dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30; the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23½, made in 1860; the fastest and gamest representative of the Clay family). This pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great broodmares. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains—the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race-horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and nineteen others from 2:18¼ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or ten per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

Rub it into the muscles every night for a fortnight and you will be pleased at its supporting and strengthening properties. There is not, nor has been, anything like it till now. It differs from all Oils, Embrocations and Liniments, both in substance and effect. Some athletes are so fond of it that they rub it all over them.

TERRE HAUTE PURSE.

For Foals of 1892, to Trot In 1894.

Colts, Fillies and Geldings (the get of Stallions that may be entered in this purse) to trot as two-year-olds at Terre Haute, Ind., at a meeting to be held in August or September, 1894, under the rules of the Association of which this Society is then a member; mile heats, best two in three, in harness. Distance, 125 yards.

On or before April 4, 1892, the Stallions, all of whose get thus become eligible, must be nominated, and any Stallion, even if dead, that has foals foaled in 1892, is eligible.

All colts, Fillies and Geldings eligible to this purse shall on or before December 1, 1892, be entered and described, and there may be as many starters by one sire as there are different owners; but no person shall be interested in more than one starter, later than ten days before the race.

This purse will be divided as follows: $5,500 to the first horse, $1,500 to the second, $1,000 to the third, $500 to the fourth, and $1,500 to the nominator of the Stallion that is the sire of the winner.

ENTRANCE AS FOLLOWS:

Fifty dollars to nominate the Stallion April 4, 1892; $5 to nominate each foal December 1, 1892; $15 second payment on foals December 1, 1893; $30 third payment on foals May 1, 1894, and $100 for starters, payable on or before August 1, 1894.

THIS PURSE IS FOR $10,000—NO MORE, NO LESS;

Except in case of a walk-over, or of a horse distancing the field; in either of which cases, should the amounts paid in hereto fall short of $10,000, the winner shall only be entitled to receive the whole of the amount paid in; and further provided, that should the original nominations to this purse be such as to make reasonably certain a considerable loss to this Society, then and in that event, we reserve the right to refund said first payments and to declare the purse off.

The above purse will be trotted for at the same meeting in 1894, whereat the $11,000 Guaranteed Purse for foals of 1890, and the $11,500 Guaranteed Purse for foals of 1891 will be contested, thus making this meeting in 1894 the greatest race meeting ever held in Indiana, if not in the United States, as other magnificent purses and stakes have been outlined and contemplated for this meeting, and will at the proper time be placed before the public, thus making the Terre Haute Fair for 1894 the Banner Race Meeting and Horse Fair of that year.

Stallions to be nominated on or before April 4, 1892, and addressed to

CHAS. C. OAKEY, Secretary,

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18½, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:24¼ and 2:24¼. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wender, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. ELECT was sired by ELECTIONEER, dam INEZ, by NORDALE; second dam LIZZIE, by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT; third dam "THE THRIFT MARE," a thoroughbred brought from Kentucky.

NORDALE, by NORFOLK, dam BLUE DALE, by OWEN DALE; NORFOLK, by LEXINGTON, dam NOVICE, by IMP. GLENCOE; OWEN DALE by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT, dam MARIA DOWNING, by AMERICAN ECLIPSE. YOUNG TELESCOPE by IMP. TELESCOPE, dam by IMP. MESSENGER.

VOTER is a dark bay, solid color, with black points; foaled 1886; 15 hands 3 inches high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a horse of magnificent form, and is in every way a superior individual. In him is combined the HAMBLETONIAN, CLAY, MORGAN and thoroughbred blood. This horse was in Charles Marvin's care for about ten days during the record meeting at Stockton last fall—the only time he was ever on a track—and the first time he was speeded he showed Marvin an eighth of a mile in 19½ seconds. He was taken sick, and notwithstanding he showed such remarkable speed, had to be taken home.

VOTER will make the season from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

ANDY R.

(FULL BROTHER TO STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23.)

Sired by CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of STEVE WHIPPLE, four-year-old race record, 2:23, and KATE AGNEW, 2:28½, dam TWIST, dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23, and VOTER), by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of 15 trotters in 2:30; of sires of 12 2:30 trotters, and of 12 dams of 16 trotters in the list.) CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN 10,178, by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of nine sires, dam FLORA (dam of three sires of 2:30 speed, by CHIEFTAIN 724; second dam a thoroughbred mare.

ANDY R. is a bright bay, with small star; foaled 1885; 15 hands 2½ inches high, and weighs 1,025 pounds. He is a beauty, and a perfect horse in every way. Will make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $40 FOR THE SEASON, FEBRUARY 1 TO JUNE 1.

PRINDEX.

Sired by DEXTER PRINCE 11,363, (sire of seven in the list) dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, VOTER and ANDY R.)

PRINDEX is a dark brown horse, white hind feet; foaled 1888; 16 hands high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a good-sized, fine-styled and well-gaited colt, and will certainly make a trotter and sire of speed. He will also make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st.

AT $40 FOR THE SEASON.

The reader will perceive that the four stallions mentioned herein are all from the same mare. Four individually better or nicer-looking stallions can not be found on any stock farm in California. Horsemen are especially invited to inspect the horses, and I wish to call special attention to their feet and legs—better were never put under a horse. Their dam, TWIST, at sixteen years old, is as sound as the day she was foaled. Their second, third and fourth dams were used for all purposes of farm and road work, and all lived to be over thirty years old—their limbs, at the time of death, being as free of blemishes or of any mark of unsoundness as a suckling colt's.

The disposition of these stallions are of the very best, and their produce are all good size, of fine conformation, have perfect feet and legs, and all show speed to a remarkable degree.

I do not favor extremely high service fees, and the prices on these stallions for this year are placed comparatively very low; that of STEVE WHIPPLE in particular being much less than of any other stallion of equal value or merit in this State.

Mares sent to my address, care of WEBER STABLES, STOCKTON, CAL., will be taken to my ranch at BELLOTA free of charge, provided two or three days' notice be given me by letter.

Pasturage on mares to be bred to VOTER, ANDY R., or PRINDEX free for two months, after that $3 per month. All bills payable at time of service or before the mares are removed.

Usual return privileges, provided mare or horse does not change hands, or money refunded at my option. For further particulars, address

DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently-formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better-bred stallion stands for public service in California to-day. He is only six years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON, with the usual return privilege. Excellent care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

Abdol was foaled in 1883, bred by John Watson, Oakland, and is one of the finest sons of the Grand Moor. He is a handsome black in color, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a horse of splendid proportions, exquisite style and perfect trotting action. He is remarkably level-headed, intelligent and of kind disposition, and possesses the qualities of speed and gameness to a remarkable degree. His record is no mark of his speed. When it was made it was the intention to keep him in the 2:30 class. He has shown in his work last quarters in 34 seconds—a 2:16 gait—and can get away equally fast.

*Balkan.

BALKAN 8848

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14¼ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¼. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¼. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Christman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½, Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:40 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000.

AND HIS SERVICE IS OFFERED AT $100 FOR THE SEASON.

The services of no other young horse of his conformation, breeding and quality, with such a record, is offered at so low a figure.

Bear in mind that colt stakes will soon be given for the get of stallions with records of 2:15 or better. If you want to raise colts which will be eligible to enter in all stakes, BREED TO BALKAN, as he is the only horse in this region with a record of 2:15 whose services are offered to the public.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

Being by the great Nutwood 600, now standing at $1,000, out of Countess, dam of Strathway, 2:20, Placida and Morna, driven as a double team a trial mile in 2:26), Dawn shows that his family is a trotting one on each side of the house. THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1892 at

WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,

715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

THREE CHEERS

Young Fashion — Fashion — Bonnets o'Blue; Trustee (imp.)
Monarch — Delphine; Prism
Hurrah (imp.) — Jovial — Sister to Grey Momus; Bay Middleton
Newminster — Beeswing; Touchstone

Fourth dam Reality; fifth dam, by imp. Medley, sixth dam, by imp. Sentinel; seventh dam, by Mark Anthony; eighth dam, by imp. Janus; ninth dam, by imp. Monkey; tenth dam, by Silvereye eleventh dam, by Spanker. (See Bruce's American Stud Book, Vol. I. page 432.

HURRAH, sire of Three Cheers, produced the great winners Bonnie Lizzie, Chaquita, Ohio Boy, Nellie Peyton, Little Buttercup, Red Fox, Medusa, Brad, Referee, Monk, Hostage, Lady Middleton and many others.

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS.

Seventy-five Dollars for the Season.

Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

Pepper, of South Elkhorn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky; sired by Onward 1411, record 2:25¼, trial 2:17; he by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of seventy-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten with records below 2:20; first dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:18¾, trial 2:25), by American Clay 34, sire of Maggie Briggs, 2:27, Ella Clay, 2:27½, and the dams of Executor, 2:24½, Ranchero, 2:21½, Judge Hawes, 2:24, Ambassador, 2:22¼, Sir Walter, 2:18¼, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:23; third dam by Paddie Burns, thoroughbred.

WILKES PASHA is the only son of Onward in this part of California. El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¾; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

MOORLAND, $40.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¼.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

The Souther Farm Swimming Tank is in regular operation and horses are given swimming work every week day in good weather. Swimming gives Exercise Without Concussion, and is an invaluable aid in training trotters or runners. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

DIRECTOR JR.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1892 AT THE ASYLUM RANCH, SAN RAFAEL.

DESCRIPTION.

DIRECTOR JR. is a grandly-formed stallion, a handsome black in color; stands 15.3 hands; weighs 1,175 pounds. In appearance and disposition he is more like Director than any other son of that famous sire. He has never been trained for speed, but can easily show a 2:20 gait on the road, and will surely get a mark much below that this fall, as he will be put in training for this season's campaign. Up to the present time he has been in the stud in Oregon and never given an opportunity to show his speed. His colts, like himself, are all grand lookers, show great trotting action, intelligence and gameness. A three-year-old now in training has shown a mile in 2:21, and Directwood, a two-year-old son, won every race in which he was entered last year, and could have gone in the thirty list had his owner so desired. At the Oregon State Fair last year Director Jr. and five of his get were awarded first premiums.

PEDIGREE.

It will be seen that Director Jr. is bred on blood lines almost identically the same as Direct, 2:06, the Greatest Harness Horse in the World.

DIRECTOR JR.

- Director, 2:17 (Sire of Direct 2:06; Margaret S. 2:12½; Evangeline 2:19; Guide 2:16¼; Emma 2:24¼; and 7 others in the 2:30 list.)

THE MAGNIFICENT TROTTING STALLION

MARKS L.

Will make the Season of 1892, ending July 1st,

AT THE BAY DISTRICT TRACK.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

MARKS L. was foaled 1888; he is a handsome bay in color; stands 16.2 hands; weighs 1,150. He is a remarkably well-muscled, heavy-boned, clean-limbed horse, and a more perfect-formed or a more promising one is not standing for public service. In action he is a perfect fine trotter, and although never having been handled for speed, there is little doubt but that he will trot close to 2:20 this fall.

MARKS L. was sired by Antevolo, 2:19½, out of Maggie L., by Grand Duke Alexis; second dam Vashti, by Chieftain 721; third dam by Nena Sahib (thoroughbred). Antevolo, by Electioneer 125. Grand Duke Alexis was by Stephen A. Douglas 422, out of Black Bessie, by Blucher. Stephen A. Douglas was by Hambletonian 10, out of Kate, by Balsora 1024; second dam Neva, by Vincente Nolte, etc. Chieftain 721 was by Hiatoga, out of a daughter of Trimble's Eclipse. Terms, $50 for the season. For further particulars, address

T. J. LOWNEY, 824 Treat Avenue, San Francisco.

No. 4,541. WILKESDALE Rec'rd 2:29.

By ALCANTARA, 2:23, Sire of

MISS ALICE, 2:17¼, AUTOGRAPH 2:18½, NIGHTINGALE, 2:13¾, LIGHTNING, 2:19¼, and forty-three others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of PRINCE REGENT, five years, 2:16½, and ÆGON, three years, 2:18¼.

Dam ALMA MATER, Dam of

ALCANTARA, 2:23; ALCYONE, 2:27; ALMATER, 2:29¼; ALICIA, 2:30; ARBITER, 2:22½; ALMETA, 2:32¾; ALLINE, five years old (trial,) 2:25.

Wilkesdale's dam THORNDALE MAID, 2:30, Dam of

MISS ALICE, 2:17½, THORNTON, 2:26¼, WILKESDALE, 2:29.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of

GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-five others in 2:30 list.

By MAMBRINO PATCHEN, Sire of

Eighteen in 2:30 list, and the dams of GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HOURI, 2:17, ASTRAL, 2:18, BARON WILKES, 2:18, and sixty others in 2:30 or better.

By THORNDALE, 2:22½, Sire of

EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, DAISYDALE, 2:19¾, and five others in 2:30 list; by ALEXANDER'S ABDALLAH, sire of GOLDSMITH MAID, 2:14, ALMONT, etc., out of DOLLY, dam of DIRECTOR, 2:17, ONWARD, 2:25¼, THORNDALE, 2:24¼, and CZARINA, 2:21, by MAMBRINO CHIEF.

Second dam BRIDESMAID, Dam of

THORNDALE MAID, 2:30, and TRIXIE, (trial), 2:25½.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of

ELECTIONEER, GEORGE WILKES, and forty-one trotters in the 2:30 list.

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his progeny. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five producing sons, two of which have each two yearlings that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12¾, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼ (who was shown trials the past season in 2:14); Thornton, 2:26¼, and Wilkesdale 2:29, sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:22½, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12¾, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, the dam of Director 2:17, etc., on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams. Wilkesdale was taken out of the pasture the 1st of October last, soft and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29½. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

For further particulars, or complete circulars, address

SOUTHER FARM FOOT RASP.

PERFECT WORK

ORDER FROM

WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU

That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is glori ously mistaken. However, don't point ou the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing o both heels and the entire wearing surface.

GUARANTEED

By The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association.

REMEMBER IT TAKES BUT TWO SMALL PAYMENTS, AMOUNTING TO ONLY ONE-TENTH OF ONE PER CENT TO CARRY ENTRY TO JUNE 1 OF YEAR OF RACE, AND THERE IS NO HEAVY PAYMENT TILL NIGHT BEFORE RACE.

FOR FOALS OF 1892 Colts, fillies and geldings (the produce of mares that may be nominated in this stake) to trot as two-year-olds at FALL MEETING, 1894, and as three-year-olds at FALL MEETING, 1895, the first race to be mile heats, 2 in 3, and the second mile heats, 3 in 5. On or before March 15, 1892, the mares whose foals may become eligible to start in these races must be nominated, and any mare that has foaled, or is due to foal, in 1892, is eligible. The association guarantees the stake worth not less than $25,000, of which $5,000 will go to the two-year-olds and $20,000, OR MORE, to the three-year-old race, as follows: In the two-year-old event the winner will receive $3,000; the second colt $1,000 and the third $500, and the nominator of the dam of the winner, $500; the three-year-old winner will receive $15,000; the second $3,000; the third $1,000, and $1,000 will go to the nominator of dam of winner. On the starters $100 more must be paid by 7½ o'clock of evening before the race. Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50.

PREPARING HORSES FOR THE MARKET.

The Importance of Good Feeding and the Use and Abuse of Training.

A large proportion of the horse-breeders of the country are men of moderate means, who make little if any effort to produce extreme speed, or to breed stock of such extremely fashionable breeding that it will sell at an early age on the strength of its pedigree, but who avail themselves of such trotting blood as they can, and keeping their colts until matured, sell them to dealers, or private buyers when possible, for what they can get. Now, the most of these breeders subscribe for and read at least one paper or magazine devoted to horse matters, and as a consequence many of them are well-posted on pedigrees, and have come to fully realize the importance of selecting well-bred and meritorious sires and dams to breed from. They seem to be impressed also with the importance of feeding and caring for young stock in a proper manner. But there is one most important matter in relation to making their breeding business pay that many of them have not found treated of in the horse papers and have not yet caught onto themselves, and this is the importance of properly fitting and preparing their stock for the market before trying to sell. For no matter how much knowledge a breeder may have and make use of in the matter of breeding and feeding, he cannot succeed unless he possess and make use of an equal amount of knowledge in putting them on the market in the best possible manner.

As the many desirable qualities which constitute a first-class gentleman's road and family horse, that will command a remunerative price, are fully as much the result of proper training as of breeding, a horse to meet the requirements of the wealthy city buyer, who is purchasing for his own use and is willing to pay a good price for the right kind of an animal, must in the first place be a horse of good carriage, pure, level gait and a free and fearless roadster, that goes straight along about his business, and is not jumping and shying at every stone or object by the roadside or at every dog that runs out and barks. He also must be fearless of cars and bicycles and possess no bad habit, vice or trick in the stable or out. He should also be in good flesh, smooth-coated, show plenty of spirit and pluck without being rank, and be willing when called upon for a little burst of speed to show it without having to be cheered up with the whip, or without jumping, hitching or hobbling. Last, but not least, he must be round and smooth.

Now, it matters not how well-bred or well-fed a horse may be, he will meet but few, if any, of the above requirements if no pains are taken in his education and management, or if it is done without knowledge, skill or good judgment. The modus operandi of many breeders—especially farmer-breeders—is something as follows: Having raised a colt up to three or four years of age, they have him broken to harness, just so he can be driven between the fences that skirt the roadside, and then either commence to work or drive him as a business and family horse, or else turn him out or hitch him in the barn, to be driven only when there is nothing else to do or to remain until sold. In case there are few, if any, other usable horses on the farm the former method is practiced, and the colt is made to draw the market wagon, the family wagon and to go long journeys until, although he may have been well-bred and made of the right stuff for a high-selling gentleman's driver, he gradually loses his natural style, graceful form and proud spirit, and becomes to feel, look and act like a drudge and plug, and will not sell at all to anyone wanting a fine horse. But if the farmer has plenty of other horses to drive and to work he adopts the latter method; does not harness the colt after he is returned from the breaker's hands, except at long intervals; feeds him but little grain, lets him run out to pasture late in the fall, and when the owner wants to sell and the buyer comes along wanting to buy a gentleman's driver or a family horse he is shown a rough-coated, fat-bellied colt, that when harnessed knows nothing but to shy, jump and gallop. Of course the buyer don't want such a horse at any price, and so the farmer finally sells him to some shrewd local horseman for perhaps $125, who after educating him and fattening him in the right shape sells him for $250 to $300, which price the farmer might have realized if he had not been penny-wise and pound-foolish, in that he devoted all his time, his thoughts and his energies to raising, tending and preparing for market low-priced beef, pork, potatoes, grain, etc., and trying to get the highest prices, which would leave but a few pennies profit at best, and in neglecting their colts, which might be made to leave many pounds profit if attended to. But the farmer says he don't have any time to spare to educate and prepare his colt for market. Just so. But what would he think if a neighboring farmer, who, having grown a fine field of potatoes, estimated to yield 500 bushels, should sell them before being dug to a neighbor for $25, saying that he had no time to dig them, because he had to cut bushes by the roadside? Or if the farmer having one hundred lean swine and 5,000 bushels of corn in his granary to fat them on should sell them for little or nothing because he could not spare the time to give them the corn and thus realize $1,000, more or less, for them?

It is ridiculous for any man, whether farmer or not, to say he has no time to attend to a job that will pay him $200, when he can get but $100 in doing any other job.

Again, others will give as an excuse for not having their colts better trained that they do not know how or do not possess the ability to train and condition them as they should be. This may all be true, but it is no less true that they did not know how nor possess the ability to hold a plow, to drive oxen, to plant to row, to ruu a mowing machine, until they had learned how, given some thought to it and had some experience. And after a farmer has learned how to plant and sow properly he doesn't think of letting his crops go to waste because he has not yet learned how to harvest them properly, but he goes to work and learns how.

So when he has learned how to raise colts properly he should not stop there, but should go to work and learn how to educate them in proper shape to sell. And if they cannot make it pay to raise colts at all, unless they raise such as are well-bred enough to sell on the merits of their breeding.

In order for a man to be able to handle his colts in such a way as to cause them to develop into well-mannered, good-styled, good-acting horses, it is not essential that he be a great reinsman or driver of trotters, with the ability to get the greatest possible amount of speed out of a horse, for men that are merely good drivers are often unfit to handle a colt for any length of time, for the reason that they get the speed all out so many times that it stays out.

But a man needs patience, knowledge, good judgment and common sense, qualities which almost any man can acquire if we have common sense to begin with. He should learn first of all how to give a colt a good mouth, for unless a colt is broken so as to have a good mouth he will not be a straight, true driver, nor have a graceful carriage. The use of harsh bits and short overdraw checks should be avoided as much as possible. When giving a colt his first lessons let him have his head at first and check him gradually as he gets his mouth and neck accustomed to it.

After colts have been taught how to rein perfectly and have learned to draw a carriage the owner or handler must learn the best way to teach them not to shy at objects by the wayside, or at cars, bicycles, etc. The way to do this is not to whip, yank and scold, but if they are afraid of objects by the roadside drive slowly at first, and at every attempt to shy pull them firmly to a standstill, and when their fright has left them, as it will in a few seconds, drive on as before. When horses are afraid of the cars the best way to cure them is to keep them for a time close to the railroad, either in a stable that is near by or in an inclosure, until they get accustomed to the cars, as they will sooner or later, after which there will be no more trouble.

As for the rest, a horse's style, action, speed, courage and general driving qualities will depend to a great extent on the kind and amount of driving they have, and not so much on the driver's skill as a reinsman. In this matter judgment is of more importance than skill. For if a horse is driven too often, too far at a time or pulls too many loads he will have a listless, tired look; will have little ambition to get up in style or to show speed; his neck will be drawn down, and while he may be fat he will not have that rounded look that he would have if not overworked.

If the colt, while not overworked, is driven too often at the very top of his speed he is liable to get to hitching or going bad-gaited, while on the other hand, if a young horse is not driven often enough or far enough he will be rank, unsteady and foolish; will make bad breaks, is liable to pull or bolt, and will sweat and fret and make a disgrace of himself generally.

To my mind more depends on knowing how much or how little work to give a horse, and in giving the right amount, than all other things put together, both as regards fitting them for market or for the turf, and it is a matter that can be learned by a farmer as readily as by a professional driver. There is no rule that it will do to follow in this matter, and the amount of work that each horse should have can only be found out by experimenting.

How to shoe a horse so he will show the best and go clever and easily is another matter of no small importance, and one that, like the preceding, must be studied with reference to each individual horse. The way they are shod has much to do also with keeping their legs clean and sound, and not getting over in the knees or up in the ankles.

All breeders should strive to obtain some knowledge of veterinary practice, for accidents will sometimes happen and diseases will appear in the best regulated establishments, and unless they are properly treated at such times they will remain permanently unsound.

If breeders who raise up their colts to sell at maturity will obtain as thorough a knowledge of the above-mentioned subjects as they do of breeding, of crop-raising, of dairying, and of all other matters appertaining to their business, they will realize double the prices for their colts that they will if they sell them untrained and ill-conditioned, and will also be more successful in a general way, even though they do not produce quite as much corn, wheat, beef, pork and other such low-priced and uncertain products.

In case a man finds himself totally unable to learn how to get his colts in good shape for the market and bring out their best points, as above indicated, let him stop breeding them, and confine himself to something that he can understand.—A. T. Maxim in the Horseman.

Quack Veterinarians.

The quack veterinarian, like all other quacks, should be let severely alone. The man who pretends to be able to cure all diseases can cure none. The true physician, whether he seeks to relieve the pangs of humanity, or whether his practice is among the brute creation, is usually modest. He knows enough to know that there are many cases that baffle the skill of the wisest, and the distrust of his own powers is usually about in proportion to his skill. The quack, however, in his own judgment, or, at least in his pretensions, is equal to all emergencies. No disease is too complicated or too deeply seated to be beyond the reach of his curative powers. He is almost always a braggart, and the depth of his ignorance can usually be measured by the loudness and extravagance of his claims.

True science is always modest. It is the "quickfool" that always has an answer. It is the wise man that "hesitates, lost in doubt." "The shallows murmur, while the depths are dumb."

A large portion of mankind seem to be the easy prey of the quack. They are inclined to believe in the man that tells them that he "knows it all." And they frequently distrust the really able physician who knows, and is honest enough to tell the world, that there is a limit to his powers, and that he possesses no panacea for all ills.

Of late years there has been a great improvement in veterinary practice. Intelligent owners of valuable animals are becoming more and more unwilling to entrust their cure, when sick, to the care of ignorant impiricists. They have learned that a knowledge of the diseases of the horse and the proper remedies for these diseases do not come by intuition and are not learned in a blacksmith's shop. These diseases are as varied in their character and as difficult to diagnose as the diseases of the human system. They require as much knowledge and as much skill in their treatment. Veterinary surgeons are now educated with as much care as physicians. In all the great horse centers there are now to be found men who have received excellent training in good veterinary schools and who are fully competent to treat intelligently the ills incident to horse flesh. Wise breeders and owners of horses will employ only such professors of the veterinary art as by reason of proper training and experience are able to treat disease intelligently, and will give the quacks a wide berth.—Kentucky Stock Farm.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—The spring crop of Sonoma County trotters is arriving, and already a number of breeders boast of having some of the finest babies in their paddocks ever seen.

G. W. Fraser's famous mare, Lily, foaled a splendid dark bay colt, sired by Silas Skinner, 2:17, last week. It was the mare that dropped "Little Too Soon" last spring. Mr. Frazer thinks this one will be a little "too quick" for some of the other youngsters.

The General Benton mares Pierce Bros. bought at the recent Palo Alto sale have been brought to their Santa Rosa quarters, and they are pronounced first-class by most horsemen. Superintendent Bonner is very proud of them, to say the least.

Santa Rosa's Black Tornado, Silas Skinner, is showing up well this spring, and "Mc." says he will be in fine form when the campaign opens. With Palo Alto, Advertiser, McKinney, Cupid, Balkan and Charles Derby to face in the P. T. C. H. B. stallion free-for-all, Silas will have the fight of his life to make, but those acquainted with his speed and endurance are not frightened at the prospect.

A youngster is announced from the Rosedale Breeding Farm. It is out of a Wheatly mare and was sired by Daly. Daly is proving himself a very strong breeder, and all of his colts bear a striking resemblance to him in form and action. We expect to see some of his colts acquit themselves creditably in the Stallion Produce Stakes given by the P. C. T. H. B. this fall.

Santa Rosa has a large number of aspirants in the list published in last week's Breeder and Sportsman, among them being Myrtle, in champion four-year-old free-for-all; Examiner, in same class; Lou S., Harold, Robin, Antenut, Present, Ellen H., Examiner for colts without records; Graceful George in the pacing race, four-year-old free-for-all; Lou S. in Stanford stakes; Silas Skinner, 2:15 stallion race; Ned Locke, 2:25 stallion race; Robin, Examiner, 3:00 stallion race.

We think that the Breeder and Sportsman hit the nail fairly and squarely on the head in its able editorial entitled "Mixed Racing a Necessity." We have observed racing in connection with agricultural societies in six States, and the experience has been about the same everywhere. The conclusion drawn is that if an agricultural society wishes to draw a big crowd it must have good racing, and it must not be confined to trotting and pacing. As many persons enjoy a running race as do trotting and pacing, and the society should seek to please all classes.

James Biggins, residing near Lakeville, has in Sonoma Boy one of the best young horses in Sonoma county. He was sired by Mariner, dam by Shannon. Last fall he was fortunate in winning a number of first premiums for the best two-year-old thoroughbred. At Sacramento he carried off the blue ribbon in his class. He has been entered in the three-year-old stakes at Chicago, and, we understand, will go East with Dan McCarty's string.

George Guerne's friends were congratulating him last week as they read in the dispatches that his Anteeo stallion G. & M. had been sold in Kentucky for $10,000. Mr. Guerne is one of our horsemen who never loses his grip. He pursues the even tenor of his way firm in the belief that there is money in the breeding of the trotting horse, and we are glad that he is beginning to reap some of the substantial fruits of the business.

The Santa Rosa Trotting Horse Club will endeavor to get up a spring stock exhibit sometime in April. It is the desire of the club that every breeder in Sonoma couuty send as many horses as he can and enter them in the show. Every man who owns a stallion, mare or colt will be asked to exhibit his animal. It is believed that much good will result in bringing together so many fine horses and so many enterprising horsemen.

Last week we accepted the invitation of J. H. Newton and took a ride with him out to his new farm, about two miles from Santa Rosa on the Petaluma road. Mr. Newton is an enthusiast on the trotting horse, and is never happier than when showing his stock to his friends. He has only been living at his present place a few months, but in that time has changed the appearance of his farm greatly by the introduction of many improvements. He has many more in contemplation, and when they are completed Mr. Newton will have one of the handsomest homes in the country.

But it is of Mr. Newton's horses that we propose to write. First on his list is his three-year-old stallion Antevero, by Antevolo. Antevero is a beautiful dark bay, and in general conformation is said to resemble his illustrious grandsire, Electioneer. His first dam was by Whippleton, second dam by Belle Alta, third dam by Oregon Yank and fourth dam by Kentucky, thoroughbred. The breeding is good enough, and, as an individual, Antevero is unobjectionable. He stands 15 3-4 hands in front, 16 1-4 hands behind and weighs 1,045 pounds. He is a pure-gaited fellow, and will be given two months' steady training this season.

Mayfield, sired by Menlo Fallis, he by Fallis, Fallis by Electioneer, is a very promising two-year-old stallion. He is a light bay, and Mr. Newton assures us that he is one of the sweetest-tempered and best-gaited young horse he ever saw. He has been jogged a good deal, and goes off at a rattling clip. Mayfield is a very intelligent youngster, and will certainly prove to be a valuable sire.

Among the mares at Newton's farm was seen Kittie, formerly owned by James King, of San Francisco, and which was one of King's celebrated roadsters. Kittie is seventeen years old, was sired by Norfolk, and her dam was Princess Royal, she by Hancock's Hambletonian. Standing near her was her yearling colt Lack Me, sired by Eros, sire of Wanda. The little trotter gives indications of being full of speed, and is the apple of Mr. Newton's eye.

Flora G., by Washington, a standard-bred mare seven years old, is one of the best matrons in the country. She is a pacer, and has been very fast. She is now in foal to Brown Jug, and playing at her side is a frisky little black weanling sired by Brown Jug that paces very fast.

Besides the horses already enumerated, Mr. Newton has Alice N., dam Renie, a two-year-old filly, standard-bred, by Noonday, by Wedgewood; Noonday's dam by Noontide, he by Harold, sire of Maud S. Alice N. will be given a record before she is bred. Then there is a splendid yearling by Eros, dam Rene. This little fellow is a half-brother of Antevero, and we have it from Mr. Newton "that he is very sweet on him," for he is an exceptionally good youngster. Mr. Newton has a number of other good horses of less pretentious breeding, but of these we will not write at present. He is one of the best-posted horsemen in the county, and is liberal in his opinions. He sees the good in all of the different families of horses, and does not allow his preferences to become prejudices.

Winter Racing at Oakland.

Unless signs fail, the Garfield Park Club, Chicago, Ill., will hold a protracted winter meeting at Oakland, commencing December 1st next. When it was announced a few days ago that the club had decided to open a winter track at San Francisco many were inclined to make fun of the story. It developes, however, that there was more to it than appears on the surface, says a Chicago exchange.

Al Hankins, who has been near the course the greater part of the winter, returned Monday night. He was at the Garfield Park Club office, and spoke freely about the prospects of winter racing on the coast.

"I have looked over the ground carefully," he said, "and am convinced that a protracted winter meeting would be a go there. There is the loveliest racing weather all through the winter than any one could ask for, and the people would, I am sure, turn out in great numbers.

"The trouble with racing on the coast has been that the association could not obtain horses. In many instances they have had to go round begging for entries in order to secure three and four starters for a race. A meeting cannot be successfully conducted on these conditions. If we decided to race there next winter, I should, at the end of the racing season here, secure a special train, and offer owners free transportation direct to San Francisco for their horses.

"I think they would jump at the chance to winter their strings in such a climate with the offered chance of picking up stable expenses at our track. There would in that way be no trouble about securing big fields of starters, and that has been all that has kept the sport back on the coast. We can secure a track as convenient to San Francisco as Garfield Park is to Chicago, with excellent facilities for transporting the people to and from it."

"Would you or would the Garfield Park Club handle the track?"

"The club, of course. I have not presented my report to it formally, and nothing will be done, probably, until George returns from Europe, but I have no doubt the club will take up the matter and put it to a successful issue."

The Oakland track will doubtless be secured.

Raising Colts on Cow's Milk.

It quite frequently happens that by the loss of the dam a colt has to be raised "by hand" upon cow's milk. Without knowing anything about the management of such an experiment it proves a failure, or at least not as much of a success as it ought. On this subject an exchange says:

It is not a difficult matter to raise a foal upon cow's milk when proper care is taken in preparing the milk, and it is given frequently in small quantities. New milk should be given at first, and should be about blood warm, say from 98 to 100 degrees Fahrenheit. Most foals can be taught to drink the same as a calf. If the milk is slightly sweetened with sugar or molasses the youngster will relish it better than if given clear. About one pint at a feed is sufficient at first, and a teaspoonful of lime water should be added to each feed to keep the stomach in good condition. This precaution is very important, and the lives of many valuable colts have been lost through a lack of observing it. Directions for preparing lime water were given a few weeks since, but lest our correspondent may not have them at hand, are repeated. Stir four ounces of freshly burned lime into a gallon of water. Put aside until it settles, then pour off the clear solution into a stone jug, cork and keep in a cool cellar. No farmer who raises calves or colts should be without this. If the colt is very weak add two or three teaspoonfuls of brandy, whisky or other spirits until it revives. The diet of the celebrated stallion George Wilkes, which was brought up by hand, consisted of fresh cow's milk sweetened with loaf sugar, to which was added at first a little Jamaica rum. Be careful to see that the bowels are in proper condition. Young foals are often unable to pass the meconium, and sometimes die from this cause. An injection of from a half-pint to a pint of lukewarm water, given by means of a small rubber bulb syringe, is the most simple and effective remedy for this difficulty. It acts quicker than a dose of oil, and is far less injurious to the patient. The foal should be fed every three hours during the first two weeks of its life. When the milk is not given directly from the cow, the cream should be stirred in before warming. Care should be used to see that it is not given too warm, as that is liable to produce relaxation of the bowels or scouring. An excellent remedy for this complaint when it does exist, is to beat up an egg and add to the milk. If this does not produce the desired effect, boil one-fourth of a pint of flaxseed slowly in two quarts of water until cooked, then add a half-pint each of shorts and oat meal. Boil a short time, making a gruel. Give a half pint of this and a half-pint of milk for a feed instead of a pint of milk. As the colt grows and his appetite increases, the ration should be correspondingly increased. After he is a few weeks old skimmed milk can be gradually substituted for new without detriment. In fact, skimmed milk is better for growing foals than that from which the cream has not been removed, as it contains a larger portion of bone and muscle producing element. Whole milk is apt to fatten them too much. After the colt is a month old a smaller proportion of lime water will be required. A tablespoonful to a gallon of milk will then be sufficient, and it can soon be omitted entirely.

CONTROL OF SEX.

How to Determine Sex of a Prospective Foal by Calendar Calculation.

Animals are creatures of habit. We are made aware of this fact by observing the tendency of an animal to repeat an action once done by it, whether optional or compulsory, and by our own inclinations to become so forcibly established. Obstetricians will know that the womb exhibits this trait, as in malpresentations.

This disposition is easily shown to be one of the characteristic laws of the nervous system, without which intellectual development would be impossible. It is termed reflex action, and is divisable into primary and secondary, or acquired reflex action. The latter consists of acts which require for their first and many subsequent repetitions an effort of will, but which finally are habitually and mechanically performed without the exercise of consciousness and volition. As instances we may take reading, writing, walking, etc. There is a beaten track along which the nerve force travels with much greater ease on each repetition.

As an example of the first or primary, we may cite sucking, contraction of the pupil, drawing up of the leg when the toes are tickled, and many others performed as perfectly by the infant as the adult. We may cite, also, the periodicity of malarial diseases, or the impulses of defection coming on at the same hour each day in persons who cultivate this habit.

The habit of the ovaries to individually develop ova alternately is characteristic of primary reflex action. If it were not for this law governing the ovaries, the opposite one from the one fecundated would invariably be the first to develop an ovum after each period of gestation, and, as a result, the sexes would be alternately produced, but inasmuch as the ovaries are controlled by this law of alternating, or periodicity, they normally develop alternately every twenty-one days in the mare, and, as a result, if a foal is delivered close to the period belonging to the one last producing, it will be the first to again develop.

If I understand "Hawkeye," he was governed by the idea that after one ovary had developed an ovum, say the right one, and it had become fecundated and its foetus expelled the first period of heat, which usually occurs on the seventh, eighth or ninth day following, would necessarily be caused by the left ovary developing an ovum, and therefore he should get a foal of the opposite sex. I hold that the opposite ovary is not necessarily the one to first develep an ovum, and right here is where the calendar is to help him, as by it he is to learn which ovary is the one that will first develop, in normal cases.

Experiment No. 1.—Mare came in use on April 2. She was served and conceived, and on the 20th of the following March she foaled a filly. This was evidence that on the 2d of April the ovary which produced the female ova was in season. Continuing twenty-one days from April 2d, we have April 23d as the period which would have found her in use again, if she had not conceived on April 2d, and if she had been bred on April 23d she would have foaled a horse colt.

By referring to the calendar we can formulate a table for this mare like the following:

Female.		Male.
April	2	April	23
May	14	June	4
June	25	July	16
August	6	August	27
September	17	October	8
October	29	November	19
December	10	December	31
January	22	February	12
March	5	March	26

As this filly was foaled March 20th, two-thirds of the normal menstrual period had elapsed, therefore the first season of use again would be caused by the opposite, or male-producing ovary, and if bred in nine days from foaling, or on the 29th, would in due time be delivered of a horse colt. She exhibited symptoms of being in use again on the seventh day from foaling, or on the 27th of the month. She was not bred then, and we continue to formulate the table in this style:

Female.		Male.
April	17	March	27
May	29	May	8
July	10	June	19
August	21	July	31

She came in use on August 15th, which was fifteen days after the period normally the one when the male-producing ovary should develop, and within six days of August 21st, which should be the normal period when the female-producing ovary should develop. Evidently she had varied either six days from one period or fifteen days, from the other. Concluding it was a variation of six days as this was the shortest period and therefore the one most likely from which the devlation had been made, she was served and conceived, and on the 25th of the following July was delivered of a filly foal, as anticipated. When this foal was three months old the mare died, thus ending experiment No. 1.

Experiment No. 2.—Mare was bred on March 10th, and conceived. On the 14th of the following March she foaled a horse colt, which was evidence that on March 10th the ovary producing males was in season, and from the calander we compiled the following table:

Male.		Female.
March	10	March	31
April	21	May	12
June	2	June	23
July	14	August	4
August	25	September	15
October	6	October	27
November	17	December	8
December	29	January	2
February	10	March	3
March	24

On March 17 she was delivered of the horse colt, and on the ninth day after she came in use again, which was the 22d inst. The male ovary was due to develop on March 24th, but she came in use on March 23, therefore our table goes on like this:

Male.		Female.
March	23	April	13
May	4	May	25
June	15	July	6
July	27

On July 31st she was in use, served and conceived, four days after the date the table shows she should be in use, due to the ripening of the male-producing ovary, and as this was so close to that time the production of a male was to be expected. It was conclusive that the development of the male-producing ovary had been delayed, and, as a result of this conclusion, a horse colt was delivered.

To recapitulate, the ovary that has produced the last foal may be the one to first again develop an ovum, or it may be the opposite one. This can only be learned by the table made from the calendar, based upon the twenty-one days which normally exists between the development of the ovaries.—J. A. S., in Clark's Horse Review.

Uses and Abuses of Bandages.

There is one practice among horsemen that I think is more or less abused and in compliance with request I will express my opinion in the columns of your paper.

The first thing to be considered is what are the uses of bandages? Among a great many they are used because it is customary among horsemen to use them and they, through lack of thought and consideration, cause to be detrimental and hurtful, an appliance, which, if properly handled, would be invaluable.

Bandages may be applied for several purposes, viz., to prevent fever, or reduce it if present, also they may be applied as a support to the limb and a preserver of the symmetrical appearance of it.

These are advantages claimed for the bandage, and if in the hands of thonghtful men will fill the bill, but in the hands of some will prove to be a detriment and hurtful, which I will try to verify.

All who make the subject a study will understand that each exertion made by any animal, either human or otherwise, causes the destruction of a great amount of tissue, which, in the healthy subject is replaced by the blood which flows freely through every tissue of the body, giving to every individual tissue that nourishment requires. Now apply a bandage tightly around the leg of a horse; so tightly that the animal shows signs of uneasiness and pain, as I have frequently seen caused by the compression on the delicate structures. Allow that to remain there for a length of time, remove it, and apply again through the day for months continuously. The result must be injury and weakness to the part as it cannot receive the natural supply of blood to replace the tissue exhausted by exertion. Pursue the same mode of operation with any member of the anatomy and notice the result. For instance notice the barbarous practice among a heathen nation of confining one foot in bandages, the result is that the member does not develop, and while the foot that is allowed free access to space becomes strong and healthy, the one in confinement is weak and puny, and unable to endure as much exertion as its fellow.

The leg of a horse is looked upon by a great majority of people in a trifling manner, and treated as something not very sensitive or delicate, but I am satisfied that all who understand the structures inclosed within the delicate skin of a highly-bred horse will agree with me on this subject, and if more of our drivers will take the trouble to inform themselves as to the composition and general make-up of the horse, it will be a profitable as well as an interesting study, and will save our equine friends many unnecessary aches and pains which they are compelled to endure, being dumb, and unable to speak their troubles in words, but indeed, may be well and easily understood in their dumb alphabet.

The injurious results of excessive bandaging are not always visible, as each leg receives a proportionate amount of it, and the subject is unable to describe the weakness and lack of power he feels in his limbs, but a careful consideration of the matter will satisfy intelligent people that excessive bandaging is detrimental. Several cases have come under my notice, where the symptoms of weakness were very plain, and did not require a very careful examination to reveal the cause of it, the history of the care the animal had received being in itself sufficient to base a diagnosis on.—W. A. Nixon, V. S., in Rural World.

Vancouver's New Race Track.

The movement looking to the establishment of a new race track at Vancouver, mention of which has been made in recent issues of the Register, has assumed definite shape in the organization here of the Vancouver Driving Park Association.

A tract of fifty acres of land has been secured on Vancouver Heights from the Columbia Land & Improvement Co., and articles of incorporation have been filed with a capital stock of $50,000. Following are the incorporators: P. C. MacFarlane, E. W. Bier, Jay Beach, M. L. Coovert, J. R. Wintler, J. B. Smith, N. H. Bloomfield, A. B. Eastham, L. B. Clough, A. J. Cook, O. M. Hidden, J. W. Wentworth and Gay S. B. Hayden.

There will be 2,000 shares of stock, at $25 per share. About 30 per cent of the stock will be paid up and the amount expended in preparing a regulation mile track, erecting grand and judges' stands, stables, sheds, etc. It is intended to make the track the best in the Pacific Northwest. The soil makes it possible here to have an all winter track, which will be duly appreciated by the horsemen of both Oregon and Washington, and this the association is determined to have.

The price of the land is $30,000, and the association has ten years to make the payment, at 3 1-3 per cent interest, which is considered a very liberal proposition on the part of the C. L. & I. Co., as a portion of the land is already platted, and has been selling at $200 per lot. The new track will be within one block of the V. K. & Y. R. R. road, and within two block of the Height street car line.

The following are the officers of the association: F. W. Bier, President; Jay Beach, Vice-President; M. L. Coovert, Secretary; P. C. MacFarlane, Treasurer. Trustees, Jay Beach, P. C. MacFarlane, F. W. Bier, J. B. Smith, Gay S. B. Hayden, N. H. Bloomfield and M. L. Coovert.

On Tuesday evening over one-fourth of the stock was at once subscribed, and it is believed all the stock will be taken within a few days. The low price at which the land is secured alone makes it not only a safe but a good investment of money. As soon as all the stock is taken, work will be commenced on the track and buildings, and an August meeting is already talked of. At the October meeting here, Vancouver horsemen propose to show the horsemen of the Northwest the finest equipped race course north of San Francisco.—Vancouver Register.

Reports from Memphis say that J. M. Brown & Co.'s two-year-old colt G. W. Johnson (brother to Ed Corrigan's Huron) is a real crack, and many horsemen go so far as to say that he is the best one of his age ever trained at Montgomery Park. He cost $3,500 at the Belle Meade yearling sale last year.

The Bellfounder or Charles Kent Mare.

Since the great producer of trotters, Hambletonian, has attracted such marked attention in the horse world, writers of every age and many countries have devoted countless pages to extol his matchless merits, but to my surprise they have all failed to mention the still more matchless merit of his dam, the Charles Kent Mare, as she is familiarly called, merely mentioning her as such, but there stop and say no more about her. Why is this? Does this wonderful mare deserve to become simply passive and almost quite forgotten in history, one of the greatest of the great, one through whose influence alone we are indebted for the phenomenal speed of the American trotter? Not one in ten thousand who read horse history know her only as the Charles Kent mare. Doubtless there are many who can give her history, breeding, etc., as well as I can, but, at your request, I will try and do so.

In the early fall of 1846, if memory serves me right, while studying my vocation with the celebrated Dr. Budd, veterinary surgeon, 48 Mercer and 48 East 13th streets, New York, there was brought to the hospital, 48 East 13th street, a bay horse, and put in my charge. In course of time I commenced to exercise him to saddle on the road. There were not so many places to ride or drive in those days as at present. There were only Third avenue and the Bloomingdale road.

I can never forget one forenoon, when, going up Third avenue, my horse started up suddenly at the noise of a vehicle close behind, and before I could control him was showing quite a little burst of speed. But the cause of it all was there too. I had heard my nag was quite a mover, and now that I had a chance to find out, boy-like, I let him go, and for a little while we had quite a tussle. The weight soon told on my opponent, and his nag made a break. But what was my surprise when I found it was Dan Sweeny that was driving.

Mr. Sweeny said, "Hello, John, what horse is that? I think I know him. What horse is it? He's quite a stepper."

"Yes," I said, "Mr. Sweeny, they say he can go well, but were you rigged as he is I don't know as I could beat you. You have a good one, too."

"Perhaps you could," said S., but what horse is it?"

"This, Mr. S., is the horse they call Young Americus."

"So it is, so it is," said S., "I thought I knew him."

By this time I thought he was driving a mare, and remarked again, "Your mare can go some, too, don't you think so?"

"Well," said S., "we always thought she could go well. I had not driven her for some time, Charley (Charles Kent) generally drives her. But I had a little business up-town today, so I drove, and to tell the truth, she suits me, and I am very sorry she is so heavy weighted."

I inquired of him where he got her. He replied that she "came from the place where they made the yellow butter, Orange County, and was by imported Bellfounder, out of a thoroughbred mare."

I now stopped to go back, when Mr. Sweeney said to me: "No, you must come up to the Four-mile House. I want to treat you, for that brush is worth a dozen treats. You can't go." The Four-mile House was kept by one of the best known men in those days, Bill Sparks. When we got to the house, Mr. S. gave his mare in charge of Jimmy, the head groom; then going in, he brought me out a mug of ale, which I drank without dismounting. The news soon got rumored around that we had had a tilt up the road, and in a day or two many came to the stable to see if the horse I had charge of was Young Americus, and also to interview me about him.

Not long afterwards Messrs. Sweeny and Kent went over at John I. Sneideker's, near the Union Course, Long Island. They had the brown mare with them. When in the course of the conversation the brush on the road with Young Americus came up, and some one suggested that it would be a good idea to go over to the course and give the mare a mile to saddle, to which the boys (Kent and Sweeny), as they were called in those days, consented. The mare was unhitched from the wagon, a saddle put on her, and Bill Whelan mounted, when to their surprise, the first time of asking, she trotted the mile in 2:42.

Now, Mr. Editor, taking all things into consideration, 2:42 in those days, made by a horse used daily in a butcher's cart, we say was a great performance, and not one horse in a thousand could do it at that time, under those circumstances, nor even at the present day.

It will be remembered that Dan Sweeny and Charley Kent were in the butcher business together, and this mare had to do her share of the work. When the time the mare made became known by horsemen many offers were made by several drivers who wanted to get her, but that was the first and only time she ever trotted on the track. The nag that trotted that mile in 2:42 deserves more than a passing notice; but still she is only known as the Charles Kent mare.

In my next, I will try to show that this mare, which, in my opinion, was the potent spoke in the speed wheel of the American trotter, deserves more credit in the annals of trotting.—John Minchin, in Horse Breeder.

Electioneer Ahead in Europe.

I notice in a recent issue that you state Aspacia is the fastest two-year-old in Europe. I beg leave to correct you in regard to this, as I have the fastest two-year-old on this side of the water and he was sired by no dunghill, either. His name is Emigrant, he being the first colt by Electioneer to come this side of the ocean. His dam is Theora. We bought him at the Palo Alto sale for $2,500. I worked him a little in his two-year-old form and drove him at our mile track a repeat in 2:36 and 2:26½. But don't think from this it is a Cleveland track. It is partly covered with grass. This spring I will let him cover five mares—Blue Bell, 2:21½; Lottie W., 2:21½; Gypsie Queen, 2:19¼; Julia C., 2:22¾, and Blanch B., 2:30. We will see if we can't raise some good inlanders. We have the horse, also the mares. My horses are all O. K. Yours respectfully,

Jos. B. Heideger, in Clark's Horse Review.

"I shall never stop racing until I win an American Derby," says Colonel J. E. Pepper, the Kentucky turfman. "I had one of them won with Blue Wing once. People will remember the race. My boy was lying alongside Ben Ali, thinking he had only him to beat. Isaac Murphy, who was on Silver Cloud, seeing an opening and noting what a slow pace was being set, cut loose and opened up a dozen lengths in a hundred yards. Blue Wing could not quite get up, and was just beaten. It is pretty tough to lose a race by bad jockeyship, but I'll land an American Derby yet."

TURF AND TRACK.

Among the recent inventions is a three-wheeled buggy.

William East will handle Poscora Hayward this year.

Nat Groton is expected in Humboldt on the next steamer with a stallion.

Sunol goes into the hands of Marvin at Meadville, Pa., about the 1st of May.

One two-year-old in the list counts to-day for more than thrice that number of aged trotters in 2:25.

Shaner is handling an easy-going mare for Mr. Gonzales by Whipple's Hambletonian, dam by Norwood.

F. C. Anderton has a two-year-old filly by Memo out of an Elmo mare that will trot in 2:30 this fall.

Hunt Bros., Butte, Montana, have purchased of A. G. Fell, Ogden, Utah, Luck, by Elector, for $1,000.

Any man who ever owned a balky horse will tell you that he found the animal exceedingly hard to get along with.

About fifteen entries were sent from Rohnerville to Eureka March 1st in the yearling, two-year-old and three-year-old stakes.

The kite track at Meadville, Pa., where Marvin is to train, is being widened 25 feet on the stretches and 15 feet on the turns.

Twelve years ago Red Wilkes stood for $20 by the season, or $30 to insure, now he serves only a few very choice mares at $1000.

C. A. Harrison, of Tacoma, called in to see us. He reports that the trotting horse industry is becoming greater every year in that new State.

Lamb Bros., of Rohnerville, have several promising colts, including some with crosses of Poscora Hayward, Grand Moor, Waldstein and Dudley.

Gus Marquam, of Portland, Or., has lost Kitty Rockwood by death. She was in foal to Altamont, by whom she leaves a yearling colt, Kedah.

Galindo, the gray California colt by Gano out of the good Freda, is second choice for the American Derby, at Chicago, Azra being the favorite at 8 to 1.

Alcantara is insured for $40,000 against death, and the premium amounts to $3,200 a year. The premium is about as large as the average man's policy.

Erector, by Director, dam Millie D., by Mambrino Gift, recently purchased at Lexington, has arrived in Maury county, Tenn., and has been put in training.

B. F. Langford, of San Joaquin county, has booked that game mare Hazel Kirke, 2:24, to Directum, the son of Director and Stemwinder, by Venture, 2:27¼.

Steineer, brother to Charles Derby, 2:20, is showing up encouragingly in his work. The other day he worked out his mile easily in 2:34 at the Bay District course.

Wayland W. has grown to be a powerful horse. If this grandson of Guy Wilkes is worked for a record this fall, it will be a fleet one that throws dirt in his face.

Indianapolis, 2:21, was twelve years ot age before he was bred to a mare. He made five seasons, and we understand his first two crops of colts were of but little value.

Charles Marvin, whose future work will be on the Meadville kite-track, has bought the George Wallace residence in Meadville for $12,000—one-third its value.

Margaret S., 2:12¼, will be bred to Axtell, 2:12, and afterward will be campaigned. Her dam, May Day, who also produced Incas, 2.14½, will be bred to Direct this year.

Exorbitant stallion fees received quite a shock when Allerton colts would bring scarce an even $1,000 at public auction with the barons of the industry thick on every hand.

The owners of colts from Idaho Patchen need feel no alarm about selling the same. He is a producer as well as an honest trotter. Maud Patchen's 2:25¼ record shows that.

The noted racehorse Once Again, by Onondaga, that figured in many of the big stakes of 1889, fell in a race at Guttenberg on Monday and broke his leg. He was owned by the Boden stable.

Ground was broken at Tulare, Cal., last Tuesday, March 8th, for a kite-shaped race track. The ground is naturally moist, and the track is expected to be one of the best in the State.

The roan pacer B. B., that created a sensation in 1890 by lapping Hal Pointer out a mile in 2:09¾, has been bought by a Boston horseman, and hereafter will be used wholly as a driving horse.

Young Rolfe, 2:21¼, died at the age of eight years and left but thirty-two foals, among which we find Nelson, 2:10; Aubine, 2:19½; Medora, 2:20¼; Present, 2:23½; Mountaineer, 2:23¾, and Daisy Rolfe, 2:26¾.

Miss Russell is still living, and has 174 decendants with records from 2:08¾ to 2:30. She has more 2:30 descendants than any stallion ever had while living. She has just recently dropped another fine colt by King Wilkes.

At Memphis the two-year-old colt, C. H. Gillock, full brother to Reporter, has worked a quarter in 23 seconds, while Lookout, one of the oldest of the get of the famous Troubadour, has covered the same distance in 26¼ seconds.

There are fifteen good two-year-olds to fill that class at Rohnerville with this year. This results from the "hay-seed" races last year that brought out so many yearlings. The Agricultural Society should profit by this lesson.

F. C. Anderton has five colts by Alect, a son of Richards' Elector, that will surpass their grandsire in one respect—they will all go in the 2:30 list, and they are his first crop of colts, too. The boys in South San Francisco are sweet on one of them, which is called Anderton.

Bay District track is now nearly trotterless. Thoroughbreds are coming in, and as the track will be harrowed up and made soft to the touch of the gallopers, the owners of trotters have been forced to seek pastures new and race tracks hard.

Nancy Hanks is wintering finely, and it is stated that if Mr. Bonner starts Sunol at Cleveland next season for a cup Mr. Forbes would like to start Nancy the same day on the same track so as to make some comparisons between the two mares as to speed.

The game trotting stallion Victor, 2:22, by Echo, and known as "Old Hayseed," in charge of John I. Jones, went to Reno last week. He will remain there and at Carson during the spring. Victor has proven himself a great horse, and is popular in Nevada.

Roseland, the colt by Blue Eyes, out of Missive, that was the crack two-year-old of 1890, but was a failure in his three-year-old form, after J. M. Brown bought him for $10,000, is showing his old-time speed this spring, and will probably show good form this year.

L. J. Rose is well entered for the New York Jockey Club meeting, which comes off at Morris Park. Fairy and Sir Roy are in the principal handicap and stake races. Mr. Rose has entered Motto for the Fort Hamilton Handicap, and she has been weighted at ninety pounds.

Humboldt claims the honor of possessing in Waldstein a horse answering the conditions inquired for by a recent querist. First dam Nellie W., dam of Waldstein, 2:25¼; second dam Sister, dam of Albert W., 2:20, and Bonanza, 2:29¼; third dam Lamott mare, dam of Aurora, 2:27.

The much-touted colt Faraday, half brother to Teuton and Alli Blue, has been put in training for the Kentucky Derby He is owned by M. D. Richardson, who has the distinction of having bred both winners of the Wheeler Handicap, the great all-aged event at Washington Park.

The colt Fred S. Wilkes that last fall beat Belle Archer, 2:15¼; Dr. Sparks, 2:18¼, and Stella Belmont will be sent to Buffalo soon to be trained by Ed. Geers. Mr. Geers will also have the much-touted three-year-old pacer Blue Hal, by Brown Hal, 2:12½, dam by Blue Bull.

Lee Shaner's string of twenty trotters left Bay District track for Petaluma last Monday. In the lot was the great Almont Medium, the wonderful Commodore yearling, Mark Medium and Manning. The thoroughbreds will soon have complete possession of Bay District course.

Willie Johnson, of Rohnerville, Cal., will begin in a short time driving colts. He has seven to begin with, including Sadie Moor, that took third money at the Humboldt fair last year, though handled by her owner, L. Feigenbaum, who had never driven a horse around a track.

Adolph B. Spreckles has bred the Australian thoroughbred mare Repose to the Palo Alto stallion Peel (by Monday, dam Precious, by Lever). Repose is by Apremont, dam Hammock, by Orest. The result should be a "cracker-jack," if breeding and individuality go for anything.

Old John Treat made his debut at New Orleans in a mile handicap. He was the favorite and was heavily backed. He was never in it from first to last. The party behind the old gray gelding is probably not ready just yet to give the horse's form away, when the purse is only about $200.

At present when there is no excuse for breeding to a horse that does not possess good blood and good qualities, we advise the public to breed to the horse whose owners advertise their stallions and who make the greatest efforts towards bringing them prominently before the public.

Talisman, by Brown Hal, 2:12½, out of the dam of Hal Pointer, 2:09¾, is being driven by Alex. McKay for the purpose of giving him a low mark. The horse is moving finely. Major Brown, his owner, thinks there will be no trouble in giving this son of Brown Hal a mark below 2:20.

The veteran jockey, William Hayward, Sr., has been engaged to ride for the season of 1892 for the Burridge Brothers, while the son, Wm. Hayward Jr., has grown so large that it is improbable that he can continue to practice the profession of a jockey, his weight being now about 160 pounds.

Athalie, dam of Athadon, foaled a stallion colt last week by Junio. George L. Warlow, the fortunate owner, then refused an offer of $1,500 for the youngster. If the colt turns out to have such nimble heels as Athadon possesses, George will have as great a pair of goers as the world has seen.

Colonel Harry I. Thornton has a good colt in the two-year-old by imp. Darebin out of Carrie C., by Monday. It is claimed that the youngster has shown such fast trials that many declare him to be the greatest colt ever foaled in California. Eighths in 11 seconds at this time of year "will do."

More trotters with fast records have changed hands since the close of the trotting season than was ever sold before in so short a space of time. The most noted are Nancy Hanks, 2:09; Arion, 2:10¼; Jack, 2:12¼; Margaret S., 2:12½; Mary Marshall, 2:12¾. These four represent about one-tenth of the 2:15 trotters.

W. C. Jones, of Columbia, Tenn., who two years ago bought a half interest in the chestnut stallion McEwen, 2:18¼, for $12,500, has disposed of it to Major Brown, who owns Brown Hal. McEwen will be put in training again this season, and as he has trotted a half in 1:05, it is expected he will take a low record.

Another device for improving the high-stepping action of horses are spectacles, which are especially constructed by a firm in London. They have been used on the hunters in England with good effect. The spectacles are made of stiff leather, quite enclosing the eye of the horse, and the glasses employed give the ground in front of the horse the appearance of being raised, therefore causing the animal to step high.

Hatch & Perrott, of Rohnerville, Cal., have duplicated the offer of B. H. McNeil, having deposited $200 for the yearling sired by any of their horses that wins the yearling race at the Humboldt fair, and it is reported that Henry Cooper, the owner of Ira, offers to each and everyone of Ira's colts that win a race $100.

One of the best two-year-old colts in Tennessee is the bay youngster they call Allada by Alcazar, 2:20½, dam Helen by Kentucky Prince; second dam by George Wilkes. This fellow is the property of A. H. Robinson and is being trained by Gill Curry. He is level-headed, square-gaited and game, and trots—oh, my, how he can cover the ground.

It can now fairly be said that the trotting season in this country never ends, as on the 1st of January, 1891, two horses entered the 2:30 list at Denver, Col., they being Clara Belle, 2:29½, by Masterlode, and Dora W., 2:30, by Hirsch's Belmont, and on December 31, 1891, the trotting meeting at Phœnix, Ariz., came to a successful close.

One of the fruits of "admitting the pacer to the standard" is shown in some of the stallion advertisements of late, wherein the records of produce, whether pacers or trotters, are inserted without any distinguishing mark or difference in type, as has been the case heretofore. This innovation may be justifiable, but it looks as though it were intended to deceive.

The latest betting to hand on the English Derby is as follows: 9 to 4 against Orme, 100 to 14 against La Fleche, 20 to 1 against Galeopsis, 28 to 1 against Cellarer. It is said Jack Watts may have the mount on Orme, both for the Guineas and the Derby. Watts races with his head, so to speak, and can be relied on not to make any mistake in his judgment.

Mr. Shaw, a prominent Oregon breeder, refused $2,500 for Directwood, two-year-old son of Director Jr., last week. Director Jr. will make a big season at San Rafael this year. A number of royally-bred Oregon mares have been sent down to him. He is well known up North, and is declared by competent judges to be the handsomest son of the "Black Tornado."

The great driver, John A. Goldsmith has been at the point of death at San Mateo Stock Farm since his return from New York, and his many friends fear for the result. We trust, however, that with the banishment of the rain god and chilly weather and the return of smiling skies and Old Sol Mr. Goldsmith may be benefited and get back his wonted health and strength.

Rouse & Miser, of Rohnerville, Cal., have started a training stable, fitted up some stalls in fine shape, purchased a complete outfit of harness of all sorts, boots, sulkies, etc., and are working some of the most promising two-year-olds in Northern California, including two Poscora colts from such dams as Lady Macbeth, 2:26½, and Modjeska, considered the best mare in Humboldt county.

A down-hill track is to be built at Sedalia, Mo., that is expected to "beat the world." Instead of the track crossing itself at the starting and finishing points, the starting and finishing stretches will run parallel and about ten or fifteen feet apart. By this arrangement an easy down grade will be established, making the finish at the wire five feet lower than the grade of the starting point.

The spring meeting of the Latah County Agricultura Fair Association, Moscow, Idaho, begins on June 21st and ends June 24th. There will be trotting, pacing and running—three races each day—and the added money ranges from $100 to $300. Moscow is getting to be quite a racing center, and a number of good stock farms are situated near this place. George Bremer is manager for the Fair Association.

The track committee of the Eureka Jockey Club, of which Dr. Gross is chairman, will soon commence work on the South Park track and have it put in the best of condition for the coming season. Several colt and other stakes will be announced in a few days, and the club intends doing everything to keep awake a spirit of emulation among the breeders and owners of fast stock in Humboldt county.

A. Smith McCann, of Fairlawn Farm, Lexington, Ky., has bought from Miller & Sibley, of Franklin, Pa., the six-year-old trotting stallion May King, 2:23½, by Electioneer—May Queen, 2:20 (dam of Maiden, 2:23, as a three-year-old), by Alexander's Norman. The price paid is just $12,000. After making a short season he will be campaigned, for the reason that Marvin thinks him very fast.

Miss Russell, by Pilot Jr., and Maggie Gaines, by Blood's Black Hawk, are the only mares that have each produced two stallions that have sired trotters with records better than 2:16. The former is the dam of Nutwood (sire of Lockheart 2:14¾) and Nutbourne (sire of Cheyenne, 2:15½), and the latter is the dam of Hamlin's Almont, Jr., (sire of Belle Hamlin 2:12¾) and Allie Gaines (sire of Jessie Gaines 2:15¾).

The American Trotter says that if tin-cup records were stricken out no Electioneer would be found among the champions. It gives Axtell the three-year-old race record of 2:14. We call our contemporary with Sunol, 2:10½, made in a stake race at that age. It is true it was a walkover, but the fact that others were unwilling to start and be distanced does not make it any the less a race record. Be fair, brother!

We have not thought much of the National Trotting Register Association since we learned that the Parker-Mali coterie were running it, but our Eastern and Western contemporaries howl, growl and sneer so furiously that it looks as though there were something back of it that is worth growling at. What is it, gentlemen? Is it the shutting out of the pacer from their standard that makes you so snappish?

Robert Steele, Cedar Park Stock Farm, Philadelphia, has recently purchased fifteen fillies from two to four years of age, by Nutbourne, brother to Nutwood, 2:18¾, out of choice mares, intending to breed them to Woodnut, 2:16¼; Epaulet, 2:19, and Pedlar, 2:27¾. Mr. Steele has recently sold Hollowood, b c (2), by Woodnut, dam Fascination, by Santa Claus, and four mares bred to Woodnut, one by Electioneer, one by Piedmont, by Guy Wilkes, and one by Nutwood.

We received this week the catalogue of Lomo Alto Farm, Dallas, Texas. At the head of this stud stands Electrite 10,878 (brother to Sphinx, 2:20½, and Egotist, 2:22½), by Electioneer, dam Sprite, by Belmont 64. The other stallions are Talmage 4094, Comal 17,305, and Newaygo 9192. The owner of this establishment, Henry Exall, evidently knows the value of gilt-edged stock in a breeding establishment, and not only this, but realizes that a beautiful catalogue is a good thing to get out. This one is simply magnificent.

RUSSIA, of all countries in Europe has been the most ardent supporter of the trotter. Last year Moscow alone gave nearly $60,000 in stakes and purses, and this year the same city has instituted a trotting Derby, with $12,500 added. St. Petersburg has offered r purse of $3,000, while Odessa gives several rich purses.

DAN MCCARTY is very "sweet" on the baby trotter which he calls Princess McCarty, by Dexter Prince, dam Lady Fracture. Lee Shaner declares he has a regular world-beater in a little filly by Commodore, dam by Dawn, 2:18¾. As both gentlemen are not averse to wagering a dollar or two on their judgment, a match between the babies is among the possibilities of the coming season of racing. We do not know how good these youngsters really are, but from all accounts they are veritable "phenoms."

IT IS now believed by well-informed judges that the brown colt, foaled 1890, by Beverly, dam Lulaneer by Electioneer, second dam Lula, 2:15, by Alexander's Norman, registered under the name of Osiris, and purchased at the recent sale of Palo Alto stock in New York, is, barring relationship to two great performers sold in the same consignment, the most promising colt sold at the sale. Senator Stanford is very desirous of having this colt sent back to California for development under the Palo Alto system.

H S. HOGOBOOM, of Humboldt county, is improving his time superintending the driving and conditioning of fifteen horses. He is never too busy, however, to give off-hand to the boys the pedigree of any particular horse desired. Hogoboom is a typical horseman, taking a pride in his business and on the alert for fashionable breeding. There is some marvelous stories going the rounds about a youngster by Waldstein that Hogoboom has had on the track several times that it is said knocks Native Son out; however, 2:51½ is a good mark for a two-year-old, and is not beaten every day.

THE Rochester Driving Park Association has made two important changes in the conditions of the Flower City $10,000 stake, that is the feature of its meeting. It has decreased the entrance fee to 5 per cent, in conformity with other big stakes, and has divided in two sections of $8,000 and $2,000 that will be popular with horsemen. The $8,000 is the main stake, while the $2,000 is a consolation purse, eligible to all horses which competed in the first race and failed to win any part of the purse. In the event of the entrance fee amounting to more than $10,000 the surplus will be added to the main stake.

AT the meeting of the North Pacific Trotting Horse Breeders Association speed committee the physiognomy of Van B. DeLashmutt suddenly became wreathed in smiles as he announced that Sid Benton of Colfax had authorized him to challenge Altao for a match with Almont Medium for $5,000 to $10,000 a side. Mr. Mann is hot stuff himself and thinks quite a bit of Altao, who has a record of 2:22¼, and it is quite likely he will accept the challenge. A number of outside turfmen express their willingness to back Altao. Almont Medium has been wintering at Bay District track, and is looking prime.

A SURGICAL operation for the cure of what is known as "roaring," was recently performed at Minneapolis on the trotting gelding G. B., 2:20½, and at last accounts the horse was doing well. "Roaring" is caused by an affection of the nerves, rendering the cartilage on the left side of the windpipe stationary, so that it does not perform its duty at each respiration. A "lip" of flesh forms on the stationary cartilage, and as the air passes over it the sound called "roaring" is produced. The only remedy is to open the windpipe and remove the cartilage, and this has been done only a few times. In the case of G. B., the horse was chloroformed and a cartilage about the size of a large sized oyster was removed.

G. VALENSIN this week refused $100,000 for his great stallion Sidney, 2:19¾. This is next to the price paid for Arion, the largest sum ever refused for a California sire. Sidney is one of the wonderful stallions in the country, and his get are in great demand. Though only eleven years old, he has produced twenty horses in the list, three of them holding the championship of the world—namely: Frou Frou, the champion trotting yearling, with a record of 2:25½; Fausta, the champion pacing yearling, with a notch of 2:22¾, and Gold Leaf, the champion four-year-old pacer, with a record of 2:11¼. His owner says that at present money cannot buy him.

WILFRED PAGE AND BROTHER, of Rancho Cotati, Penn's Grove, have bought of J. H. Gwinn, Petaluma, the chestnut filly Dayspring, by Dawn, 2:18¾, dam Nettie Bennett (two-year-old record to wagon 2:49), sister to Nellie Patchen 2:27½; second dam Jenny Shephard (dam of Nellie Patchen, 2:27½, Flora Shephard 2:30, and grandam of Rustic King, two-year-old record 2:36½), by Williamson's Belmont. Nettie Bennett's mark constituted, we understand, the record at that time for a horse of her age to wagon; Nellie Patchen's 2:27½ mark was made in the seventh heat of a race. She was driven by John Splan, who stated at the time that it was the fastest seventh heat he had ever driven. The "one and only" has gone a little faster since then. Dayspring will, of course, be bred to Wilfred Page's Eclectic, brother to Arion, 2:10¾, and as Dawn is not only a pure-gaited trotting son of Nutwood, but a wonderfully speedy one at that, the produce should be just about sufficiently inbred to show remarkable results.

J. R. GRAHAM made a flying trip to Kentucky last week to see the famons stallion Constantine, 2:19¾, which his partner, J. J. Conley, manager of Briar Hill Farm, lately bid off at $27,000. Some enterprising breeder was willing to give $35,000 for the horse. Mr. Graham generally favors selling ing when he can get a good profit. Probably his partner is not opposed to that method of dealing on general principles. He was anxious in this case that Mr. Graham should see the class of goods he was parting with. After looking Constantine over Mr. G. very wisely concluded to pass the $35,000 offer. Horsemen who have seen the horse all agree that he is the most magnificent specimen of a trotting stallion that they ever examined. Mr. Graham is so highly pleased with him that he will not price the horse. His book is nearly full at $300. Some of the most prominent breeders in Kentucky are engaging his services. Butterfly, 2:19¾; Blondine, 2:25¾, and Flyaway will be bred to him. Flyaway is by Viking, 2:19¼, out of Butterfly, 2:19¾. The latter is with foal by Allerton, 2:09¼. Mr. Graham reports the stock at Briar Hill in excellent condition. The yearlings are the most magnificent lot of youngsters that he ever saw together. They will probably be brought to Boston next June and sold at auction.—Boston Horse Breeder.

THE MARES that have produced more than one performer in the 2:20 list are thirteen in number, viz.: May Day, Countess; Beautiful Bells, Columbine, Venus, Fleetwing, Midnight, Miss Russell, Mary M., Molly Whitefoot, Soprano, Lizzie and Waterwitch. Of these seven were identified with California—the first seven mentioned—and truly the claim that the Golden Gate has few good broodmares is disproved by this grand showing.

THE disposal of the late D. S. Withers' Brookdale stud is the subject of much comment by all persons taking an interest in turf matters. It is rumored that the breeding venture will be continued by Robert Center, one of the heirs of the the estate, who is an ardent turfmen, but the general opinion is that the stock and farm will be sold at auction just before the opening of the first big spring meeting. There will be a rush for the Brookdale horses. Knap McCarthy, who trained for Mr. Withers, offered the sage of Brookdale $10,000 for the King Ernest-Mimi, but the offer was refused as would also an offer of $50,000.

JUST before the sale of Barnhart and Drextell, full brothers to Allerton and Axtell, respectively, the American Trotter proclaimed, although undeveloped sires as a rule were not worth much, that full brothers to developed sires were "all right." The full brothers, then owned by C. W. Williams, have passed to other hands, and now the American Trotter pronounces that full brothers to developed sires don't count. Messrs. Doble and Moore (present owners of the full brothers aforesaid) should present our honored and honorable contemporary with an illuminated copy of the fable—"it depends upon whose ox is being gored."

GEORGE VAN GORDAN, for several years past manager of the San Simeon ranch, owned by the Hearst estate, has been in the city for several days. Mr. Van Gordan, who is quite wealthy, declares his intention of starting a horse-breeding establishment shortly. He has not as yet made up his mind whether to start in at Pleasanton, where he owns a couple of ranches, or whether he will return to San Luis Obispo county, in his opinion a favorable section for breeding and training race horses. "Ragna, Del Mar, Almont and Dr. Ross," said Mr. Van Gordan, "showed you what kind of condition horses can be got into down below."

MONROE SALISBURY, of the Pleasanton Stock Farm, was in Sacramento last week. On Tuesday he purchased of Miss Annie Ryan the pacing mare Killarney Maid. She is a seal brown by the famous pacer Killarney, 2:20½, her dam by Fred Nelson. Killarney Maid was bred at Dixon and sold when a yearling to P. Chatterton for $300. On Mr. Chatterton's death he willed the mare to Miss Ryan. She never went in a race, but was driven on trials by Dr. McCallum a half in 1:08 and the full mile in 2:20. Mr. Salisbury paid $2,500 in cash and agrees to pay $500 more when the Maid gets a record of 2:15, which undoubtedly will be made the coming season.

MR. J. MALCOLM FORBES drains his stall with gravel beds, covers the latter with loam, saves straw and keeps sweet and natural beds for his horses by simply changing the loam. This is the practice followed on all horse farms in Chile, the loam as fertilized in the stalls being hauled out to and spread on the fields, thereby more than repaying the cost of labor. On almost any day in summer at Valparaiso, Chile, you may also see a band of horses taken from the livery stables to the beach where the halter rope of one is handed to a boatman, who rows out for deep water; the whole band quickly follows the led horse and stay by him until brought to land again. Nothing much new under the sun now, is there, Brother Tompkins?

THE great race-horse Foxhall, who arrived Sunday week from England on the Normandie, is now recovering from the effects of his journey at the stable at Hunt's Point. His real ownership still seems enshrouded in mystery, but it is the general opinion among the employes at Tattersall's that he still belongs to Lord Roseberry. He will be shipped shortly to Kentucky, where he will probably make the season at Messrs. Wilson & Tracy's stables in Lexington. His best representative in England—Corstorphine—is being heavily backed for the Lincolnshire Handicap, the first big race of the year on the other side. Until Mr. William Easton's return from England, which will be before the month is out, the real intention for Foxhall's future will not be known.

A CORRESPONDENT sends us the following: "Gov. Markham, we expect, could tell an interesting story as to why Mr. Hugh M. La Rue was not reappointed on the State Board of Agriculture. It is very singular that the gentleman most trusted and confided in as a judge by the whole State should have failed of a reappointment. We hear of a similar 'miscarriage' in the Sonoma and Marin district, when the appointment of a prominent physician and breeder was specially requested, but in his stead there was named at some one's instigation, a gentleman who has never taken the slightest interest in the affairs of the Agricultural Society. What are our agricultural boards coming to?"

ARION 2:10¾, Eclectic and Baby McKee are the full brothers and the only living sons of Electioneer out of a Nutwood mare whose dam is of known breeding. The dam is in the "great broodmare list" as the dam of two with records of 2:16½ and 2:21 and of two producing dams. Arion 2.10¾ sold for an enormous price, but of the three brothers the one which transmits speed the most uniformly will yet be the most valuable. Advertiser 2:16 and his brother in blood, Hummer, are, we believe, the only two living sons of Electioneer out of George Wilkes mares. There is a sister to Advertiser 2:16 at Palo Alto that we hope may some day be bred to Arion or one of hs brothers, and there is a sister to Arion and a full sister in blood to the same elsewhere that we yet expect to see coupled with Advertiser, 2:16. What would the harvest be?

SOME arrangement by which the oval track will be made as fast as the kite is now eagerly sought, and suggestions are numerous. The Stock Farm says: "It seems evident that a horse trots more than a mile when the track is measured three feet from the pole, and it therefore appears to be desirable to remedy the matter by a change in the requirements in this regard. If a fast record is the desideratum, and a full mile only is the distance required, why not do something to make the distance to be trotted exactly a mile? This question is respectfully submitted to the two trotting associations, and the attention of all breeders is called to the matter. Possibly it would be well to require a kite track to be measured four feet from the rail, an oval mile course five feet from the rail and a half-mile course six feet from the rail. We make the suggestion for what it is worth."

ORRIN HICKOK has a reliable race horse in the pacer, Our Dick, 2:17, who is in very fair shape now. Recently we saw him worked from the half home in 1:08—the last quarter in thirty-three seconds. Mr. Hickok says the horse is so gentle that a child can drive him, and he does not know what it is to break. It has not been definitely decided as yet whether Our Dick will be taken East or not. If he goes he will strike a pretty hard crowd to down in his class, and it would take some time to get him acclimated.

BILLY JOHNSON has in his string at the Oakland track the stallion Steinbridge, recently purchased by Smith & Mortensen of C. Cantelon, of Vacaville, for $1,500, he being by Steinway, dam by Stockbridge Chief Jr. Johnson also has a five-year-old gray stallion by Anteeo, out of a Richmond mare, that can enter the 2:30 list whenever called upon to do so; a promising bay filly by Antevolo, dam by Whipple's Hambletonian, and a three-year-old grandson of Director that is going to be a wonder. The latter belongs to John Troy, the popular insurance man.

IS THERE anything on earth that will more quickly please the eye of human nature than to start out in the country on a lonesome day and view a field of fine horses carelessly browsing about seemingly undisturbed by your appearance? The nip, nip of the tender blue grass, the careless tread on the dandelion, and the step, step for a clean mat of untouched grass all fills the soul with love for the beautiful. It drives away the blues, and sets the appetite on edge for a cold luncheon beneath the shade of some great elm tree, which seems to have been planted at the right time and at the right place. Could the artist paint a more beautiful picture? It looks cruel to see how unmercifully some people will abuse the noblest of all animals. Why is it? Do they lack humanity or are they totally indifferent and so depraved that they can torture a helpless animal without the slightest sense of shame or feeling?

A RECENT acquisition to the ranks of turfmen in J. G. Follansbee, a very pleasant young gentleman who is interested with young Mr. Hearst in a small ranch in Chihuahua of 650,000 acres. This gentleman has a splendid string in fine shape at the Sacramento track in Almont, bay horse, six, by Three Cheers out of Question; Delmar, aged, a chestnut horse by Somnus out of Maid of the Hills; Dr. Ross, a bay three-year-old colt by Cheviot, dam by The Drummer; Ragna, bay three-year-old filly by Jim Brown out of Vixen. Down at the ranch Mr. Follansbee has the bay mare Gloaming, 5 years, by Sir Modred out of Twilight. She was bred at Rancho del Paso. Also a bay filly, three years old, by Mr. Pickwick out of Belle of Maywood, and a bay three-year-old filly by Miser, bred at Charles Reed's place, Gallatin, Tenn. Last, but by no means least, is Kingmaker by Warwick, dam Sister to Jim Douglas. Mr. Follansbee thinks that he has a great show of winning the Brooklyn Jockey Club Handicap fit and well with his light impost of ninety-seven pounds.

M. H. MCMANUS has quite a string of trotters at San Jose; most of them belong to the Redondo (Seals) Stock Farm. He has placed much faith in the fine black Woodnut stallion, St. Kildo, and believes he has a good one. This colt has been bred to Accident, the dam of Wanda 2:17¾. There is a two-year-old filly, Solita, by Eros, and a five-year-old gelding, Rinconado, by Eros (full sister and brother to Wanda), that in conformation, color, shape of head, jaw, hock and gait are exactly like their fleety sister. Every one who has seen them agree that there can be no further doubt regarding Wanda's breeding, for every one that is sired by Eros, 2:29½, out of this mare Accident, look as much alike as peas in a pod, and no better evidence is necessary to substantiate the claims made that Eros is the sire of Wanda than this family. Another good mare in Mr. McManus' string is Elmetta by Elmo (full sister to Alfred S., 2:16½), out of Norah Marshall. There is another good one by Eros out of Fanny Wickham Jr. (granddam by Chas. Derby), by Elmo. All of these youngsters are doing well, and it is hoped that they will trot in the 2:30 list.

THAT good writer, "M. F. G.," has the following in the last issue of the Breeders' Gazette: "Your correspondent "F. D. S." publishes an interesting table proving that Allerton in his fast miles has been better rated than Palo Alto. Of course this has no relevance to anything I have written on the subject, for I never asserted to the contrary. The table simply shows that Allerton is either easier to rate or Williams is the best driver. My contention was that the people who said Allerton could lose Palo Alto in a race were talking absurdly. The only corresponding year of their ages in which both were campaigned was at four years. The facts were given and do not show to Allerton's advantage; nor does it restore his prestige to show that he has been better rated in dash efforts. Maud S. could not have worn the crown according to such logic; three slow quarters and a fast one would have beaten her. The race is from "eend to eend" and three out of five. Palo Alto has gone the fastest mile, has lasted the best when heats were broken, and by virtue of these facts is the king of race-horse stallions. When any stallion reverses these facts he will be entitled to the crown, but wind and misleading tables cannot accomplish it. The Palo Alto people are not very strong on bugle-blowing, and with the essential facts on their side can afford to allow pretentious rivals to the crown ample freedom."

DIXON "horse" items: Crown Prince, is a five-year-old trotting stallion who made 2:25 in a race at Santa Rosa on Thanksgiving Day. Crown Prince was sired by Dexter, who was purchased from M. Morse, of Lodi, the other day by Dan McCarty for $25,000. Albert A. is a fine-looking pacer, and is in his sixth year. He has no record but gives evidence of considerable speed. One of the handsomest animals in the collection is Frank Kobben's pacing mare, Pet, who is to be entered in a race in April, together with Black Dan, Schalchi and others. A fine stallion, Nutwood, Jr., is the king of the stables. He made a record of 2:29¼ as a three-year-old, but has never been in a race since he entered the "charmed circle." He was sired by the famous Nutwood, who has more colts in the thirty class than any other living horse. Bertha W. is a pretty little two-year-old mare who will make her initial appearance on the turf at the coming spring meeting. She was sired by Nutwood Jr., out of Silvertail, by Solferino; second dam by Tecumseh; third dam by a Canadian pacer. Wm. Vansant has a fine-looking three-year-old sorrel mare in training, who gives promise of considerable speed. She has been in training but a few days, but is very tractable and is a great favorite with her trainer. There are a number of very promising colts in the paddock who will give a good account ot themselves in the near future.

THE GUN.

The Recreation Gun Club.

The Recreation Gun Club held its first meeting for the season at the traps in Oakland Shooting Park on Sunday last. There was a good attendance of the old, and several new members appeared at the score. Among the latter named were Messrs. Sperry, Jackson and Lee. The day was beautiful as to temperature, but for the purpose of making good scores at the trap we much doubt if ever the conditions on these grounds have been more unfavorable. The birds furnished were of the very best order.

This fact taken in connection with the leading one of the opposition—a very stiff breeze blowing from the north—a very unusual occurrence on these grounds.

The birds rising with this strong wind would dart upward with a circling motion to the right, and even if hit unto the death would be frequently carried beyond the boundary. This occurred so often, together with the frequent misses, that the score below fails to indicate, save in a few instances, the skill which was required to make even so good a one. The shooting of Messrs. Barney and Allen was especially fine, followed closely by that of Mr. W. J. Golcher and Mr. Morrison.

Mr. George B. Sperry, of Stockton, showed up well for a new member, as did also Messrs. Jackson and Lee.

It will be noticed that the names which usually lead in the scores are placed several notches below their usual places. This may justly be attributed to the unusual conditions presented.

THE SUMMARY.

A splendid lunch was a very acceptable feature of the day, and was enjoyed by all.

The Recreation bids fair to become one of the largest clubs shooting at the traps in this vicinity this season.

In the Cordilleras of New Mexico.

It was in April, 1863. I was prospecting, exploring and hunting: the first for profit, the second for pleasure, the third for sport.

The Indians were very troublesome, especially the Apaches and Navajoes, but Kit Carson was making things very warm for the latter, and before the year was out had captured the whole tribe, who were removed to a reservation on the Rio Pecos, hundreds of miles to the east. A body of California troops, under command of Col. John C. Cremony, was placed over them. They were reduced to a condition of "innocuous desuetude."

The only Indians to be feared were the Apaches. They were the worst, the most treacherous, the most murderous of any on the Southern plain.

As traveling in that wild, frontier country was very dangerous at that time, in fact an impossibility without a strong escort, I confined myself to the attenuated chain of settlements along the Rio Grande.

Fort Craig, which was on the right bank of the Rio Grande, two hundred miles south from Santa Fe, and in the heart of the Apache country, was garrisoned by a small force of Californians under the command of Col. "Ned" Rigg of San Francisco. From this point detachments were constantly being sent out in pursuit of marauding bands of Apaches. Right here I would like to interject a remark, though not germane to the subject.

A majority of the people of California, and among them old pioneers, don't know that California had any troops in the field during the war of the rebellion, and those who do know have formed the habit of speaking contemptuously of their services. But at Fort Craig, or, with headquarters at the fort, was a little handful of Californians, the result of whose work, by record, was 1,000 Apaches killed and 800 taken prisoner and sent to join the Navajoes, on the reservation for the year 1863 alone, while at the same time they were keeping the rebels at bay and holding a vast country for the Union. Can any one point to a better record by a like number of troops in any part of the field of operation during our civil war?

To return; I was at Socorro, a days' ride from the fort, and I resolved to visit it and ask permission to accompany some of the scouting parties. I did so, and was most hospitably received, and my request readily granted; for I was well armed and mounted, and might be of service. I was lucky also in my time of arrival. An expedition was fitting out for both a scouting and exploring trip.

The object of the expedition was twofold. First to survey the country lying between Fort Craig and Fort West with a view to opening a road through the mountains and establishing a line of communication between the two points by the shortest route practicable.

Fort West lay to the westward about 150 miles distant, but the Cordilleries and the Indians intervened, and in order to reach it a round-about course of 500 miles had to be taken.

The second and secondary object was to kill, or capture, as many of the Apaches, who were known to infest the mountains, as possible.

But few Indians were seen on the trip, and they were always running away, placing distance between themselves and the troops as fast as time and speed would permit. No pursuit was made and no Indians killed. The force was too strong for them to cope with and they discreetly "made tracks."

Apaches will never fight soldiers except the preponderance of numbers be greatly on their side, and then only from ambush.

The force consisted of two companies, one cavalry and one infantry, commanded, respectively, by Capt. Pishon, of Los Angeles, and Capt. Tom Roberts, of Sacramento, and both under command of Capt. A. L. Anderson, a West Point graduate and an Engineer Officer, and afterwards Colonel of the Eighth California Infantry. He was the son of Gov. Anderson, of Ohio, and, consequently, the nephew of Major Anderson, who defended Fort Sumter so gallantly at the outbreak of the war.

Two days after my arrival at Fort Craig the expedition started. There were no settlements of civilized man from the Rio Grande to the Colorado in those days. Instead, were only wild beasts and wild Indians.

The line of march ran right across the backbone of the continent—the axis of the Rocky Mountain system—called, in that section by the Mexicans, Cordilleras.

A large train of supplies was taken along, for it was uncertain how long a time might be consumed in the exploration, or what obstacles might be encountered in the form of hostile Apaches.

I accompanied the expedition. For the first half of the distance all went smoothly, but then we encountered an obstacle. We were confronted by precipitous mountain ranges, impassable to wagon trains because of the abruptness of their acclivities, and unflankable by reason of deep, narrow gorges and cañons, through which rushed the waters of mountain torrents. We turned aside to the left and travelled several miles down a lovely valley skirted on either side with forest-covered hills and rock-ribbed mountains. The valley, as we progressed, narrowed, and the hills and mountains closed in on each other and formed a cañon.

Where the valley terminated and the cañon begun, an immense spring of crystal water gushed from the ground and formed a respectable river, which rushed down the cañon and joined other mountain streams, which, together, formed one of the confluents of the Gila. Near this spring we encamped, there being abundance of water, feed and fuel, the three great requisites on plain and in mountain.

The next day Capt. Anderson, with an escort of cavalry, pushed forward in an endeavor to reach Fort West over mountain and through cañon, while the rest of the command remained encamped in this beautiful valley to await his return.

The stream that flowed through the cañon from the spring was full of fish. It took a southerly course. The valley extended northward many miles and spread out into a plain, waterless and treeless, but covered with grass, which fed countless numbers of antelope.

To the east was a high mountain ridge covered with evergreen trees; pines, firs and cedars.

To the west a series of low hills, verdant and aromatic with budding and leafing deciduous trees of many varieties, extended several miles.

The forests were full of game. The sylvan hills furnished food and shelter for wild turkeys, grouse, wild pigeons and deer. In the mountain to the east, where the nut-bearing pine grew in perfection, the trees swarmed with gray and fox squirrels, and, everywhere, seeking their prey, were the carnivora, both beast and bird; mountain lions, bears, wolves, coyotes, wild cats, eagles, hawks and owls. There were also burrowing animals, such as badgers, woodchucks and prairie dog; also rabbits, both jackass and cotton-tail. It was a hunter's paradise.

Other sorts of game not so desirable swarmed in mountain, hill and valley; reptiles, such as rattle snakes, tarantulas, scorpions and centipedes. Though disagreeable neighbors, they had their uses; they furnished amusement to the soldiers during their leisure hours. Many rattlers were killed and their rattles made to decorate the hats of their captors. Bull scorpions were caught by scores and pitted against each other in the ring. They would fight like bull-dogs; locking claws and turning their sting-tipped tails over their heads in search of a weak spot in their adversary's armor, which was between the plates and in the joints, and the first that got his sting in came off victor, his opponent dying instantly.

These fights were watched as eagerly, and bets were laid as freely on the results as if they had been prize-ring fights between such doughty champions as Peter Jackson and John L. Sullivan. Fights were also gotten up between scorpions and tarantulas, but the big spider stood no show; he invariably "lost the number of his mess." There is no truth in the poet's fancy, and in the fable, about the scorpion stinging himself to death when "begirt by fire;" it is all pure myth. The experiment was tried several times, and scorpio always showed the white feather. He would suffer being roasted alive rather than end his torments by stinging himself to death.

These scorpion fights and scorpio-tarantula fights were nearly as cruel as the gladiatorial fights of the arena in ancient Rome, for it was death to both victor and vanquished; but then, they were instructive, which the gladiatorial contests were not, but only a pandering to the depraved appetites and cruel, murderous instincts and passions of a once noble race, degenerated through self-indulgence from a higher to a lower plain of civilization.

The most interesting fight to witness was one that could not be gotten up to order. It was a fight between a tarantula and his natural enemy the tarantula fly; and it generally occured in some sequestered nook, when the sun was shining and diffusing genial warmth. This fly is very large, twice as large as a bumble bee, and more like a wasp than a fly, for it has a long body, powerful wings and a formidable sting. Its body is covered with fur of a reddish-brown color and its wings are black.

When the fly discovers a tarantula it charges on him at once. If the tarantula is near his hole he will make desperate efforts to escape; if not, he will prepare for battle and for defence by rearing on his two pairs of hind legs and endeavoring to face his enemy; but his defense is always a forlorn hope. The fly is very swift on the wing and circles around the big spider so rapidly that the tarantula cannot follow its motion, though he makes desperate efforts to do so, whirling on his own pivot until tired and bewildered, and dizzy with the turning; at this point the fly pounces upon the tarantula, stings him in the back and is off again like a flash. Four or five stabs from the sting of the fly paralyzes the tarantula and he soon rolls over dead. Though not one-fourth the size of the tarantula, the fly never fails to kill him. As soon as the tarantula is dead the fly drags him off bodily to some secret place, or, if too large, halves or quarters him with its mandibles, which are like scissors, and drags him away piecemeal.

For awhile I supposed that the fly used the spider for food, reversing the general order; the fly took the spider into the parlor. I have watched a number of these contests, the race was always the same, the fly killed the spider; it was Nature's compensation for the merciless slaughter of innocent flies by blood-thirsty spiders. But the fly don't eat the spider. Like the tumble-bug variety of the beetle, which moulds ordure into little spheres and rolls them into secret places, and deposits its eggs in them, the fly uses the carcass of the tarantula for an incubator.

While encamped in this lovely valley, made beautiful and grand by the lavish hand of Nature, and awaiting the return of Capt. Anderson and his party, the men spent most of their leisure hours in hunting and fishing, and the camp was kept plentifully supplied with fresh fish and the choicest of game.

No Indians were seen though the region round about was known to be one of their favorite resorts on account of its abundance of game and fish, and because it furnished a convenient rendezvous from which to make raids on the defenceless villages along the Rio Grande.

Several wild animals were taken alive and tamed. When we broke camp we had two brown bear cubs, two young antelope, a fawn, a badger, two fox squirrels, two gray squirrels and a red fox; so that we returned to the fort with quite a respectable menagerie. There were plenty of quail, of a variety resembling the mountain quail of California, but more beautiful. A strong effort was made to capture some of them alive, but without success.

The two cubs were my prizes. Several of us went one day a few miles up the valley in the hope of killing an antelope. We came across an immense brown bear with two little bits of cubs no larger than a half-grown kitten. The bear was digging in the ground and her head was out of sight in the hole she was digging so she did not see us, but her shoulders presented a fair mark and I sent an ounce bullet through her heart. These brown bears of the Cordilleras attain a size nearly equal to that of the grizzly of the Sierra Nevada, and are as ferocious. Besides the brown, there are black and cinnamon, but no grizzly bears.

I was curious to know what the bear was digging for but got no answer until I returned to camp. An old Mexican trailer and guide who was with the expedition said that she was digging for water because her cubs were hungry, and being very thirsty herself there was no lacteal secretion because of the lack of water in her stomach. She must have water to enable her to suckle her cubs, and she was digging for it. Whether the Mexican's theory was true or not, she had certainly found water, for it was sifting through the soil at the bottom of the hole, and when we left had formed a little pool.

It is possible that, on arid plains, instinct teaches some animals to detect the presence of water that lies near the surface, and that when thirst torments them they dig for it. The cubs made no attempt to run away but staid by the side of their dead mother and stood on the defensive. They growled and fought like spit-fires; biting and scratching with all their puny might, but they were soon captured and subdued.

As I had killed the dam I claimed the cubs, which were readily awarded me. I carried them to camp in my arms and tried to feed them, but they were too young to know how to eat, and they moaned and cried with hunger. I cast about for a plan to give them food, but for some time in vain, and my sympathies for their hunger and their helplessness were wrought up to the highest pitch. Perhaps, unconsciously, I charged myself with being responsible for their condition.

At last it dawned upon my mind that I had seen infants fed by means of a "sugar teat," and I at once resolved to play the sugar-teat dodge on the cubs; but another difficulty presented itself; their were neither bottles nor milk. After thinking it over I thought I saw a way out of the dilemma.

I had a pound flask of Dupont's rifle powder, with a nozzle to it. Emptying it of the powder, I filled it with a mixture of water, flour and sugar, of the consistency of thin cream, placed a rag in the nozzle and put it in the mouth of one of the cubs. It was wonderful, the avidity with which he sucked that rag. He sucked the flask dry and then lay down contentedly and slept. I repeated the dose on the other cub with the same result. They throve on this improvised pap and grew rapidly. In a short time they learned to eat bread and raw meat, after which they were no more trouble.

Though the days were lovely and the air deliciously soft and balmy, the nights were crisp, and fearing that my pets might sleep cold without the protection of mother fur and warmth, I took them between my blankets. Some time during the night I was awakened by a "tempest in a tea-pot." The cubs were fighting; biting and scratching each other like wild-cats, and growling like puppies over a bone. I attempted to separate and pacify them, when they quit fighting and both attacked me and tore away at my side as if they intended to annihilate me. It took a severe castigation to quiet them, and I wasn't slow nor particularly tender in administering it. As they grew larger they became a source of amusement for the soldiers. They were very playful and never quarreled except over a marrow-bone. Throw a marrow bone to them and they would fight over it like wolves or wolverines.

Nothing would tempt them to fight more readily except whisky. They were fond of all sorts of sweets and all kinds of spirits, but would never eat molasses except on bread. Whisky was their favorite tipple, but they would never drink it; soak bread in it, and they would devour the bread with as much avidity as a toper imbibes his morning cocktail, and when full of corn juice would act the drunkard in the maudlin stage to perfection. I staid several months at the fort and had a good opportunity to study them. As they grew older they became vicious and dangerous to strangers in citizen's garb. Their pet aversion was a "greaser," but with the boys in blue they were always on the most amicable terms, and seemed to regard them as belonging to the same brotherhood with themselves. They would march with the soldiers on their minor expeditions, and, though unrestrained, never tried to escape. Sometimes, in a boyish or puppyish way, while investigating something that excited their curiosity, they would linger and get lost, and, not seeing any soldiers, would sit up on their haunches, lift up their fore paws, and cry aloud like lost children. How to Catch the Grayling.

Strike gently and not too quickly, says a contributor to American Angler. If you miss, cast again in the same spot and repeat it four or five times. A grayling seems to love to feed in about the same place for a long time. We noticed at the head of our favorite pool but one fish rising in an area of about fifty feet. He seemed to come up within a yard of the same spot every time, and this went on for an hour undisturbed by our occasional casts for him, when we gathered courage to leave the bonanza we had found some two hundred feet below. He owned that ground.

Although not a cannibal—a quality that lords it supreme in fishdom—he was evidently sovereign of the domain.

Now just here we will be rapped over tne knuckles for presuming to differ in opinion with the savants and the fathers of the craft. It has become the fashion—on the "follow your leader" principle—from Izaak Walton down to Thad. Norris, to say that the grayling has such a tender mouth that he must be struck and played gingerly and gently, or else he will tear loose from the hook. All fish of fresh water, even the black bass, should be struck gently. Yanking the hook into a fish's mouth is a sure evidence of a bungling fisher, a tyro, or a blusterer in the art. The trout, the bass and the grayling, as well as all other fish, hook themselves nine times in ten. It is, and must be, the care of the angler that no slack line exists as the fish turns with the lure in his mouth; that provided for, the keen point of the hook, the tender flesh of the mouth, ensue the fastening of the fish. We do not care to tell how many fish we failed to hook on this trip, but we did not lose a fish when once hooked, notwithstanding that we "kill quickly" every fish of whatever kind that we chance to hook.

We made no exception of the grayling in this practice, and of the ninety odd fish we played and boasted not one tore lose from tenderness of mouth. This result we credit at once to the lightness and pliancy of the rod we used—its give-and-take quality. Doubtless many of our readers have caught weakfish in salt water; if so, they know to their regret what a large proportion of fish is lost on the heavy gear habitually used for such fishing. Let them do as we did and be happy. Take an eight to ten-ounce fly-rod down to salt waters where the tides are gentle, use no sinker, but a nine-foot single gut leader, single hook, and you will be surprised at the small number of fish lost. Your pliant rod does the work.

Those high-toned and gallant gentlemen who conduct the sport of pigeon shooting at Monte Carlo must be very proud of their honors, after having barred from shooting Miss Annie Oakley because they were afraid to contest against her skill. Shame, gentlemen, on such ungallantry.

A splendid season of sport has been inaugurated at Chicago this week, wherein the veteran wing-shot, Captain Bogardus, C. W. Budd and E. D. Fulford are announced to participate.

The Selby Medal contest will take place at Oakland Shooting Park on Sunday the 27th instant, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

The Philadelphia Kennel Club.

The Philadelphia Kennel Club have made satisfactory arrangements with the Eastern Field Trials Club for the use of the grounds of the latter at High Point for their Field Trials this year.

They will be open to the world and will commence Monday, November 28, 1892, and continue until finished.

Liberal purses will be offered, of which due notice will be given. Francis G. Taylor, Secretary.

The King of the Course.

Now that Fullerton stands as unquestioned champion in England, having divided first in 1889 with Troughend, by Greentick—Toledo, and absolutely winning first honors in 1890, 1891 and 1892, thus eclipsing the record of the famous Master McGrath, it would seem that he has reached the achme of greyhound fame. In the recent meeting he had the hardest work of his matchless career in defeating Fitz Fife, by Ropalty II—Bude Light in the final, it requiring two undecided courses before he beat the latter.

Bred.

Mr. D. Lyman, Lamanda Park, Cal., has bred Flora, St. Bernard bitch, to J. B. Martin's Republican, by Champion Duke of Wellington—Restless, at San Francisco, March 1, 1892.

Mrs. D. Shaner, San Francisco, Cal., has bred Vixen, fox-terrier bitch, by Scarsdale—Delta, to J. B. Martin's Blemton Shiner, by Champion Blemton Rubicon—Champion Blemton Brilliant, at San Francisco, March 4, 1892.

Sales.

Bay View Kennels sold Irish setter dog pup, Dan 11—Bell C., to C. J. McDonald, of San Mateo.

We are pleased to note that Dr. Van Hummell's Viola, by Babazoon—Verdure Clad won first in a recent coursing meeting at Colorado Springs, Colorado, in which there were twenty-three entries. The genial doctor is an enthusiast in coursing matters and deserves to win if gentility and courteous qualities count for anything.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths, in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

The New York Show.

The "Dog Show Extra" issued by the Forest and Stream, contains much of valuable matter to all breeders and fanciers. It is profusely illustrated, the portraits of the eight judges and a large number of the prize winning beauties being given. This effort on the part of our illustrious contemporary is to be commended as it goes to show that the kennel press of our Eastern metropolis is fully abreast of the grand annual event which occurs in that city.

The lovers of St. Bernards will be pleased to look upon the strong and expressive, as well as pleasant, features of Miss Anna H. Whitney, the well known and popular judge of St. Bernards and New Fowfoundlands.

The portrait of Mr. George Raper (England) is also given, who judged mastiffs, Great Danes, bloodhounds, Russian wolfhounds, deerhounds; greyhounds, English foxhounds, poodles, bulldogs, bull-terriers, fox-terriers and all other terriers, dachshunde, toy spaniels, Italian greyhounds and pugs.

Mr. J. M. Tracy, who has won an enviable reputation as a judge for field dogs passed upon the merits of pointers. English setters, American foxhounds and Chesapeake Bay dogs, and his portrait fills a prominent place in the issue.

Dr. H. Clay Glover, gordon setters; Mr. A. D. Lewis, collies; Mr. Wm. Tallman, Iaish setters, and Mr. B. F. Mayhew, bassett and beagles, are also presented.

The report, written by by Mr. H. W. Lacy and Mr. George Raper is worthy of the publication in which it appears.

Howls.

The Borzoi vs. Deerhound wolf killing contest is rapidly coming to a focus, Mr. McDougall seems to want a race for sure and is exhibiting the proper spirit. Now this is business. How very different from the usual newspaper contributors who usually have their kennels chock full of wonderful dogs—let them tell it.

* * * *

Those who are intending to bench at the show in May should commence to look after their pets not any too much time to bring up in first class shape—a credit to you and themselves. Never show your dog in a poor condition, what is worth doing at all is worth doing well. Selah.

* * * *

This also reminds me that others than the Irish Reds adherents can row just a little. Note the scrap that has and is now going on among the Great Danes. "Imperators" owner and "Melacs" never speak as we pass by, so I am informed. Now ding it all this is tough.

* * * *

Some one has made the suggestion "That Mr. Watson enter four black pointers at our coming trials regardless of any special contest." To do this would defeat the principal object of his challenge which is to make some of you fellows either

"put up or shut up." I have no doubt Mr. Watson would prefer the contest to take place at the same place and time as the trials, but he wants to have the quartette as a side or rather special engagement. This is fair and proper, and I would like very much for some of you who have been rather noisy, in this respect and now come to the front and take your medicine bitter though it may be, or else forever shut up and hold your peace.

If you would like to see a picture of what seems to me a wonderful dog, just look at the picture of "Favor" in the American Field of 27th. Is he not a beauty?

* * * *

Where Oh where? is the next man to unload his pocket book for a big St. Bernard? Now don't all speak at once. Craze is dying out did you say? Now that's too bad. Can't some of you who are inclined forthings that are quite "English you know?" You that desire your pointers and setters not to retrieve and can afford to own and have along a retriever for that purpose, can you not manage some way to help out the blooming Hisland "Doncher know."

* * * *

Now I tell you what I have a bright idea for some of you, you will need badly, and that very soon, in fact now—a real curly-coated English retriever as an extra companion afield—and also to be in the swim. Here is the idea, you furnish the money and commission me to go after the dogs. See?

* * * *

If there is any thing on God's green earth to my way of thinking it is a man who is ashamed of his country. As I now write I look across the street to a hotel and there I can see a man who was born in this country, raised in this country his mother inherited all their money from her father who came to this country from Holland poorer than a "church mouse" and accumulated wealth here. He wear clothes that are made in London dodcher know—and they are elegant—fit him immensely. None good enough here "doncher know." He tries to talk like an Englishman, says he is an Englishman, would have you think he is of noble birth. Think of it; denies his country and that country America. Excuse me, but I have had to stop writing, a glimpse of him has caused me intense nausea, accompanied with severe retching—always did effect me that way—I am better now—he is out of sight.

* * * *

W. R. Fishel seems to be laboring under the impression he has the best and only black pointers in America. Come now, Fishel, you are all right, but don't become egotistical on this subject. I can call the turn on several that are just as well bred and they, the owners, have bred them much longer than you have.

* * * *

I like to see a man feel proud of his dogs, but this great, wonderful, phenominal, only, none such, never was, never will be such, don't jibe with me for a cent—in fact makes me weary. Don't it you?

* * * *

Look out for me, I am going to sling some hot shot, among some of you soon going to try and "hew to the line" let the chips fall where they may. Make it rather sultry, now see if I don't?

The Madera Coursing Meet.

The Spring coursing meeting to be held at Madera March 22d bids fair to be one of more than usual interest, and it is to be hoped that a full attendance of the lovers of the leash may be present from this city.

The English Stock-Keeper in commenting on the book "Kennel Clubs and Their Work" quotes the following story which relates too interesting an accident to be lost. The incident appears under the title of "Canine Sagacity."

"A gentleman who was in the habit of driving home in a hansom cab always took his dog, called Scoti, with him. One day instead of taking a cab he was walking home, when he all at once missed Scoti in a crowd. He looked for him, but in vain. At last he reached home. About two hours after his arrival a hansom cab drove up to the door, and out jumped Scoti. The cabman rang for his fare, and thinking the cabman had caught the runaway, the gentleman asked him how and where he had found him. "Oh, sir," said cabby, "I did not hail him at all; he hailed me. I was standing at a corner waiting for a fare when in jumped the dog. I shouted through the window, but he would not stir. I got down and tried to pull him out, but he only barked, as much as to say 'drive on.' As I seized him by the collar I read the name and address, so I just let him sit still and shut the doors, and I drove on till I stopped at this gate, when out jumps my passenger and walks into the house as though he had been a regular fare."

We should have been pleased to have seen Valley Queen exhibited at New York this year, as we are convinced that she has qualities of the very first order, and that few, if any, greyhounds can surpass her. Her all but unbroken record on the course stamps her as possessing the highest type.

ROD.

How I Caught the First Salmon.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Perhaps it may interest some of your readers, to read an account of the catching of what I believe is the first salmon, with rod and line, in the rivers of California. I believe that I can take credit for this feat, at any rate in the San Joaquin river, as questions put to the oldest inhabitants on the river, one of them a resident of over twenty-two years, were answered as follows:

"Salmon were caught with the spear and "snatched or jagged," but had never taken a bait."

This was not encouraging, but knowing what a deadly bait a "devon minnow" is, at the end of a green heart rod, and using a fast reel, I could not be persuaded, but that I might succeed in tempting one to at least rise and see what strange thing was traveling past him; even if not successful in landa salmon. I knew that I was pretty sure to get some sport with other kinds of fish. I had caught lake trout in the King's river, running up to seven pounds, and this surprised the natives, who invariably want to see the natural bait, and whose soul does not soar above a worm, hopper or piece of meat on the end of a hook, and I believe that nothing else had ever been tried. But to return to my trip in quest of salmon.

N. B., and myself had arranged, as soon as we could get away from our raisin vineyard, to visit the San Joaquin river; where large quantities of salmon are speared by the Indians and others, and try them with the "devon minnow," and see if they could be caught. The middle of July was the only time we could get away; all our work had been put straight, and we could do nothing but give the grapes time to ripen. Having got our tackle into the best shape possible, I had a stock of two and a half ounce "devon minnows," a couple of green heart rods and a Nottingham fast reel, but the line I had was too stout for a fast reel so that I could not make the long casts I could with a proper line. N. B., had nothing but a small trout reel, he used one of my rods and minnows, so was unable to present a very favorable attack on a salmon, and had to confine himself to fishing for smaller fish.

On the 16 July, we made our start in a spring wagon, taking with us tent, blankets, bedding, provisions, guns, etc., as we should be up in the mountains away from supplies, we took just simply necessaries, as we intended to live principally on the produce of gun and rod. We got off about seven in the morning and soon found it pretty warm work, the sun being a trifle over a hundred degrees in the shade, and most of our first day's journey lay across sands and bare plains, and by the time we reached Fresno, thirty miles from the starting point, horses, men and dogs were quite in need of a rest.

Putting up the horses and having them cared for at a feed yard, we made tracks for something to eat. This we found in a first class restaurant, and then had to loaf around the town until our horses were rested. About 5 P. M. we made another start, as we wished to push on as fast as we could in the cool of the evening. Abaut seven we came in sight of San Joaquin river, about ten miles from Fresno, and decided to camp for the night. Driving up to the ranch house we got leave to camp and feed for our horses, made them comfortable, then got our supper, spread our beds and after a pipe or two were soon in the land of nod.

Up at five on the 17th, and after breakfast, got off again and drove along the river. We were now in the foothills, the river flowing in the valley, and winding in and out among the hills. "What a glorious river! What a river for fishing," we cannot but remark. Over 100 yards wide, a deep swift running river, steep rocks and trees down to the water's edge, here and there a flat piece of water with sandy shore, nearly all of it deep pools, with swift flat current running in at the head and tailing off into flat water, a salmon might be anywhere. Deep blue the water looks in the distance, and as we get nearer, has a grey tint in it from the melted snow from the high ranges of mountains, that we can see towering in the distance, some twenty miles further up. We reach Hamptonville, 15 miles from Fresno, a town of two houses on the river bank, here we discuss a bottle of iced beer, and make inquiries regarding the fishing; very few salmon np yet, the Indians are spearing a few higher up the river. "Salmon have never been caught in the river with any sort of bait," is the report. We decide to drive up a little further, and at any rate see what can be done. About a mile up we find a bridge crossing the river, and decide to camp under it, for the sake of the shade. It looks cool and inviting, coming out of the hot foothills. Soon we have our baggage stowed away, horses tethered, watered and fed, and then I get my rod put together and cross over the bridge. I decide to make my first cast in a deep run under the bridge. N. B. stays on the top and watches results, a cast or two and I have a fish; my friend from above says it was a good one, about 5 lbs.; this gives one encouragement, fish of some sort will evidently take the minnow. Soon after I had hold of one, which on landing turns about two pounds. It is a strange fish to us, and we decide it must be the white salmon we heard of; it is entirely different to any fish I have ever seen, has no teeth and the fob fin above the tail is wanting. It proved a good eating fish, and the whole of the inside was a mass of yellow fat. The fish somewhat resembled a lake trout in general appearance, but the absence of teeth and tail fin, make it quite distinct from that fish; then the lake trout is full of bones, and this fish was not so. We heard afterwards they were called steel heads or white salmon, and that it goes to the sea and returns like a salmon.

The next morning we were up early, determined to have a long day. We landed several "steel heads," averaging from one to fifteen pounds; the latter was a very fine fish, and gave good sport on my twelve-foot rod. We had several in the bag over five pounds. Having fished all the water near the camp thoroughly, we determined the next day to drive further up the river, as there were a lot of bottom fishes about, we thought it probable they might make salmon shy.

The water we came to higher up was everything a salmon fisher could desire, the river not being quite so wide and the pools were fishable. I was fishing a splendid piece of water, flat at the side, so that I could wade out a little from the bank and make a good cast into the deep stream running through the middle. N. B. looking on, I had just remarked: "If there is a salmon in the river he should be here," when a fish took the minnow and made the reel buzz. "Great Scott!" I exclaimed, "a salmon." Anyone who has landed a salmon cannot be mistaken, the play is so different to any other fish. He fought hard and game, and we were all excitement at again seeing a salmon at the end of the rod. I invariably land my own fish, and soon had this one with his head on the shallow, then getting fairly behind him, had my fingers in his gills in a moment, and carried out the first salmon taken with rod and line in the San Joaquin river.

A perfect beauty of ten pounds, I left a proud man. It being past sundown, we had to hasten back to camp, which we decided to move on the following day to this part of the river. We had salmon cutlets for supper and pronounced them quite equal to any we had tasted in San Francisco.

Next morning we made a move to a point about five miles higher up stream, as far as we could go with a wagon; to get up further it would be necessary to have pack animals and follow a difficult trail.

We made our camp under a large oak tree, some little distance above the river, as it was so steep we could not get the wagon down further, the only drawback was having to bring our water up to camp and take the horses down to the river to drink. I am afraid I have made this letter of unconscionable length already, so will proceed to wind in my line. We remained here till the 29th, and caught forty or fifty pounds' weight of fish a day, most of them from five to ten pounds each, and some running up to fifteen pounds. My great triumph took place on the 26th (don't look up what day of the week it was). I was fishing a very stiff piece of water, the tail of a large pool, when the fish took the minnow well out in the stream; the moment I hooked him I knew he was a salmon and a large one. I was alone; below me was a furious boiling torrent, and the rocks were so piled up, one on another, I could scarcely move, and to follow my fish was next to impossible. I knew if he once got out into the heavy water, nothing I could do would stop him, so I made up my mind I must hold him all the tackle would bear. I could work him a little up the stream, and I did, making him pull for every inch of line; well, after a hard and most exciting battle of fully twenty minutes, I had him under control, and after tiring him well out, treated him as the former and soon had him high and dry; after the coup de grace I had leisure to admire my catch, perfect in every way, a clean-run fish of fully twenty pounds. Never have I seen a more beautiful fish. He was soon in the bag and deposited under a rock in the shade. I fished down another pool or two and landed two steel heads of about ten pounds each, and then thought it was time to make for camp, with forty pounds' weight on my back, two hundred yards of almost perpendicular hill to climb, and then more than a mile along the trail. I was thankful when I got there and hot was not the word for it, but what will a man not do when he has a salmon of his own catching in his bag?

The next day we walked about five miles up the river, determined to fish back to camp. The river up here had narrowed considerably and was more rocky, and looked more inviting, and I expected a salmon at every cast, but the river had risen during the night, the hot day previous having sent down a lot of snow water, so that the river had risen nearly a foot, but was only slightly colored. I fished down some miles and had a run. N. B. had his bag full of game, he having paid more attention to hunting of late than fishing.

It being passed noon, we decided to have our lunch and cool off before doing anything more. After resting a couple of hours, I again commenced fishing and in the second pool got hold of a good fish; after some lively play I had him out, a very pretty salmon of 15 pounds. We had decided that we must leave on the morrow, and get back to our work again. I hooked one other salmon, a fish of 10 pounds during our trip, and was just thinking it was time to land him, when he gave a turn and was off. On inspection I found one of my hooks had gone. I also caught a sea trout of about three pounds, a very game fish; very good eating and pink fleshed.

It took us a day and a half to reach home. We interviewed some of our old friends on the way, who had told us salmon would not be caught, but we could not persuade them that this had been done, and I am sure they believed we had got them by other means than with rod and line. So ended a most enjoyable trip, and our success in catching the first salmon with rod and line.

A friend, who had visited the rivers since we left, says great stories are told in that region of our exploits; how we had used giant powder, and the river came down full of dead fish the day after we left. It is hard to persuade the unbelieving, but I still live in the hope of again landing a salmon from the San Joaquin with rod and line. Gresham.

A Shameful Outrage.

The following, credited to the Truckee Republican, is going the rounds of the press, and is arousing a righteous spirit of indignation amongst sportsmen wherever seen. It seems very strange to us that any editor should so openly encourage the violation of the laws of the State. The quotation is as follows:

"A few fish are being caught in the river and Donner creek. While it may be contrary to law to catch them now the Republican will not turn informer, especially when a fish or two is left on the editor's desk. The law making a close season at this time of the year is a foolish one, and can be etter honored by the breach than by the observance."

David S. Jordan's Lecture.

Professor David S. Jordan, at the solicitation of the Board of Fish Commissioners, kindly furnished them with the full notes of his recent lecture on the fishes of this coast, and the same is now in the hands of the State printer, and will be ready for general distribution shortly. The action of the Fish Commission in thus availing themselves of the opportunity of thus presenting to the public this valuable treatise upon a subject so important to the anglers and students of pisciculture on this coast.

The State Fish Commission have placed 1,500,000 salmon fry in the waters of the upper Sacramento. The spawn in the Bear Valley hatchery are in fine, vigorous condition. The streams of this State are full of trout save alone Sonoma creek along which it seems that depredations are so frequent as to render the successful propagation of fish in that stream impossible. It seems strange that the people along this once famous trout stream should be so willful in their disregard of a law the proper enforcement of which would re-down directly to their interests.

The State Commission received this week 30,000 landlocked salmon eggs from the United States Fish Commission and will plant the produce in Lake Tahoe. While this is not a large number yet these eggs are scarce and the commission are lucky to obtain even so many.

EQUINE STUDIES.

Nevada Breeding Race Horses—A Great Entry List.

NEVADA BREEDING RACE HORSES.—Climatic conditions have always been recognized as of vital importance in breeding racehorses and fast trotters, and for that matter horses for any and all purposes. Ever since attention has been given to rearing horses, centuries in the past, it was noted that some districts are vastly superior for equine physical development, and that though there were only slight differences apparent, it could not be denied that animals bred and reared a few miles apart had pronounced variations. Climate, soil, herbage water, topography, atmosphere are acknowledged to influence the progeny.

In comparing California and Nevada, or rather the valleys and foothills of California with the valleys and mountain sides of Nevada, the most striking differences are elevation and pasturage, the higher altitude,of course, affecting a change of temperature, and also the density of the atmosphere.

Theories are easily constructed, and speculations as to what effect heat, cold, lighter or heavier air will have in the rearing of racehorses are not difficult to advance, but theories and speculative imaginings are frequently far from the results which follow practical tests.

In order to obtain information in regard to Nevada as a race-horse-region and to visit Mr. Winter's breeding farm in Washoe Valley, and furthermore have a look at the horses in training, the broodmares and colts, I made the trip when the season, in all probability, would be as unfavorable as at any period of the year.

The middle of January, as it was early in the morning of the 14th, when breakfast was eaten on the attached dining car and the train was slipping easily down the grade on the banks of the Truckee. There was plenty of snow on the hills and fringes of ice along the shores of the stream. Brightly shone the sun and when Reno was reached it had gained an altitude that sent the rays warm and inspiriting through the clear atmosphere.

The first night on a sleeping-car is not, as a rule, a restful one with me, but the pure air, better than half a dozen cocktails to get up an appetite, and the breakfast was a hearty one, and under the benign influence of old Sol the walk to the track in company with Mr. Winters was as pleasant as could be desired.

A short walk, or rather a saunter, on that bright midwinter morning, as there were frequent stoppages to admire the views and the temperature so bland that sauntering was more pleasant than brisker progression when encumbered with an overcoat. Thus much had quickly been learned that Nevada winter-weather, at least such a sample of it as that before us, must be the right sort for racehorses, and judging by the old axiom that "what is good for man is good for horse," and if my feelings were a criterion the colts should be in high spirits. This was soon proven. The first division were taking their preliminary walk when we got to the stable and it was evident that "work" would be play for them on that morning. Every indication of which robust health,even with their winter coats,their hair was glossy, just in the right flesh,and the best guarantee of all, eyes which, while they might snap with mischief, were beaming with spirit and resolution. There were eleven in the string all good lookers with, of course, some which either overtopped the others, and a number so nearly on a par that as they circumvallated the walking-ring it was difficult to award a decided preference and even the subsequent gallops failed to give definite points to warrant a choice.

Chan Haskell, by Norfolk, is the only one in the string which is over three years old, and very like his sire he is, not only in appearance, as his action brought vividly to mind a May day in St. Louis, nearly twenty-eight years ago, when I saw his sire gallop away from strong fields so easily that it scarcely seemed possible that noted colts were in the rear. Pyramid, by Joe Hooker, from Addie O'Neal, by Leinster, a powerful fellow of that rich shade of chestnut which harmonizes so well with the bright colors of the turf, almost as glossy as the "silks and satins," and when relieved by white markings, is particularly taking,especially when leading under the wire, and I shall certainly be disappointed if the three crosses of Lexington, and the Australian, and the triple work of Glencoe, with the high form exhibited, do not entitle Pyramid to his share of brackets before the season of 1892 is brought to a close. G. & C. (Gould & Curry) is also a chestnut, and an own brother to that good race horse Bonanza, a finely-bred fellow, and of good form, hardly as "lengthy" as I would like, but there have been many high-class racehorses which did not fill the measure in that respect, and as G & C. gallops like one of that class, "action speaks louder than words," and that he will prove a "useful horse" I have not the least doubt. Tahoe is a brother to Pyramid, a year younger, and much as I was impressed with the older, must give a slight preference to the junior. He is also a chestnut with white markings, and goes along like a sure-enough race horse. Which do you like the best? That is a question which has puzzled me so many times that I must acknowledge that it does not have a tranquilizing influence when it comes, after looking over a lot of colts.

I cannot quite say that Bueno was absolutely entitled to the first place, and yet could not select one which I thought the superior of this bay son of Joe Hooker. If anything, he has more of the action of Norfolk than Chan Haskell, and those who can recall the style of that premier son of Lexington will admit that it was of a kind seldom seen. Never apparently tired, he ran with his head up and clean stroke, never clambering or faltering, going at his ease when others were straining every muscle and nerve. Bueno is a good deal after the pattern of his grandsire, though with Hooker characteristics, and should he combine their good qualities in a greater degree than any of his stable mates, he will win many bright decorations in the coming campaign.

Rose Hickman, two years, by Joe Hooker, her dam Countess Zeika, by Norfolk, has the racing shape, and if there is any truth in heredity, she is well entitled to the form of a race horse, and, which is of more consequence, the ability to show that form in the greatest perfection, victories gained over the flyers of the turf. Her dam is from Ballerina, by imp. Balrownie, a half-brother to Bonnie Scotland, and Ballerina's dam, Hennie Farrow. Rose, therefore, has a double strain of the dam of Mollie McCarthy, Ralston, Flood and others, and likewise a double cross of Lexington. She is of rather slighter form than a majority of the Hookers, but her machinery is so justly poised that immense muscular power is not necessary, though when she brushed past me there was a vim, an energy displayed which gave evidence of plenty of power to propel the nicely-adjusted mechanism, I was struck with the appearance of the Jumbos, and still more favorably impressed with their handy way of galloping, a three-year-old filly by Jumbo from Ogzille, by Norfolk, her dam May B., by Shannon, and her third dam Jessie R., by Woodburn, should race, and race fast, if form and action can be depended upon for a line. Another Jumbo filly gives promise of speed and as she traces twice to Big Gun, that there will be foot enough to go in the fastest company is as nearly an assured fact as anything in the future can be assured. The mixing of Joe Hooker and Oregon blood has resulted in some of the wonderfully speedy class, and, as the sire of Jumbo, California, was a full brother to Hooker, it is safe to predict that good will result from the union. Jim Renwick, Oregon Eclipse, Hercules and others have so firmly established the conjunction that it may be termed settled. Some of these colts were bred and reared in Nevada and were little if any, behind their California relations in growth and development. And now for the course on this midwinter morning of 1892.

There had been a fall of snow, some of which still hung in the lee of buildings and fences and there was as light seepage from the melting remainder. The track, however, was so nearly dry that the harrow worked finely, and even in the morning it was quite fair for galloping. The colts were only in the first stage of preparation as the intention was not to start them on their Eastern journey until March was well under way, and the "brushes" I witnessed was about the first that had been given. The action of some of them has already been commented upon, but I must say that there was hardly one that could be rated as inferior or that had not a fair show to make a racehorse. Some of them fast enough to warrant the prophecy that they will play a prominent part in any company.

Beautiful is the location of the Reno Fair Ground. The plain is wide but so encircled with mountains that it cannot be subject to high winds. If it be true that the "Washoe Zephyrs" come with the force which is said to be common when atmospheric disturbances prevail, it seems to me that it must be due to compression between ranges of mountains which are only divided by narrow valleys, and when the valley is as wide as that of Reno the force must be weakened just as a raging torrent comes to quietude in a sheet of water, and though there may be a good stiff breeze after the expansion, it cannot be a great deal worse than that which at times is somewhat uncomfortable on the Bay District.

But I shall give more attention to the climatic conditions of Nevada for horse breeding when describing Mr. Winters rancho, and as that will require an article by itself, and more than one newspaper article will be necessary to do it full justice, and therefore will close this with a few cogitations on the effect of training racehorses with the intention of preparing them for an Eastern campaign at an elevation of five thousand feet above the ocean level. It is the unanimous opinion of those who have "carried" horses from here to run or trot at Reno, Carson, and the courses in Montana that they labor under a great disadvantage, the rarified atmosphere increasing the labor of the lungs. If this be true then the reverse should be beneficial, and horses brought from a high elevation to one not far above the sea level will have "better wind" than those which are kept on the lower altitude. Outside of the mountain States all of the prominent racecourses in this country are located at comparatively low altitudes. Without going into a close investigation, I am of the opinion that the racecourse at Saratoga has the highest elevation of any of them east of the Rocky Mountains, and this may be one of the characteristics which gives it such wide celebrity as a horse sanitarium. That the atmosphere and the water are the main factors in establishing health must be admitted as all other conditions are analagous to those existing in other places. Food and attention are the same, though it may be that as many horses which have become stale are taken there to recuperate, the slackening of work may have a potent influence in inducing recovery. At all events it can be taken as proven, that benefits do follow the transfer to Saratoga, and that when returned to other places there is manifest improvement. I do not suppose that Mr. Winters' colts will be "keyed up" before starting on the Eastern journey, if that be commenced as soon as was intended when I was there, and therefore the comparison will not be as complete as it would be if the work had been carried to a point which would disclose their full capacity. But should the journey be accomplished without showing any ill effects, such, as in a majority of cases, are likely to prevail, it can be claimed that the passage from a high altitude to one still higher, and from that to a low level does not entail the drawbacks that a transfer from low to high and then to low again, and that there are fewer risks. Then again should the colts which I saw gallop at Reno show less distress in breathing, and the tiring is more through loss of muscular power than owing to lung failure, it can surely be assumed that their lungs are in a better shape than they would have been if trained in the "lower country."

That in the human family mountaineers are hardier, can endure fatigue with less suffering, especially fatigue which comes from rapid movements, than people who have been reared on lower ground is universally admitted, and though it does not appear to be within the range of probability that greater racehorses than El Rio Rey, Emperor of Norfolk, Racine and many other of our California celebrities can be reared in Nevada, arguing from the human standpoint it may happen.

There will be a good test on Mr. Winters' Nevada farm Marion was taken there before Yo El Rey was weaned. her last colt was foaled there, Countess Zeika, Lou Spencer and several other, dams of winners are in the same situation, and as I shall show in the next article they will have the best opportunites which can be afforded in Nevada, a few years will go far to decide the question.

A GREAT ENTRY LIST—Although my resolution was to have little to offer anent the Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeders' Association affairs, so long as I retained office in that society, though there are points which I cannot well pass by. It certainly comes within my resolution to compliment the breeders of California on the support they have extended to the purses and stakes which are to be decided at the Fall meeting—a generous and liberal support, unprecedented in the trotting history of the Pacific Coast, and a "glorious" endorsement of the action of the Directors in promulgating a programme which a few denounced, and declared with all the emphasis they could summon that it would be a grand failure, that stakes would fail to receive nominations, and, with few exceptions, the purses be ignored. The result: In the aggregate there are 348 nominations and entries, an average of over fifteen for each event. Twenty-two purses and stakes were advertised, and only one was thrown out by the Directors, and that was the two-year-old pacing purse. As there were only two named in that, it did not come within the general rule, and therefore the nominators could not expect satisfaction.

I heartily concur in the action which has a tendency to bring about the adoption in purse races of the rule which provides that there shall be all that are required to "fill," and accepting pacing purses with four and five entries was a move in that direction. Pacing is a legitimate element in sports of the track, and the sport-loving public give hearty approval whenever a field of pacers contend. By encouraging this division of harness sport, spectators are gratified, and the breeders of trotters who oftentimes have colts which "take to pacing" are awarded another chance to employ them with profit.

The stallion purses offered were the main attack of the critics: "The free-for-all was sure to fail; the 2:15 might have a few entries, but altogether it was a waste of the cost of advertising," were the wailing notes of the objectors. There are fifty-two entries in the five purses, an average of over ten in each. so that over one-half of the amount offered will be returned, and with the second payment to be made ten days before the first day of the meeting, the Association will be nearly recouped by the entrance money alone. There are fine prospects for grand races in each of these. The free-for-all has seven in it, Palo Alto, McKinney, Balkan, Silas Skinner, Advertiser, Cupid and Charles Derby. Again the critics were ready to pick flaws, the particular charge being that the champion, Palo Alto, was entered. Ever since Palo Alto so gallantly transferred the stallion championsnip from the Eastern king, several of the Eastern trotting scribes have claimed that he was not a "racehorse," and that in races he would be in the rear of several of the Oriental trotters.

Notwithstanding he has only lost two actual races this was carefully kept in the background, and if he had not been named in a free-for-all purse for the liberal amount of $2,000, there would have been no end to their diatribes. He dare not meet Stamboul or McKinney would be the cry, and it is not a "foregone conclusion" that these two would be beaten by the best of the Eastern representatives. Stamboul is not far behind from the record point of observation, and a four-year-old which trots in 2:12½ and shows in all of his races that he can be called, and safely so, a racehorse, is in it with the best. That would surely be the cry, and, in all probability, the absence of "record breakers" and kite-track performers from the champion stakes and other purses in which they were eligible will be ascribed to a fondness for "going it alone" and a well-grounded fear that there might be a lack of stamina and steadiness when good company was to be met.

I look for the 2:15 stallion class to be one of, if not the very best of the California season. The marks are close together and every one of the nine have given proofs of possessing the other racehorse qualities. It is difficult to prognosticate in relation to which has the best chance to win from previous performances, and until the season is well advanced there can only be vague guesses.

And there will be a grand and glorious opportunity for guessing all through the list, and though Yankees are famous for seeing farther into obscurity than any other people, there will be sufficient scope in a majority of these races to try their skill.

Vineland Stock Farm Sale.

In the introductory notice which appears on the synopsis of the catalogue of sale of the Vineland Stock Farm mares, colts and fillies, Mr. F. W. Loeber makes the following plain and simple announcement:

"This list of broodmares is the result of judicious breeding and careful selection of the best individuals of the respective families to which they belong. Everything of horse kind that I own, except my stallions, are in the list, and will be sold to the highest bidder, without reserve. There are many I hate to part with, as I know in a few years they will be among the great broodmares of the country, but I fully realize that I cannot make the sale a success unless I let them go. I have no old mares that have been tried and found wanting; they are principally young mares just put to breeding. The young stock from these mares that will be sold will give the purchasers some idea of what they will be as broodmares.

"Complete catalogues will be out by March 20th and will be mailed on application. The sale will take place at the Napa Fair Grounds, Wednesday, March 30, 1892."

Only One of Many.

Danger took the first prize at the stallion show at Livermore last week. He is by Director, 2:17, dam Blanche, by Whipple's Hambletonian; second dam, Lady Allen, by Vick's Ethan Allen. Blanche will be in Pierce's April sale. She produced Wilkey, by George Wilkes (sold and died in Oregon; trial, 2:26½; Brookdale, by Woodnut, now two years, that will go in the 30 list, also a fast yearling colt by Bay Rose). Danger looks more like Director than any of his get I have seen. Mr. Robert Bonner will stand him at Pleasanton, and after the season he will be trained.

Petaluma Fair.

The attention of all horsemen is called to the advertisement of the Sonoma and Marin Agricultural Society in another column. The different events are presented in full, and the feature that appeals to all stallion-owners, called the Stallion Produce Stakes, should fill extremely well. The Petaluma Fair is one of the most popular of all the meetings, and for good judging, good racing and good purses it is the peer of any other in the State.

THERE is nothing that does a stallion as much good as to have those owning an unsuccessful rival condemn him at every opportunity.

If you are melancholy or down with the blues you need Simmons Liver Regulator.

Family Characteristics and "Outcrossing."

It is astonishing how quick the majority of breeders has come to a realization that there is no middle ground in the business of rearing trotters. It only pays these days to breed from the gilt-edged; and far-sighted gentlemen are fast disposing of their unfashionable broodmares and stallions for what they will bring under the hammer of the livestock auctioneer. This is well enough, but a good outcross is always desirable. Breeding trotters has progressed so smoothly, and the rank and file of the breeders of the present are such intelligent students that they are capable of telling at a glance almost the exact amount a horse will bring in the market. There is no denying that popular blood lines go for more than individuality at present. Take a fine-looking, non-standard mare at a sale and place alongside of her a standard matron with nothing to commend her but a first-class pedigree, and the fashionably-bred mare will outsell the non-standard one nineteen times out of twenty. A very good case in point was the late Palo Alto broodmare sale, where non-standard Mohawk Chief mares, fine individuals, went at low figures, and standard General Benton matrons brought goodly sums all the way through. Notwithstanding this, probably the greatest living broodmare, opportunities considered, is Sontag Mohawk, a daughter of Mohawk Chief.

The worth of most every trotting family is by this time pretty clearly determined. A person buying mares with lots of the blood in their veins of The Moor, Mambrino Patchen, American Star 14, Clark Chief, Belmont 64, George Wilkes, Mambrino Boy, Dictator or Nutwood cannot be far wide of the mark when he aims to get a good animal for the harem. Other lines have been weighed in the public scale and not found wanting when a good sire is desired. The fashionable male line of the present is the Hambletonian, beyond peradventure. Almost all the sons of Rysdyk's horse have proven themselves excellent producers, and the grandsons are not one whit behind their sires. The marked success of The Moor and Mambrino Patchen mares when mated with Hambletonan stallions can be attributed to the direct outcross. A large amount of any particular blood in a performer is in most instances a bad thing, and better results can almost invariably be attained from mating a mare with a stallion that makes a good outcross.

Take the fastest trotters in the world, and the value of the above-mentioned point is at once discerned. The Messenger blood in Sunol was a long distance removed, although there was considerable of it in the sire of her dam, General Benton. The blood of Lexington, received through her grandam, Waxy, made a perfect outcross, and the result was the record-breaking bay mare. Palo Alto, 2:08¾, is another excellent example, as is Maud S., 2:08¾. In the veins of her dam flowed the blood of the great thoroughbred Boston and that of Pilot Jr., who sprang from the loins of the old pacer Canadian Pilot. Arion, 2:10¾ at two years, has a large amount of Hambletonian 10 blood in his veins, received through both sire and dam, but not close up enough to call him an inbred trotter by any manner of means. The phenomenal yearlings, Frou-Frou, Fausta, Bell Bird and Freedom score a strong point against the gentlemen who believe that one cannot get too much of any good horse's blood in a trotter. Frou-Frou is by Sidney, a great grandson of Hambletonian 10, from the Buccaneer mare, Flirt, second dam by Flaxtail. Fausta is by the same sire, and out of a Crown Point mare, who had very little Hambletonian blood on her side. Bell Bird is by Electioneer, a son of Hambletonian 10, and out of a mare by The Moor, who had no Hambletonian blood in his make-up. As nearly everything by Electioneer from Beautiful Bells was exceedingly fast, and as this great dam of trotters was far from being a first-class, reliable race mare herself, the outcross was what carried the day in this case. Stamboul, 2:11, is another excellent illustration of the value of The Moor-Hambletonian cross. For every "inbred" success on the trotting turf we can point to forty good ones that resulted from a good outcross, and it therefore proves that "one swallow does not make a summer." We expect to see, therefore, the phenomenally successful breeder of the future in the man who makes the largest number of outcrosses, taking care, of course, to avoid the families that have been noted for mushy legs, "heart failure" or devilish dispositions.

Among the thoroughbreds of America, also, the best performers have resulted from direct outcrosses. Good as the blood of Lexington "The Great" was for a number of years, before so much of it was distributed promiscuously, it did not take the intelligent student of the subject of breeding very long to discover that a horse with little blood in his veins beside that of Lexington could not amount to much, and the importation of stallions from England and Australia solved the problem. Salvator, king of the American turf, was a good instance of what can be done with an outcross, he being by imported Prince Charlie, dam Salina, by Lexington; Kingston, who has been a wonderful race horse, is by Spendthrift, dam the imported mare Kapanga—an outcross; Luke Blackburn, the best horse of his era, was by imported Bonnie Scotland from Nevada, by Lexington; Longfellow, king of the turf in his time, was by imported Leamington, dam Nantura, by Brawner's Eclipse—a complete outcross; Potomac, the best two and three-year-old of 1890 and 1891 respectively, is another illustration of what an intelligent outcross will do, he being by imp. St. Blaise, dam Susquehanna (daughter of Leamington and Susan Beane, by Lexington); Ten Broeck, the great record-breaker, was by imported Phaeton, out of Fanny Holton, by Lexington; Hindoo, generally considered the best race horse ever produced in America, was by Virgil (son of Vandal and Hymenia), dam Florence, by Lexington. It shows what a great and good sire of wonderful dams of performers Lexington was, but it generally took some imported blood to bring its worth out clearly. As a sire of sires Lexington cannot be called a success, although there were some very fair sons of Lexington in the stud. Imported Bonnie Scotland was the most prepotent sire in America up to the time of his death, about eleven years ago, and even when the old horse was in his grave, his get were the largest winners on the turf of this country.

But few of his sons proved at all worthy of him in the stud, but Bonnie Scotland mares are hard to improve upon. Imported Leamington's sons have had phenomenal success as sires, notably Longfellow, Onondaga and Iroquois, and the daughters are far from bad. Imported Glencoe was essentially a broodmare sire, while imp. Australian was deservedly famous as a sire of sires. Imp. Great Tom was anything but good at producing first-class race horses, yet the daughters of this son of King Tom are proving wonderfully valuable as dams of fast and game ones. To conclude, a person who rates the various families at their true worth and appreciates the value of an outcross is the one who will succeed as a breeder of race horses, either trotters or runners.

Owners of well-bred stallions should bear in mind that the use of printers' ink in setting forth the horse's claims works wonders. If the horse is not fast himself, but merely fashionably-bred, advertising is the animal's only hope of rescue from the Slough of Obscurity. If you do not book a single mare to your stallion, an attractive advertisement will soon put him before the public in such a favorable light that not many days will pass over your head ere some one comes along and makes a liberal offer for the horse, which but a short time ago seemed doomed to remain forever in the background for want of a little study of the subject of advertising and its many benefits. Perhaps this horse will be mated with some splendid broodmares on his new owner's place and make his mark as a sire of speed, and when he does, if you are liberal-minded, you cannot but bless the men who invented type and printers' ink. If you don't sell the horse, but book a couple of mares to him, your advertisement is more than paid for, and thus the merit of advertising is shown in another way.

Eastern Sales and Printers' Ink.

"If I had known she was to be sold, I would have sent an order to get her, but I did not know it," was the remark of a breeder to another the day after the Palo Alto sale in New York.

There was a sermon to breeders in this declaration. Of the 686 head that were sold by Brasfield & Co. for $599,475, how many do the readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN suppose came to California? Not one. At least 1,200 horses have been sold in the Eastern market at the large auction sales since January 1st this year. Of this number, not even three have come to California.

After the sale of our California stock perhaps a brother or a sister of some royally-bred one is mentioned, and a two-line item appears regarding the sale. Breeders are astonished to hear that there were many others from the same farm (that would suit them just as well) which were sold for prices that they would willingly pay, if they had any idea they were to be sold. To go to the farms where these youngsters were bred and raised and to offer anything like the prices the owners were compelled to take, less ten per cent commission and cost of transportation to the East, would be a foolish act, for the probabilities are the inquirer would be looked upon as demented and treated according to their supposed sad and pitiable condition.

Every little turf journal east of the Rocky mountains contains the names of every animal catalogued from our California Stock Farms, and breeders there are better informed as to these sales weeks before the sales take place than we are on the Pacific Coast.

The breeders who do not subscribe for those papers containing the tabulated pedigrees of all the youngsters sold are "in the dark." Does it ever occur to the consignors that the Californians who imported good stock in early days and laid the foundations of their present great establishments deserve to know that they have an opportunity of purchasing some of the youngsters that were held at such high prices by the owners here? Is it possible that the dollars of the East are better than the coin of the West, and that they believe all owners of horses and broodmares are on the verge of ruin or bankruptcy here? Are they afraid to have the consignments of horses offered listed in the California papers for fear some one might write East for the stock? It looks selfish, to say the least.

California is a great State; it will be the greatest of the United States. There is not an industry that flourishes within Uncle Sam's dominions that it cannot surpass, and as far as raising fast, game and strongly-constituted horses there is no other place to equal it. It has become the nursery of trotters, the play-ground of phenomenons and the battle-field of tried campaigners; for every stallion and mare that breathes the balmy air of the Pacific Slope is benefitted thereby, and the people of the East are cognizant of this fact.

While the large breeders here believe in taking away from these shores many good ones, they manage to slip in some very poor ones, and, by advertising liberally in the Eastern press, Eastern people buy, while the good-natured, easy-going breeders of the West are sleeping, and only waken to realize that the prizes that they had set their hopes upon had slipped away among the "riff-raff" because they did not know they would ever be sold.

THE Grey Eagle–Wagner, Ten Broeck–Mollie McCarthy, Longfellow–Harry Bassett, Norfolk-Lodi, Lexington–Lecompte and Fashion–Boston races at long distances are events in American turf history that will always be talked of and never forgotten, and the crowds that flocked in those good old days to the race track from far and near attested better than any words that people will become interested at any time in sure-enough horse races. Now-a-days the racing of thoroughbreds is almost entirely confined to the sprinters, and these events are not calculated to create an indelible impression on the memory of any race-goer or give one something that will cause a thrill of pleasure to pass over him in the sere and yellow leaf time of his life. He can tell his grandchildren how the gallant Longfellow came in on three legs in his last race, and how the little mare Fashion surprised people by defeating the great old Boston, but thoughts of the majority of races of the present, where a lot of horses with little or no stamina cavort and kick around at the post for an hour trying to get a start in a half-mile dash only arouse unpleasant feelings in the minds of every true lover of the staunch and game thoroughbred. Give us some good, old-fashioned, long distance races, something to remember, and do away with a large number of two-year-old races and skate sprints. If this is not done, who can say but that the thoroughbred will keep on deteriorating until he rises little above the level of the scrub quarter-horse or the broncho of the sporty cowboy?

Exchanges Beneficial to Both Sides.

The news received from a number of stallion-owners is most encouraging. The selfishness of many who have persisted in breeding every mare on their stock farms to their premier stallion seems to have subsided. They now believe in breeding to the stallions whose blood "nicks" or "blends" best with the families that their choicest mares represent, and a spirit of liberal trading for "services" is being manifested. The most successful horsemen are those who study the problem of breeding from the foundation, and are cognizant of the results that may be attained by judicious breeding. The liberal-minded views that are entertained by our progressive breeders elevate more than anything else the labors of our trotting horse industry. The columns of this journal contain the names and pedigrees of many famous sires that have achieved world-wide fame; besides, there are sons of other great ones that are also in the race for honors. The trotting horse industry is improving the horses of the present day at a rate that is almost incomprehensible, and the day is not far distant when a "three-minute horse" will be as common as a "five-minute horse" is to-day. Road horses that are slower than this will be seen in butcher carts, express wagons and light vehicles, where even there, as individuals, they will far surpass the horses we see at present on our crowded thoroughfares. This is no fancy sketch, but the truth. If any man thinks that his horse will sire trotters from every kind of mare, he is mistaken. He must try and see if the mare has not sufficient breeding "of the right kind" to produce trotters when bred to his horse; otherwise, if he does not care to sell her, he can trade services with some other stallion-owner who may desire just that mare to bring his horse into prominence, and he has a broodmare that will increase the other stallion's roll of honor by sending her in exchange.

THE trotting season—that is, of racing—is over four months off, and for those "trainers" who are hurrying their entries along and "showing wonderful trials" at this early day we would respectfully prescribe for the gentlemen a complete rest of six weeks, with large doses of fish, eggs, milk and other brain food. At the end of that time such "trainers" could look into the pedigrees of the animals in their charge and see if they traced back to The Iron Horse. If they did not, then it might occur to them that a flesh-and-blood trotter cannot be counted on with any certainty for a mile every day in the year in 2:20 or better.

WITH Guilderoy tracks at Stockton, Bakersfield, Merced Gonzales, Vacaville and possibly Watsonville, California will soon fly her trotting horse kite high up in the racing sky; in fact, out of sight of our poor brethren on the other side of the Rockies. The horses of the effete East are now so far behind that steps will doubtless be taken in the near future to put a heavy handicap on the flyers from the Golden State, so as to even up matters a trifle.

The latest received to-day (Friday) regarding John A. Goldsmith's illness is that he is convalescing and will be able to be about next week. Everyone will be pleased to hear this news.

The Breeders' Association.

The enthusiasm which prevails among the trotting horse breeders on this coast since the publication of the long list of entries in last week's issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is unprecedented in the history of trotting horses in this State. The number of owners of young stallions who are beginning to realize the benefits of belonging to this live organization is on the increase, and applications for membership are coming in rapidly.

A meeting of the directors of the association was held last Monday afternoon as the rooms 313 Bush street, President Jos. Cairn Simpson in the chair. This meeting was called to pass upon the entries for the colt and stallion purses and stakes for the Fall Race Meeting, which will be held in October, and for the transaction of such other business as might be presented.

The outlook for a series of interesting races was commented upon, and after the Secretary read over the list of entries it was decided that all the races for stakes and purses be declared filled with the exception of the two-year-old pacing purse, in which there were but two entries. Several events which lacked one or two of the usually required number were filled, the board taking a liberal view of the situation on account of the large number of entries received on the programme as a whole.

The resignation of Mr. Wm. Corbitt as a member of the board of directors was presented and accepted, and Mr. D. J. Murphy, of San Jose, was elected to fill the vacancy made thereby.

The following applications for membership were received and the applicants elected members of the association:

T. W. Barstow.....San Jose	C. P. Chamberlin....Tacoma, Wash.
W. F. Hitchcock.....Alameda	E. B. Jennings.....Napa
J. E. McCoy.....Hueneme	J. A. McDonald.....San Rafael

The list published in the BREEDER of last week was incomplete, as time had not elapsed before our going to press to receive entries that were made on the 1st inst., but delayed in the mails. The following is a list of such additional entries in the various purses and stakes:

State Veterinarians Meet.

The quarterly meeting of the California State Medical Veterinary Association was held at the Baldwin Hotel on Wednesday evening. Vice-President W. F. Eagan presided in the absence of President W. E. D. Morrison, of Los Angeles.

The Chairman announced that the following gentlemen are now members of the Association, and in good standing: Thomas Maclay, Petaluma; A. M. McCallum, Sacramento; H. A. Spencer, San Jose; R. T. Whittlesey, Los Angeles; J. Blackington, Los Angeles; Ward B. Rowland, Pasadena; E. E. Pierce, Oakland; W. J. Oliver, Los Angeles; C. Masoero, San Francisco; W. E. Wadams, Santa Clara; C. B. Orvis, Stockton; P. C. Davenport, Santa Rosa: P. P. Parent, Ukiah; Peter Burns, San Francisco; H. F. Spencer, San Jose; R. A. Archibald, Sacramento; D. F. Fox, Salinas, and W. Davidson, San Bernardino.

A letter was received from Mrs. W. H. Woodruff thanking the Society for sympathy and financial help rendered to her the death of her late husband. There being no papers to be read, a general discussion on subjects of interest to the veterinary profession took place.

The most important topic of the evening was that of the prevalence of glanders in this State. Dr. Maclay, of Petaluma, in a comprehensive address, strongly advocated the necessity of immediate legislation on this and other veterinary subjects. "At present," said he, "if I find a case of glanders and direct the owner of the animal to destroy it, he may or may not regard my instructions. Now there should be a law rendering it imperative that all animals suffering from this terrible and incurable disorder should be immediately destroyed and the stables and buildings thoroughly disinfected, and an infected area declared of at least a quarter of a mile around where the disease has manifested itself. Until such a law is passed the Board of Supervisors in each county of the State should pass ordinances to enforce these principles."

Dr. Maclay then described the methods in vogue in Glasgow, Scotland, for dealing with all cases of glanders and other contagious diseases. He commented on the terrible fact of the carcasses of glandered horses being thrown in quantities into the Socramento River, endangering the lives not only of all animals drinking the water, but the health and lives of untold numbers of our fellow creatures. Many people have died in recent years from the effects of glanderial contagion, and, as, owing to the present lax condition of the law dealing with such diseases, glanders is spreading and likely to increase, the speaker strenuously appealed to the members, the press and the public, to take immediate action to nip the threatened danger of an epidemic in the bud.

Dr. Spencer, of San Jose, then spoke of the work done to eradicate this terrible disease in Santa Clara county. He was appointed to the office of County Veterinarian in 1888, and since then has had some sixty glandered horses destroyed, and believes that the disease is pretty well stamped out, yet it becomes necessary for him to be vigilant at all times, for glandered animals are sometimes turned out on pasture among young stock, and it becomes necessary to destroy them. He says that all farmers and horse-breeders are cognizant of the terrible results of having glanders on his place, consequently they are ever on the alert to apprise him if their suspicions are aroused.

Several of the members said there were many glandered horses in San Francisco, and no steps are taken by the authorities to stamp it out. The number of cattle killed every year suffering with anthrax, and the number of milch cows that have tuberculosis, would astonish the public if it were known. A county veterinarian should be specially employed to protect the public. He should be compelled to make a report every day, and by his vigilance and strict attention to duty, the spread of these infectious and contagious diseases may be checked.

Dr. Maclay again urged upon the members the necessity of having proper sanitary laws passed. Drs. Fox, Burns, McCallum, Orvis, Pierce, Spencer and Egan all testified to the need of proper legislative authority to stamp out the many dreaded diseases of horses, cattle and swine, and testified to the spread of these diseases in the counties of San Joaquin, Santa Barbara, Sacramento, Sonoma, Santa Cruz and Mendocino. It was stated, however, that in those counties where the Supervisors had passed ordinances and appointed county veterinarians the disease had been nearly rooted out, and was far less prevalent than in those counties where no action had been taken by the authorities. The meeting adjourned to the second Wednesday in June.

ON THE WING.

The Homes of Silver Bow and Soudan and Descriptions of the Stock There.—Billy Thornhill, the Handsomest Wilkes Stallion.

The foothills on the other side of the bay from Niles to San Jose are looking beautiful at present. The large fields of growing grain, the almond orchards in bloom, the budding vines in the evenly-planted vineyards, the rich, light-green foliage of the trees as they appear at this time of the year, the strawberry and small fruit gardens all prepared for the summer's crop, makes this portion of Alameda and Santa Clara counties a pleasant place to visit.

The train stops at Milpitas, and knowing that this is the hub of a little equine universe, a trip to the various stock farms in its vicinity was suggested. The "Silver Bow Stock Farm," named in honor of the premier stallion there, lies about one and a half miles northwest of the station. Milpitas, the town that once was noted for its life and business activity, has recovered in a measure from the "long spell of quietude" that made its name a by-word all over the State, for the crowd that gathered on its principal street that bright, warm morning attested to the revival of business there. We rode rapidly through its principal street, along the level road that was flanked on each side by running streams that are never dry, but flow steadily from the artesian wells, and over these pebbled courses to the bay. A long line of new fencing, the race track and the new barns that could be seen on the left of the road were the latest improvements on this stock farm. A drive through the gate and down a shaded, gravelled road around a neat, substantial cottage, and we were into the large square; on one side was a pasture field, in front was the large barn, on the right was a high-fenced corral, while separating it from the barn was a driveway leading in to the three-quarter mile track that has just been completed.

Messrs. Williams and Morehouse have completely transformed the old Dixon place into a very fair stock farm, but, as Mr. Williams said, "they have just commenced to improve the place. There is still greater work to be done to beautify the ranch." In one of the compartments of the large building we saw Silver Bow, 2:22½, and as his owner and trainer had him led out for our inspection we could not help repeating the words of admiration we expressed when first he came to this State. He is a type of horse that once seen is never forgotten. The beautiful, satin-like shadings of his coat, the large, intelligent eye, small ear, clean-cut head, sharp withers, short back, broad, full loin and perfect-rounded lines to the tail; his well-muscled quarters, large stifle, length from hip to hock and heavy, yet long-muscled thighs, well sustained by clean, hard hocks, flat legs, perfect-shaped pasterns, and hoofs as black and hard-looking as a buffalo horn. His well-shaped legs are well placed under him; his shoulders are slanting, but not too much so, his neck is fine and straight, and the head is well set on it, the jowls being wide, giving plenty of breathing room. His body is well-rounded, while from the point of stifle to back of elbow he is lengthy. His mane is composed of fine, straight, silky hair; in fact, he is of the thoroughbred type of a trotter, if such an appellation could be used. He was a race horse from his colthood and is one of those "horses that train on." His pedigree appears in another column, and is no doubt familiar to all readers. His first year in the stud last season was a successful one, and if we are to judge by his progeny, and that is the best proof, he transmits his high quality to every one of them. His record, 2:22½, will be lowered to that of the choice ones in the teens.

In the box stalls in the large building were a number of youngsters that were being handled for speed. Among them was the large, light chestnut colt Hindoo, by Soudan, 2:27½, out of Belle, by George M. Patchen Jr. This colt is very promising and we would not be surprised to see him pace very fast this year.

Mr. Williams has not taken up many colts to handle yet, but seems to be paying more attention to the broodmares that are becoming matrons of well-shaped Silver Bows. On this farm there are a number of royally-bred mares that will be heard of through their produce. Among them are the following:

Bay mare, Hattie, by Commodore Belmont 4340, first dam, Barona, by Woodford Mambrino 2:21½; second dam, by Alexander's Norman; third dam, by Grey Eagle.

Bay mare, Libretto, full sister to Hattie.

Gray mare, Holland, by Doncaster 4370 (record 2:28½), first dam, Berlin, by Com. Belmont 4340, son of Belmont, 64; second dam, Bauline, by Bayard, son of Pilot, Jr.; third dam, Pauline, by Cripple.

Bay mare, Grape, by Park 1711, first dam, Magnolia, by Rolla Goldust, son of Goldust 150; second dam, by Goldust, 150.

Bay mare, Leap Year, three-year-old (record 2:33½), by Tempest 1881, best-bred son of Almont 33, first dam, Eulogy, by Com. Belmont 4330, (sire of Cara Bell, 2:23); second dam Gracie H., by Fanny Goldust (sire of Fred Goldust, 2:27), etc.

Bay mare, Lo Lo, full sister to Leap Year, 2:33¼.

Bay mare, Matina, full sister to Leap Year.

Bay mare, Nantura, by Doncaster 4370 (record 2:20½,) first dam, Hetmanthes, by Tempest, sire of Gloster 2:26; second dam, Coral, by Com. Belmont 4340; third dam, Gypsey, by Kentucky Chief.

Gray mare, Nicondra, by Doncaster, son of Com. Belmont 4340, first dam, Isola, by Tempest, sire of Ilton 2:28½; second dam, Berlin, by Com. Belmont, sire of Evening Star 2:28; third dam, Bauline, by Bayard, son of Pilot Jr.; fourth dam, Pauline, by Cripple.

Bay mare, Magenta, by Tempest 1881, first dam, Indian Queen, by Com. Belmont, sire Geranium 2:28½; second dam, Nun, by Vindex, son of Blood's Blackhawk; third dam, the Coleman mare, by Pilot Jr.

Bay mare, Myrtie Peek, by Tempest, 1881, first dam, Gold Drop, by Com. Belmont, son of Belmont 64; second dam, Nannie D., by Eden Goldust, sire of Gold Ring 2:18; third dam, Eugenia, by Lexington, etc.

Bay mare, Maud Singleton, 2:28½, by Singleton, first dam, Mary, by Wayland Forrest, son of Edwin Forrest; second dam, the dam of Apex, four-year-old record, 2:26.

Black mare, Topsey, by Stanford, son of Electioneer, first dam, by Jim Lick, son of Homer 10; second dam, by John Nelson, son of Trustee; third dam, by Billy Cheatham, son of Belmont (Williamson's).

Bay mare, Fillet, by Viscount, son of Abdallah, 15, first dam, Anna Ferguson, by Commander, son of Boston; second dam, by Captain Elgee, son of imp. Leviathan, etc.

Bay mare, Nellie, by Gibraltar (sire of Homestake 2:14½), first dam, by Naubuc, brother to Thomas Jefferson 2:24; second dam said to be by Belmont (Williamson's).

One thoroughbred mare by Patsy Duffy, in foal to Eolian is also on this farm.

There are several young stallions here that will be useful this year. One of them in particular took our fancy. He is a Sidney, out of a Commodore Belmont mare, and although too full of vim and life to turn loose in a paddock, he is just the kind that horsemen like to handle. He is a splendidly gaited, rangy youngster.

A walk through the paddocks and across the fields of natural grasses, clover and barley cannot fail to excite the enthusiasm of the lover of nature. The geniality of our well-informed host and the pleasure it afforded him to point out the various items of interest on his new place will ever be remembered.

We rode back to Milpitas, and here we met James F. Boyd with the well-bred Wilkes stallion, Billy Thornhill, jogging along the road. This stallion's rich pedigree also adorns one of our advertising columns. He has been described often, and to compare him with any of the other stallions seen on this trip would be out of the question. He is a Wilkes all over, but not of the Guy nor Mambrino Wilkes style of horse. He resembles Harry Wilkes more in his perfect conformation and gait. He is as pretty as a picture, high-headed, stylish and courageous-looking. All who have seen him declare that what he lacks in great height and breadth he more than compensates in well-placed muscle on the very strongest thoroughbred-like frame. His limbs are hard and flint-like and show no inclination to weakness or softness.

In disposition he comes as near perfection as any horse can; he is kind and affectionate and surprisingly intelligent. In action he is what is termed a "line trotter," having no need for boots, unless for protection when trotting in a race. His owner drove him a mile around the San Jose track in 2:40, without as much as a scalper on. He is game to the core and seems to have inherited the recuperative powers of the Wilkes family, for when others were ready to drop from over-exertion in the race last fall at San Jose he was as fresh as when the first heat was trotted. He earned his first record of 2:28¾ in the fourth heat of his first race at San Jose last month, and wod the remaining heats and race with apparent ease. His recorn he lowered at Stockton to 2:24½, his present mark. He never received much track work, and previous to his race at San Jose he was only in the hands of Billy Donathan some seven weeks.

After he was here some sixteen months he was exhibited at the San Jose Fair with twelve of his progeny, and the remarkable resemblance to their sire in color and style was spoken of, and is still considered by all horsemen as the finest sight they had ever seen. The dams were all colors—grays, roans, bays, browns and chestnuts, but no markings were seen on the offspring. He and the family won the blue ribbon and got second prize for family, as his were sucklings. He was exhibited as a standard trotter and won the blue ribbon over the Electioneer stallion Eros. In 1890 he took first prize as standard, and so did his family. Last year it took the three judges nearly an hour to decide between Billy Thornhill and Eros before awarding the blue ribbon to the latter.

Mr. Boyd kept Billy Thornhill at his place near Milpitas, and has not had an opportunity of getting the best bred mares which his horse deserved, nevertheless, his get from ordinary mares are hard to excel. Before leaving Kentucky, Mr. Simmons bred Billy Thornhill to a few mares, and last fall Mr. Boyd received a letter from that gentleman in which the following appears: "The first colt Billy Thornhill got showed three heats over a mile track in 2:24¾, and he is but three years old, and is considered by all horsemen who have seen him trot the peer of any horse in the State." A good class of mares are being sent to him recently, and from those of his progeny that will be trained this year there should be some 2:30 performers.

Bidding the owner of this fine horse good-bye, we turned our horses' heads down the Alviso road, about half a mile, and then rode into a lane to the right, and were soon within the gates of the Moorland Stock Farm, the home of Soudan, 2:27½.

The neat residence is built facing the south; the porch in front is heavily covered with ivy and other vines; a carp pond to the right of the entrance, is seen fed by a natural fountain (being nothing more nor less than an outlet for an artesian well), on its banks water plants and lilies furnish shady nooks for the carp to hide. The garden is filled with rare flowers, while above the whitened fences surrounding it are neatly-trimmed old willow trees which furnish a pleasing background to complete the picture of home-like comfort. The orchard is separated from this place by a cypress-shaded lane. The carriage house fronts on a large hexagon-shaped piece of gravelled land, which is used as an exercising ground and driveway. There are two large barns with long sheds extending their entire length. These barns are built at right angles to each other, corrals separating them. The stud barn, where the trotters are kept, contains some twenty well-ventilated box-stalls. The other one was constructed for the work horses; adjoining it is another long addition running lengthwise of the building; in this a number of the youngsters are also domiciled in commodious box-stalls. In the rear of this building the half-mile race track is seen. This has not been used very much lately, for Mr. Murphy does not believe in having his youngsters breaking imaginary records in February and March. Beyond this, the long row of black willows denote the course of the ever-flowing Penitentia creek. This creek is the separating line of the farm, and its irregular indentation marks the serpentine line of the alfalfa and Australian rye grass lands upon which the broodmares, colts and fillies were pastured. A ride over this three-hundred-acre tract of land discloses the fact that the soil is rich, alluvial bottom land, upon which every variety of berries, trees and plants can be successfully cultivated. Not a piece of wire fencing is seen dividing the fields.

A return to the barns to see the choice stock was suggested, and the first horse looked at was Soudan, 2:27¼. In a report of the stock that was sold on Thursday we hardly did this horse justice, and wish to make all the reparation possible. As a two-year-old he trotted in a race and earned a record of 2:32½; then as a three-year-old he reduced this mark to 2:30 and finished every race he was in as game as ever Stamboul did; as a five-year-old he earned a record of 2:27¾, although in the fifth heat of a race at Petaluma he was only beaten by a nose in 2:22½. He was lame at the time and the following year he trotted in 2:27½, his present record. His pedigree beyond his first dam, Lady Babcock, is being investigatad. Lady Babcock's dam was a mare called the Dubois mare; she was said to be by the Eaton Horse 122, out of a daughter of Abdallah 1. Mr. L. J. Rose brought Lady Babcock from Steve Whipple who purchased him for a man named Dubois. This man Dubois moved to New York and then to Colorado. This Dubois mare was a very fast trotter and was one of the tireless, ambitious kind.

In an adjoining stall stood Rosemeath, who is unlike his companion in form, color, and size as a horse can be. "An Alcazar all over," and as pretty and perfect a one as man ever looked upon. He will be given a record this fall.

In the next stall was Khartoum 15,208, by Soudan, 2:27¼, out of Black Bettie (dam of Mamie Comet, 2:23¾, dam of Macleay, 2:22½ as a two-year-old), by Sportsman; second dam by St. Clair; Sportsman was by Easton's David Hill. Khartoum was considered one of the best "green" horses in Lee Shaner's string all winter. He will also be named for some of the trotting races this fall.

One of the most perfect likenesses of Guy Wilkes, 2:15', is the next one looked at; he is called by the romantic name of Danton Moultrie. He is by the great Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, out of Carrie Malone (full sister to Chas. Derby, 2:20), by Steinway; second dam Katy G., by Electioneer, etc. In form, color, style, gait and disposition, his mighty dad would not dare disown him. He will place his long name very high on the temple of equine fame either as a race horse or a sire, or we will be greatly mistaken.

Syria 14,696, by Soudan 5,103, out of Signa (sister to Maggie McDowell, 2:21½), by Sidney; second dam Young Lady Hanna, by Arthurton; third dam Old Lady Hanna, by Langford, has the making of a magnificent horse. He is large-boned, well-muscled and evenly-formed. He is solid brown in color, and has perfect action while trotting.

The gelding Nubia needs no introduction. He will be in a few races this year, and is well able to take care of himself in any "green" class.

The mares selected by Mr. Murphy are a far different lot from those that he had originally. His experience in this respect is similar to that of all our other aspiring young horse breeders; the result is that but a few years will elapse until the Moorland Stock Farm will be among the most prominent in this State. Lack of space forbids us going into details in describing these fine mares; to the student of breeding it is almost unnecessary, but all of these individuals, are selected with rare judgment, and as they are young and in the enjoyment of good health, the prospects for raising extraordinary fine trotters are most encouraging. He has the following:

Alien (sister to Redwood, 2.21½), by Anteeo, 2:16½, out of Lou Milton, by Milton Medium.

Carrie Malone (sister to Chas. Derby, 2:20), by Steinway, out of Katy G., by Electioneer.

The Hawthorne mare (dam of Chloe, 2:24, trial 2:15), by Dexter Prince. She is called the Bailie Filly.

Alvina, by Eros, 2:29½, out of Nettie Nutwood, by Nutwood 600; second dam by Vick's Ethan Allen; third dam by Belmont.

Gladys, by Director, 2:17, out of Alice R. (dam of Redwood, 2:27, and Eva W., 2.25½), by Naubuc.

Lady (dam of Rockwood, 2:29½), by Treewood (formerly Weatherhead's Woodnut) and Nellie (sister to Rockwood).

Signa (sister to Maggie McDowell, 2:21½), by Sidney, 2:29½, out of Young Lady Hanna, by Arthurton, etc.

Viva, by Antevolo, 2:19½, out of Lady Wilson, by Nutwood 600; second dam Rebel Daughter (grandam of Lida W., 2:18½), by Williamson's Belmont.

Patchen Mollie (dam of Commodore Nutwood, 2:32), by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31.

Oriole, bay mare, by Menlo, 2:21½ (son of Nutwood 600), out of Lady Farmer.

Kate R., by A. W. Richmond, out of Jenny Lind, by John Morgan (Reavis'); second dam Bally, by Tiger Whip.

Nutty, by Nutwood 600; out of a daughter of Sam Purdy, 2:20½; second dam by Belmont.

Jessie M. (dam of Ben Corbitt, 2:30 at three years) by A. W. Richmond; second dam Jessie C. by Ben Wade; third dam Lucy, by Traveler, etc.

Miss Gordon, by Bismark, out of Lady Wilson, by Nutwood 600.

Belle Richmond (sister to Richelieu, 2:29½), by A. W. Richmond, out of Ventura Belle.

Myrtha by Contractor, out of McCa, by Almont 33; second dam Dolly, (dam of Director 2:17, Czarina, 2:21, Thorndale, 2:22½, and Onward, 2:25½,) by Mambrino Chief. In foal to Whips, 2:27½.

Amatista by Mambrino Wilkes (sire of Balkan, 2:15) out of Amethyst, by Admiral; second dam Spec, by Speculation, etc.

May G. by Coligny 11,619, by Echo, 462, out of Nellie, by Elmo.

Belle, by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., out of Zoe, by Stockbridge Chief, Jr.

Minute, by A. W. Richmond, out of a daughter of Ben Wade; second dam Sally, by Traveler, etc.

Emma Anderson (dam of Nubia, 2:45, as a two-year old), by Wapsie 688, out of a daughter of Comet, by Young Black Hawk.

Besides these he has a number of other well-bred daughters of A. W. Richmond, Elmo and Jack Patchen. It can be seen by the above incomplete list that Mr. Murphy is well on the highway to success. All of his stock is well-fed and cared for and every attention is paid to the details of the place. His superintendent, H. Costigan, and his trainer, J. Gabriel, seem to take as much pride in the welfare of all the stock as their employer. The colts and fillies are all strong and lusty-looking, and when they are old enough, the manner in which these Soudans will trot will not disappoint the hopes or expectations of those who are cognizant of the merits of their sire.

Mr. Murphy in our interview stated that he would pay the owners or owner of each colt or filly sired by Sondan that enters the list (2:30 trotting or 2:25 pacing, in a race), during the season of 1892, the sum of $200, and will repeat this offer next year if he still owns the horse. More anon.

SUMMARY.

The above list of events speaks for itself. For some months to come the athletes and wheelmen will have their hands full, but the oarsmen have not fixed upon any programmes for the future.

THE ATHLETES, WHEELMEN, OARSMEN, CRICKETERS, ETC.

Next Wednesday afternoon the members of the University Athletic Club will hold a practice field-day. Medals will be awarded the winners in each event, and special gold medals will be given to any athlete who breaks a record. The following events will be contested: 120, 440 and 1,760 yards run; one mile walk; running high jump; running broad jump; flinging 56-pound weight. These field-days will be continued every few weeks until after the championship meeting.

The U. C. class of '95 have challenged the freshmen's class of the Stanford University to a field-day. The field-day will be held at the Olympic Club grounds some time next month.

The Y. M. C. A. has decided to hold its first annual field-day at San Jose, Cal., on the 26th of the present month. The fare for the round trip will be $2.50.

The new grounds of the Reliance Athletic Club of Oakland will be situated on the corner of Grove and Shasta streets, Oakland, Cal., and will be 470 x 375 feet in extent. The directors of the club have entered into an agreement with the electric road people, according to which the company leases them the grounds for a period of ten years, with the option of renewing the lease. The club and the company have further agreed to put in $5,000 and $10,000 respectively for improvements, with the understanding that the club shall have the whole and sole control of the establishment to be set in operation here. This establishment will include a covered grand stand to accommodate 1500 people and other seats will be arranged for as many more. The club house be a handsome structure, with verandas and balconies all around. The first floor will contain three reception rooms, and the whole of the upper floor will be used for lockers, shower baths, etc., with all the latest improvements. A cinder path twelve feet wide will be laid in a circle with four or five laps to the mile, and within a baseball ground will be arranged, having a diameter of 30 feet. There will also be four tennis courts with separate grand stands and a large tank house with rooms below.

William Greer Harrison is the president of the Pacific Cricket Club, and Charles B. Hill, (213 Sansome Street) is the secretary. The colors of the club are scarlet and black. The members will pay particular attention to practice this season and it is expected that this club will carry off the championship pennant for 1892.

It is reported that an effort will be made to increase the dues of the Olympic Club to $5 per month and the initiation fee to $100, as soon as the new building is finished.

A new quarter-mile amateur runner has arrived in this city from Australia. Local handicappers should keep their eyes open.

The Tasmanian Mail, of Jan. 2, says: "Champion Running High Jump.—The World's Record Broken.—Mr. Michael Conroy, champion running high jumper of Australia, cleared the great height of 6ft. 5in. (six feet five inches) at the Warehouseman's Cricket Grounds, St. Kilda Road, near Melbourne, last Saturday afternoon in the presence of hundreds of spectators. The performance took place on perfectly level ground, and measured fairly in the centre of the bar. After he won the handicap high jump against four competitors at 6ft., he went before the committee and stated that he would make an attempt to break the world's record. Mr. James Bergin, of Flemington Road, on hearing this, came forward and offered the wonderful jumper five guineas if he would break the record. Mr. James E. Donegan was judge. At the very first attempt he cleared the above great height in splendid style. When the judge declared the height the competitor was loudly cheered, and carried shoulder-high to his dressing-room."

The boxing and wrestling tournament of the O. A. C. began in the gymnasium on Tuesday evening last. A summary will be given next week.

The Acme Club held a very important meeting Thursday night, and it was decided to give a club run on the third Sunday of every month.

There is to be a Columbia pneumatic safety given to the club and each member in good standing will receive a ticket and one number will be drawn. The number having the corresponding number receives the wheel.

O. L. Pickard has been appointed buglar of the wheelmen.

There will be quite a number of the Acme boys take part in the Alameda Athletic Club exhibition.

De Witt Van Court has a number of very promising young boxers. De Witt received his wheel Friday. It is a Victor '92.

The Ladies' Bicycle Club has been formed with about fifteen members.

Charley Jellinck expects with the aid of a pair of automatic shoe springs which he recently imported, to be able to make even time in the near future. It it to be regretted that such men as Charley, who show such promise, do not pay more attention to training.

Billy Keneally and Johnny Flynn are fully determined not to appear on the track again. If these two men and some of the other old-timers would only don their spikes again the present champions would not have such soft snaps.

The Alpine Club is virtually a dead organization. All the old members have abandoned its colors and now it is run by a handfull o young men who are unknown as athletes. Joe Soto, the prize fighter was admitted to membership at the last meeting, and it is plainly to be seen that those who are now running the club are not very particular as to its amateur standing. It is reported that in the near future about twenty of the best Alpine men will meet and form themselves into a new amateur club. Almost since the first organization of the club, its colors have been trampled under foot by men who claimed to be members but who in reality were speculators who made all they could out of the struggling club and then left it in the lurch to be reorgnized over again by a new set of people. The old members are greatly incensed against one of the ex-secretaries who refused to turn over the money in his possession.

The skating rink in the Mechanics Pavillion has been closed for the season, and will not open up again until next September.

In rowing circles everything is as dull as usual. Last Sunday some of the club members took easy spins in their boats but none of the boys seemed to be exerting themselves. The Pacific Rowing Association should make some effort to revive rowing during the coming season as there is plenty of good material to pick from.

The Alert Athletic Club, of East Oakland, will give an exhibition some time this month.

Tennis seems to be a favorite pastime in Oakland, and several new tennis clubs have been organized in the City of Oaks lately.

The entertainment given by the "Frisco Ten" in the hall of the San Francisco Turn Verein, 323 Turk street, last week, was a big success. Several well-known amateur athletes took part in the exhibition.

The Directors of the State Fair have decided to offer several prizes for athletic events to be decided at Sacramento next September during the fair,

John D. Garrison is running again. He recently ran a quarter in 53 seconds without practice. With proper practice Garrison should be able to beat even time for that distance.

Harry C. Casidy, of the O. A. C., is indulging in a little quiet exercise at San Leandro. Every morning before breakfast Harry takes a spin around Mr. Tompkins' half-mile track and afterwards a plunge in the salt water tank. He will be heard from during the coming season.

It is reported that Elias Levy, of the Alpine Club, jumped over ten feet in a standing broad jump at the O. A. C. grounds last Sunday morning, defeating some of the O. A. C. crack jumpers.

The out-door athletes are very anxious that a cross-country run be given soon. It is suggested by several prominent runners that all the clubs unite and hold a monster handicap run in the near future, the race to be handicapped and the winners to receive suitable prizes. We think this suggestion a very good one and the P. A. A. A. U. should make an effort to carry it into effect.

We are pleased to notice the rapid strides that are being made towards the completion of the new Olympic Club house on Post street The building is going to be a handsome one, and one that all the members shall be proud of.

The University Tennis Club has elected the following officers: President, Webster; vice-president, Van Winkle; treasurer, Haskins; secretary, Houghton; directors, Roundtree, Luebbert and Johnson The track at the University campus is in very bad condition and the athletes are trying to get the Regents to denote at least $1,000 for the improvement of the athletic and tennis grounds and for the enlargement of the gymnasium.

E. S. Dowdell and C. A. Andrews, of the Acme Athletic Club, of Oakland, will appear at the Elks benefit in gladiatorial posings. The Acme Club will hold a gentleman's night on March 15th. Several very interesting events will be on the programme and a good evening's sport will be witnessed by the members.

The Stanford University is developing some very promising athletes and it would not be at all surprising if a team were to travel up from Palo Alto to take part in the championship games on May 30th.

The Golden Gate Bicycle Club has been organized with the following officers: J. J. Kennedy, President; W. J. White, Vice-President; T. J. Curley, Treasurer; M. Welch, Jr., Secretary. The roll was signed by about fifty young men, all of whom are well known in business circles. Until suitable rooms can be obtained the club will meet at 1318 Market street.

Professor William Smythe, who recently resigned as gymnastic instructor to the Olympic Club, left for New York on Monday evening last. Mr. Smythe will take charge of the Manhattan Athletic Club gymnasium. Before leaving this city the Olympic Club presented the Professor with a handsome gold watch as a souvenir of its appreciation of his services in the past. Hugo Belau will succeed to Professor Smythe's place.

Several branches of the Young Men's Christian Association have applied for membership to the P. A. A. A. U., and it is likely that the first field-day of the Association, will be held under the jurisdiction of the Union. The athletic members of the local branch of the Y. M. C. A. are very dissatisfied with the rules governing the gymnasium on Sutter street. While exercising the members are compelled to wear long pants, and are forbidden to either box or wrestle. If these prudish rules were repealed a good many prominent unattached athletes would join the Association, and Secretary McCoy would soon find himself at the head of one of the most powerful athletic organizations on the Pacific Coast.

Henderson, Yates, Coffin, Hinz, Jellinek, Foster, Cooley, Espinosa, Skillman, Wand, Kortick and Frank O'Kane all of the O. A. C., are hard at work practicing for coming events. They were all at the club grounds last Sunday, and did some good preliminary work.

The Bay City Wheelmen have leased the Bay City track for a term of years, and have already let a contract for the building of a fine quarter-mile track at the South end of the grounds. The track will be constructed on the most improved plan, and will be suitable for both athletic and bicycle events. The cost of the track will be $1,793.85. The club will hold a monster tournament at their new grounds on Decoration Day. The members of the B. C. W. are in favor of having the League meet take place this year either at Stockton, Sacramento or San Jose. The Alameda wheelmen are trying to secure the meet for their city, but it is probable that the vote of the B. C. W. will decide where the races will take place.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Answers for this department MUST be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Postively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

J. I., Grass Valley.—How many has Alcazar, 2:20½, in the list? Answer—Six.

Will some one be kind enough to give us the correct breeding of the horse Billy Wallace, who ran on the California Circuit some years ago?

Will some one please inform an inquirer through the columns of this paper what record Sunday, trotter, made on Oakland track either in 1877-78-79. He was then owned by Boston Connors.

E. L. W., Lompoc.—Please give me the registered number of Black Ralph, by McCracken's David Hill; first dam by Edward Everett. Black Ralph was owned by George Ellis, of Lake county. Answer—Black Ralph's register number is 10,687.

D. W. McG., Arcata, Cal.—Please inform me if their is a brown mare about twelve years of age by the name of Topsey in the book of the standard breed. If so, please give pedigree. Answer.—There are several standard mares called Topsey. Which particular one do you wish to know about?

T. W., Contra Costa county.—Would it not be a good idea for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN to publish a good list of names for horses, mythological, etc., from which its readers could make selections and arrange into families when desired? Answer—It would be an excellent thing to do, and we hope soon to be able to print such a list.

T. G., East Portland, Oregon.—Please answer in your next issue, if there is such an imported thoroughbred by the name of Diagonal, or some such name as that, what the name of his sire and dam is and where imported from, as I have a mare which they claim to be by him. Answer—We do not find such a horse in the stud books, but an old horseman informs us that there was such a horse called Diagonal.

Can some of our readers answer C. E. C., Martinez, Cal., correctly regarding the breeding of Hyland (or Lady Hyland.) He is informed she was formerly owned by Hugh Creighton, of San Francisco, and had a record of 2:32 over the Bay District Track. This is all the information concerning her that he is able to give us. He is very anxious to get her breeding as he has a colt from her by Whipple's Hambletonian that has a colt from Mambrino Wilkes, and will foal shortly to Balkan.

Subscriber, Lompoc.—Please put in your Answers to Correspondents the pedigree of Green's Bashaw and of Owen Dale. Answer—Green's Bashaw 50 was by Vernol's Black Hawk (a son of Black Hawk 24), dam Belle, by Webber's Tom Thumb; second dam Charles Kent mare (dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, sire of Electioneer), by imp. Bellfounder. Owen Dale was a thoroughbred sired by Belmont (Williamson's), dam Maria Downing, by American Eclipse; second dam Brownlock, by Tiger, etc. Belmont was by American Boy, dam Prunella, by Comus.

F. J., Alameda.—Kindly inform me if a horse by the name of George Washington was standard, and give his pedigree. He was said to be a half-brother to George M. Patchen Jr.; was owned or in charge of a man by the name of Hendrickson, and seasoned near Haywards about twenty years ago; was afterwards sold to Lux & Miller, so I am told. Answer.—The horse you have reference to is Washington, not George Washington. He was made standard by the performance of his progeny, although he was not standard-bred. Washington was by George M. Patchen Jr. 31, dam untraced. He could be registered, although at present he has no number in the American Trotting Register.

G. M. F., San Luis Obispo.—To decide a bet, kindly answer the following questions: 1. What is Duke McClellan's (9080) best official record; when and where made? 2. Give Kitty Gavin's (by Royal George 83) best record. 3. Give Molly Mott's best record. 4. Oregon Nell's (Missouri Copperbottom) best record. Answer—1. He had no record whatever; that is, none of the authorities give him one. 2. 2:39¼. 3. We do not find that Molly Mott made any record. 4. We have no trace of any of Oregon Nell's races, but an old catalogue of Charles McLaughlin's clearing-out sale (1884) states that Oregon Nell had a record of 2:22. An old horseman states that he saw her driven a mile at the old White House track, Portland, about 1872, in 2:20. James Welsh was the driver.

J. B.—Can you tell anything about the breeding of Poscora, sire of the dam of Poscora? Answer—C. A. Harrison, of Tacoma, wrote to Mr. Learned and received the following, which he kindly loaned us: "In regard to the breeding of Poscora, he was foaled in Saratoga county, New Yord, in 1858, and was sired by old Poscora; his dam was srred by Cheesbro Roan, of Berkshire county, Massachusetts. His color was a bay roan, sixteen hands high; and could trot in 2:50 at four years of age, and I traded him off at that age. Of Old Poscora's breeding there was nothing known. He came from Canada. In color he was a sorrel with white ankles and strip in face; in size he was fully sixteen hands. He was quite fast, and trotted to wagon in 2:38. His owner, Finlay, was a bank President, and he purchased him of us as a road horse, and it was his fine appearance that caused me to buy the young horse and his mother when he followed her."

E. P. O. East Portland, Or.—1. Who owned Tilton Almont about ten years ago, and where did he stand at that time? 2. What Almont horse did John Boggs stand in Colusa? 3. Can any of your readers give me the address of Tim Calmes who lived in Maxwell, Colusa Co., about six years ago? 4. How many has Tilton Almont got in the list? Please give name and record. 5. How many colts has Bay Rose in the list, how old is he, and is he not what is called a leggy horse? Answer—1. We believe W. Billup, of Willows, Colusa county, Cal., owned the horse at that time. 2. Senator Boggs has had so many horses that we cannot tell about the one you mean. Write to John Boggs, Colusa, Cal. 3.——. 4. Seven. Kittie Almont, 2:22¾; Daisy S., 2:23½; Almonta, 2:25; Annie E., 2:26¼; Stranger, 2:26¼; Belle A., 2:29; W. W., 2:29¾. 5. Not one. Eleven years old. He is not a "leggy" horse.

We erroneously stated a few weeks ago that Werner's Rattler and Napa Rattler were one and the same horse. Since we have found that Werner's Rattler was never out of Yolo county except when in training for his races. Napa Rattler was the horse first known as Lone Valley Rattler, and stood in Amador county for his first two seasons. There were four sons, at least, of Bigart's Rattler brought to this state. One of these was a horse called Blackleg, brought out by E. M. Pitcher at the same time he brought John Nelson, and the fourth was called Mambrino Rattler, his dam being by Haight's Mambrino Patchen, sire of Mambrino Chief 11. This last horse could trot close to 2:30 (considered quite fast in those days), and was owned by J. M. Learned, who subsequently owned Reliance. G. W. Stever, owner of Napa Rattler, stated in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of December 28, 1889, that he bought the horse of David Stever, Milton, Saratoga county, N. Y., in 1854, and brought him to California in 1859. He was sired by Biggart's Rattler, dam Poll (bred by David Stever), by imported Consternation; second dam Betsy Baker, by a son of imported Messenger.

J. R. H., Sacramento, Cal.—There are in our section some very good horses showing up speedy that come from blood that the owners are not familiar with. Will you kindly describe Lancet, Werner's Rattler and Bayswater, and greatly oblige a number of your subscribers? Answer—Lancet was a black stallion owned by James McKinney, of Sacramento, in 1890. He gained a record of 2:56 on December 22, 1860, distancing Morgan Rattler in the first heat. An old horseman informs us that he was of Vermont Blackhawk blood, but we only give this for what it is worth. Werner's Rattler was a fine-looking, big bay stallion by Biggart's Rattler, dam by Mars; second dam by Defiance. Werner's Rattler won races in California, two in 1858 and one in 1860, and gained a record of 2:35 on September 6, 1860, in a race against time. Fred Werner, of Davisville, Solano county, owned this Rattler, who produced a number of good trotters for that period, one of which got in the list—Mary Davis, 2:26¼. Bayswater was a thoroughbred horse by Lexington, dam Bay Leaf, by Imp. Yorkshire, second dam Maria Black, by Filby da Puta, etc. He was a fine-looking, large bay horse, foaled 1863, and won a number of good races, among them the New Jersey Derby of 1866. A better-bred horse than Bayswater would indeed be hard to find, as he was full brother to the great Peakness (who holdsthe record at two and a quarter miles), also to Bay Flower, Bingaman, Bayonet, Niagara and Baywood. As a sire, Baywater could not be called a success. He was brought to Sonoma county in 1869 or 1870, we believe.

Woodland Fair.

The Board of Directors of the Yolo County Agricultural Association met in Secretary Magoffey's office in the Armstrong and Alge building Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, with Directors Adams, Woodard, Hoppin, Mowder, Gibson, Diggs and Doolittle present.

The spring race meeting to be held in May was the first subject discussed. The Secretary was instructed to advertise the speed programme for the meeting in the local papers for one week, and that entry cards be printed and issued. The entries for this meeting will close April 16th.

Directors Thomas, Woodard and Mowder were appointed as a committee to solicit subscriptions to pay the expenses of the meeting. This committee will begin work among our citizens in a few days.

Director Doolittle was instructed to take charge of the bunting and other material used for decorations at the last Fair and belonging to the Association. Mr. Doolittle was instructed not to loan these articles under any circumstances. The reason for the issuance of this order is that the decorations have been greatly damaged by people to whom they were loaned.

Director Gibson, who was appointed at a former meeting of the Directors as a committee of one to plant trees at the race track and grounds, reported he had set out 250 ornamental and shade trees at suitable places on the Fair ground. The report was adopted.

Secretary Magoffey and Directors Woodard and Hoppin were named by the Chair as a committee to prepare a programme of stake races for the fall meeting. Director Woodard reported a programme for the fall races, which agreed with that adopted by Chico. The Directors then adjourned.

Immediately after the adjournment of the Directors' meeting the committee, consisting of Secretary Magoffey and Directors Woodard and Hoppin, appointed to arrange a programme for the races to be held next fall, met and adopted a schedule which will be submitted for approval at the next meeting of the Directors.—Woodland Democrat.

How Prince Red Was Named.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The question has often been asked me, why the great young stallion Prince Red 9940, now owned by the Oakwood Park Stock Farm, received that appellation. In the spring of 1888 I was in Kentucky, and on several occasions I visited the farm of that eminent breeder, W. C. France, Esq., and the home of the mighty Red Wilkes. Every one was watching for a colt that was to be foaled which would be either a full brother or sister to the great race horse Prince Wilkes, 2:14¾. I was there at the time the colt came; he was then and there named Prince Red, but in a few days the colt sickened and died. In the fall I visited Kentucky again with the idea of buying a young stallion that would combine the Red Wilkes and Mambrino Patchen blood; I picked out the stallion which is now called Prince Red. He had no name when I purchased him. When I was in Ed Tipton's office filling out a registry blank to send to Wallace's American Trotting Register, I said to Mr. Tipton: "Will you fill out a blank for this young stallion?" "Very well," he replied, "but he has no name." "Well," I said, "let us give him the same name that Mr. France had for the dead colt, for he thought he was the best son of Red Wilkes, and I think my colt is by all odds the best-bred one," so I called him after the brother to the great race horse Prince Wilkes, 2:14¾; so we wrote down the name Prince Red on the registry blank and sent it in. My confidence in that great combination of blood lines, Red Wilkes and Mambrino Patchen, has never been shaken, and as Prince Red's dam, Mollie Stout, was one of the best representatives of the Mambrino Patchen family, I believe I was not far wrong in selecting her worthy son as a representative stallion for the Oakwood Park Stock Farm. I predicted then that his blood would be very valuable to this State, and I believe now that time will prove that prediction was correct. The great young two-year-old, Ralph Wilkes, 2:18½, is bred in the very same lines. Yours, SAMUEL GAMBLE.

A Brief History of Impregnation Effected by Artificial or Mechanical Means.

San Francisco, Cal., March 9, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Dear Sir: Having written for publication in last week's number of your paper a brief description of how the operation of artificial impregnation in the mare may be performed, hoping thereby to encourage others to perform the experiment, there may perhaps be some who would like to read a brief history of the origin and practice of attempts to impregnate artificially. And before I write anything further on this subject, please allow me the privilege of censuring your printer for making, in my letter of last week, changes in orthography and substitution of words and phrases. In mentioning the third source given for collection of fluid to be used in impregnating artificially, the printer says: "Collecting what comes subsequently from the mare as the result of expulsion of parts of her womb," a ridiculous statement, whereas the manuscript read: "Collecting what comes subsequently as the result of expulsive efforts of her womb." "Mucus" is the name of the fluid secreted by the mucous membrane of the womb and Fallopian tube, not "mucous," which is the adjective form. The word "Fallopian" is derived from the proper name, "Fallopius," and is not written "fallopian," as the printer chose to have me write it.

From the experiments in 1782 of two eminent physiologists, Rossi and Abbe Spallanzani, was derived the idea of artificial impregnation in the human family, or, using preferably the phrase suggested by Joseph Cairn Simpson, the idea of accomplishing natural impregnation by artificial or mechanical means. These physiologists, as early as 1782, injected semen into the vagina of bitches in heat and saw impregnation follow In 1865 Dehaut, of Paris, published a pamphlet on the subject of artificial impregnation in the human family for the purpose of relieving sterility, and, in 1866, the late J. Marion Sims, of New York, reported his numerous experiments (see Sims' Uterine Surgery). During two years Sims experimented fifty-five times on six different patients, meeting with one success in effecting impregnation by artificial means. He thought that fully one-half of the experiments were badly done, or done under unfavorable circumstances, and that they should not therefore be counted; hence, there was one conception in twenty-seven experiments made under favorable circumstances. Experiments for relieving sterility in the human female by attempting to impregnate by artificial means have been made by numerous other physicians, but lack of success has led to the almost entire abandonment of the operation. In reports of the very few experiments in which success has been claimed it has not been stated that immediately subsequent to the operations such avoidance of sexual conjugation was observed as to prevent the women from becoming pregnant in the ordinary manner. Hence, the degree of success, if any, in the human family is not known. Women operated upon are usually so anxious to have the sterility overcome that they wish to avail themselves of the chances of bringing offspring to their husbands through both the natural and the artificial processes. Richards (see Historie de la Generation, p. 255) states that Gigon, Lessuer, DeLaporte and other French physicians have also been successful in artificial fecundation, but he does not give details. Girault (see Etude sur Generation Artificiale daus l'Espece Humane, Paris, 1869) claims to have had eight successes, one a twin pregnancy, the number of experiments not being given. In most of these experiments the fluid used was, by use of a syringe, withdrawn from the vagina of the woman, and, by the same instrument, injected into her womb. Hence it was mixed more or less with the acid mucus of the vagina, which admixture had the effect of lessening the activity of the spermatazoa.

Having myself met with unsatisfactory results in operations for artifical impregnation performed for the relief of sterility in women, it occured to my mind that experiments upon different animals would enable one to ascertain whether the fault was with the operation or with the individuals operated upon, who were suspected to have some difficulty other than such narrowing of the entrance of the womb as would prevent entrance of spermatazoa. Consequently operations for impregnating artilically were performed upon bitches in heat, this being a repetition of the experiments in 1782 of Rossi and Abbi Spallanzani, excepting that the semen was injected into the womb instead of into the vagina. In each experiment success followed. The operation was quite difficult to perform upon sluts for the reason that the unantity of semen ejaculated into the vagina and womb of the bitch covered by the dog was exceedingly small. From these experiments I infer that the quantity of semen received by the bitch from the dog is always small. The uniform success of these experiments upon bitches led to inference that probably the bitch is an animal that becomes pregnant very easily, even under conditions that in other animals would be unfavorable for fecundation, and that the experiments upon them and the results following were insufficient evidence upon which to base an inference as to the general practicability of artifical inpregnation. Hence, knowing that mares frequently fail to get with foal, even under conditions that appear to be favorable to conception, experiments were performed upon mares, the results being as published in your issue on the 27th ult. Not then having a stallion of my own to use in this experiment, I endeavored about six years ago to get the privilege of performing this experiment at some of the stock farms near San Francisco, where blooded horses are raised. But owners and superintendents of these farms did not appear to take any interest in the experiment, either as a matter of curiosity or of practical utility, and it was not until last year that, through the kindness of Mr. Lopez and Mr. Salisbury, I was enabled to perform the first two experiments upon mares for impregnating them by artifical means. Had experiments been performed at Palo Alto a few years ago, when permission was asked, using simply waste semen or what semen could have been drawn from the womb of one mare covered once by Electioneer for the purpose of impregnating several other mares, I believe that Electioneer would have surviving himself a much greater number of his progeny to increase his list of 2:20 and 2:30 performers, and, consequently, to increase the value of his sons and daughters.

In all the higher orders of animals and in flowering plants the only condition necessary for fecundation is the contact of a healthy male and a healthy female element or cell of the same species. These two cells unite to form a single cell from which, under favorable conditions, arise other cells that become differentiated into the different tissues and organs. Hence, fecundation need not necessarily be accomplished by a sexual act, through organs developed for this purpose. In fact, fecundation is rarely accomplished at the time of sexual contact, but subsequently. What is here spoken of as impregnation of mares by artificial means is simply the natural process of fecundation in flowering plants, fishes and various other animals.

Not having time and opportunity for extensive experimentation with animals, I would like to use this opportunity to suggest another experiment to those who have time and opportunity. The experiment recommended is to give a large number of female mules frequent services to stallions, endeavoring to ascertain thereby whether one of the mules may not become pregnant; also to save some male mules from the operation of castration, give them frequent services to mares, endeavoring also to obtain by this process a progeny. The reason why the male mule does not procreate is that in his semen are ordinarily no spermatozoa, or else that the spermatozoa are not fully developed and active; and the reason why the female mule does not ordinarily procreate is that ova do not develop and mature in her ovaries. However, there are certainly exceptions to this physiological fact, for credible testimony has been given to the fact that in a very few instances female mules have given birth to progeny. Hence, to allow pregnancy, Nature must have once, if not several times, been generous enough to so vary her ordinary laws as permit to be formed and developed in some female mules ova that could become fecundated. I believe that numerous services given by male mules that have not been castrated, and microscopic examinations of their semen, will also prove that Nature so varies her rigid laws as to permit them to sometimes develop and mature spermatozoa that can fecundate. Should experiments and observations verify these inferences, there are no scientific reasons why a species of mule that can propagate its own kind cannot be originated. Yours respectfully,

C. E. Farnum, M. D.

A Good Suggestion.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Dear Sir: Every man who can read a newspaper, and some who can not, know just exactly how a paper should be conducted.

Therefore I presume it will not be considered at all arrogant on my part if I suggest that in of the vast difference in opinion in regard to that recent innovation, yclept the kite-shaped track, you offer a premium for the best essay, which shall include a thorough discussion of the relative merits of both the kite-shaped and elliptical tracks.

It certainly seems that it would be very refreshing to your numerous readers to see for once this very interesting subject handled in a dispassionate and unprejudiced manner. Of all the numerous articles which have fallen under the observation of the writer, he does not at this writing call to mind one on either side that was entirely free from bias. To illustrate this idea, take for instance an article which appeared in a daily a few days after Bell Bird and Arion electrified the world by their respective records on the kite-shaped track at Stockton. In order to discount their performances the writer quoted a celebrated horseman as saying that the fast time was mainly owing to the peculiar shape of the track, which must be very fast when "such horses as Balkan, who could not trot in 2:20 on a regulation track, made a mile in 2:15." Now if his hypothesis was correct, the argument based on it would have been a good one. But to demonstrate its incorrectness a brief analysis of the assumption is all that is necessary.

On the day in question, viz., the 6th of October, that horse (Balkan) trotted to the three-quarter pole, in 1:42, and then trotted the last quarter in 33 seconds.

On the 24th of September, he won the race for the 2:26 class on the regulatlon track of Stockton. He trotted to the three-quarter pole, under a pull, in 1:45. Now can any reasonable man doubt that he could have trotted the last quarter "down the straight" in 33 seconds? If a horse can trot a quarter in 33 seconds after trotting three-quarters in 1:42, he can certainly trot a straight quarter in 33, after trotting three-quarters in 1:45, which would make the mile in 2:18.

Now let us leave the realm of absolute certainty and speculate a little. Suppose the horse had been driven from the score, is it not reasonable to suppose that he could have trotted the mile in 2:16 or 2:17? As has been shown, the race took place over an elliptical track, therefore the assumption that "he could not trot on a regulation track in 2:20" is entirely without foundation.

Here then is a striking illustration of the prejudice which too often attends the discussion of the subject. Let us then, Mr. Editor, have an inducement in the shape of a handsome prize for a full, fair and free discussion of this much-abused topic.

Observer.

Whippleton as a Sire.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—I am sorry to see that one of our most enthusiastic and progressive young breeders is going to close out what I consider the nucleus to one of the most successful breeding establishments in the State. I have reference to Fred. W. Loeber, of Vineland Stock Farm, Napa Co. I see by the synopsis of his mares and fillies in your last issue, there are seventeen mares by that great poor man's horse, Whippleton. That Whippleton was a great horse when we consider his opportunities and the class of mares he was mated with, is beyond question. Lillie Stanley, one of California's greatest race mares, with a record of 2:17½, was from a mare of undoubtedly good breeding, but the pedigree remains unknown. Homestake was hipped when a colt, and after working on a ranch for several years made a record of 2:16½. There are many of Whippleton's descendants that with the opportunities of ordinary training would have beaten 2:20. That Whippleton had a right to produce extreme speed is evidenced by the produce of his full sister, Bloomfield Maid; three of her descendants, consecutive foals 4, 5, and 6 years old, entered the 2:30 list in 30 days, Charley C. 2:18½, Lily C. 2:20½, Baden 2:24¾, and all could have beaten 2:20 had the occasion required it. It is not alone the quality of speed that has brought Whippleton prominently before the public, but the uniformity of his produce for good size, solid color, and the characteristics that has made them desirable for the carriage, park and general utility horse. The young breeder that buys a Whippleton mare can make no mistake, as the characteristics of the family will reproduce themselves, no matter what he breeds them to. I have seen a number of Whippleton fillies in Napa Co. that should make as great brood mares as Bloomfield Maid. Lover of a Good Horse.

Mr. Josiah White, of Lakeville, Sonoma county, sold two magnificent Holstein bulls to Senator Leland Stanford last week. Mr. White has a herd of these fine cattle at his lovely place, all of his own importation.

G. Valensin's Purchase and Sales.

Last week G. Valensin called upon B. C. Holly at Flosden and after looking at the wonderful filly Elf, that was so highly spoken of in this journal some time since, purchased her at a long figure. She will now be handled by Millard Sanders, and another Steinway meteor will flash across the equine sky. A glance at her breeding is sufficient proof of the assertion that Mr. Valensin will hereafter have nothing but the very best to breed to his horse Sidney, for whom he recently refused $100,000. Elf is by Steinway, 2:25¼, out of Bertha (sister to Bayard Wilkes, 2:23½, trial 2:15), by Alcantara, 2:23; second dam Barcena (dam of Bayard Wilkes, 2:23½), by Pilot Jr.; third dam Blandina (dam of Swigert, sire of thirty-one in 2:30 list; King Rene, sire of seventeen in the list and four other producing sires, by Mambrino Chief 11; fourth dam Burch mare (dam of Rosalind, 2:21¾, and Donald, 2:27), by Parker's Brown Pilot, son of Copperbottom. Elf is a perfect-gaited, fast-moving, splendidly-muscled filly, and game as a pebble. She was bred and raised at the Oakwood Park Stock Farm, and is only one of the many good ones from there.

Mr. Valensin advertised some nine broodmares, all in foal to Sidney, 2:19¾, and Henry Pierce, of Santa Rosa, knowing the increasing value of the Sidneys, made him an offer and secured the lot. He also purchased the broodmare Venus (two-mile record, 5:04), dam of Adonis, 2:11½, Cupid, 2:18, and Leah, winner of all the yearling stakes in which she started. Venus is heavy in foal to Sidney, and as a broodmare has few equals in the United States. Mr. Pierce is to be congratulated on securing these additions to his large stock farm at Santa Rosa. The Valensin mares, therefore, that were advertised to be sold at the auction sale last Thursday did not appear.

Idalium and Merriwa.

R. E. de B. Lopez, the well-known Australian horseman, has decided to stand the grand thoroughbred stallions named above at Agricultural Park, Sacramento, at a very reasonable sum, considering their superb breeding and individuality. Idalium is a full brother to the phenomenally successful sires, Sir Modred and Cheviot, whose colts bring sums high up in the thousands at every sale and have proved their great worth on the race tracks of this country. Merriwa is a five-year-old black stallion from great producing families on both sides of his aristocratic house, his sire, Goldsbrough, having produced no less than 112 winners in Australia. Habena, his dam, won the Maribyrnong Plate (Australia's Futurity), and came from the Blair Athol line, which gave us the wonderful Prince Charlie, sire of the turf king, Salvator, Senorita, Princess Bowling and hosts of other good onee. Merriwa is of the regular Leamington type, and, bred as he is, he should be a phenomenally good sire of speedy and game race horses. Read the advertisement of Mr. Lopez in another column, and do not forget that a youngster from either one of these horses should bring at least $1,000 the minute it stands up.

Rey de la Sierra.

The last scion of the noble horses, Emperor Hooker and Empress Marion, has been duly christened Rey de la Sierra. Well worthy of the title so far as can be told from breeding and form, and appropriate too, as his birthplace is some 5,500 feet above sea level, and also at the base of a mountain which reaches an altitude of 3,000 feet more. A half-brother, or rather, more than that, to so many celebrities of the turf, full brother to Yo Yambien and Yo El Rey, the king of the mountain should certainly prove that great race-horses can be bred and reared in Nevada.

Lynwood in the Stud.

We are informed that the handsome bay stallion Lynwood, by Nutwood 600, sire of Lynette, 2:22½, will make the season of 1892 at Ione. The breeders of Amador county are in luck to secure the services of an animal like Lynwood, one that has proved himself a sire of speed.

Secretary Reuck, of the Kern Fair Ground Association, has concluded negotiations for the lease for a term of years of a tract of 100 acres adjacent the town of Bakersfield, which will be devoted to the purposes of the association. A fine kite-shaped track will be laid out and a complete set of buildings erected, which will make this one of the best tracks in the State. A switch from the Southern Pacific railroad will be laid directly into the grounds for the purpose of affording accommodation for shipping and handling horses. All the capital of the association has been subscribed, and success is assured.

Prof. E. P. Heald, of this city, sold Gold Medal, the horse that made the fastest pacing record in a race in this State, 2:14½, and who also paced the fastest mile ever made in Oregon. The buyer was A. J. Ross, of Spokane, Washington. We must congratulate that gentleman on securing not only one of the fastest but one of the gentlest and most sensible horses in this State. We envy him the many drives he will have behind this easy-moving gelding.

The fast trotter Adrian, 2:26½, owned by James Linscott, of Watsonville, broke his leg below the hock during the latter part of December. Dr. W. E. Wadams, of Santa Clara, was sent for and set the fractured limb and to-day the horse is able to jog along the road almost as well as if nothing had happened him. This accomplished veterinarian has met with as much success in setting fractured limbs of horses as he has in attending to the most critical cases of sickness among horses.

Several of the representatives of the various district fairs met on Thursday and decided to call a meeting of representatives of Napa, Petaluma, Santa Clara, Oakland, Sacramento and Stockton to take place Saturday, March 19th, at 1 P. M. at the Association rooms 313 Bush Street to arrange dates for the coming circuit. It is hoped that these Associations will send representatives. This is a most important matter and should be acted upon immediately.

A. H. Knight, of Table Bluff, Cal., left by steamer yesterday for Victoria, B. C., taking with him the splendid trotting stallion Ha Ha, 2:22½, by Nephew 1220, dam Ryan Mare, by Black Hawk 767, and the thoroughbred stallion Johnnie Hooker. These horses will make the season at Victoria, and should prove valuable acquisitions to the stock interests of British Columbia.

SALE OF TROTTING STOCK.

Property of J. B. Cole, D. J. Murphy, F. H. Burke and Other Breeders.

Thursday, March 10th, Killip & Co. disposed of forty-five head of trotting stock, the property of J. B. Cole, of San Francisco; Daniel J. Murphy, of Moorland Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal.; Frank H. Burke, of La Siesta Stock Farm, Menlo Park, Cal., and several other owners. The day was far from pleasant, the face of old Sol being hidden behind leaden clouds almost all the time; notwithstanding this, good humor and fair prices was the order throughout, and the bidding at times was exceedingly spirited. The highest-priced animal of the sale was Lady Dexter, by Dexter Prince, dam Kitty Thorne, by Whipple's Hambletonian, Dan McCarty securing her at $1,500. She is a fine individual, and several parties declare that they have seen her move quarters in 35 seconds and miles in 2:25. The bidding on this mare was between Henry Pierce and McCarty. The opening offer on her was $100. Nerea, 2:23½, with foal at side by Eros, went at $500, Gilbert Tompkins being the purchaser. This, the greatest daughter of John Nelson, had wrenched one of her legs on the way to the city, and it was not deemed expedient to take her out of the stall. There were a number of great bargains, the best being a yearling filly by Ulster Wilkes out of Jessie M., by A. W. Richmond 1687, and Grayling, yearling filly, by Soudan 5103, dam Lucy, by A. W. Richmond 1687. C. Johnson secured the first-mentioned prize at $180 and "Whitehat" McCarty the latter at $125. There was some hot competition for Marline, by Eros out of M'liss, by Nephew, secured by G. Valensin at $700; Moorland Lass, by Soudan, dam Carrie Malone (full sister to Charles Derby, 2:20), by Steinway, captured by McCarty at $825, and a chestnut colt by Soudan, from Signa, by Sidney, 2:19¾, which fell to the nod of Lee Shaner at $610. Everyone spoke highly of the manner in which the stock was brought to the auction block, and on all sides were words of praise heard regarding the appearances of the Soudans. This sire's progeny will be much sought for by all horsemen if these representatives are any criterion of what he if doing as a sire.

Among the large crowd present we noticed: L. E. Clausen, J. Dustin, G. Valensin of Pleasanton, H. Costigan, of Milpitas, E. Topham of Milpitas, Dr. H. Spencer, of San Jose, Hugh Dimond of East Oakland, Wilfred Page of Penn's Grove, Henry Pierce, J. Gabriel of Milpitas, Ira Pierce, J. A. McKerron, F. Talbot, Dan McCarty, D. J. McCarty, K. O. Souther Farm Sale.

In our notice last week of this coming great sale we stated that it would be held at Killip's saleyard, in this city. This was a mistake, as the splendid stock offered will be sold at Souther Farm, near San Leandro, on Saturday, April 23, 1892, rain or shine. On that date nearly seventy head will be disposed of, including some of the best young trotters ever offered at auction on the Pacific Coast. The pedigrees of two that will be sold appear in the Souther Farm advertisement on another page. The breeding of this pair is simply royal, and is but a fair sample of what is to follow. Last year's Souther Farm sale was very successful, and this season's should be much better. Catalogues will bt ready at Killip & Co.'s office (22 Montgomery street) April 2nd. Read the advertisement, and don't forget that on April 23d, at the Souther Farm sale, you can secure gilt-edged broodmares as well as speedy young trotters.

The Moors in the Lead.

"Semi-Occasional'y," a correspondent of this journal, should have waited a little before passing judgment on The Moor family. At the auction sales held in Chicago this week, the highest average was received for the Sultans; the best price for any horse was $2,900—for a Redondo yearling. The people of the East are as deeply interested in The Moor family as any other that has appeared on the turf and in the breeding ranks for the past fifteen years, and the family deserves all the credit that can be given it.

ONWARD was advertised to stand at $500 for this season, but when his book was two-thirds full the owner generously knocked a clean $100 off the price, Mr. Pepper being of the opinion that stud fees were climbing a good deal too fast. Mr. Pepper has set a precedent that other stallion-owners ought to voluntarily follow before they are forced to do so.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the auction sale of fine stock to be sold by Henry and Ira Pierce next month. In subsequent issues we will give more complete prrticulars.

DISCOURAGED AND DISHEARTENED.

If yonr stallion feels that way he might just about as well be diseased. And what will take the life out of him like these cruel metal appliances which are used to prevent his self-abuse? They lacerate and torture the organ of propagation, cause sores and ulcers in the sheath, and make good service more than doubtful. If they do break up the habit, they break up his spirit along with it.

The only thing you can afford to use is the Perfection Stallion Guard. That's founded on common sense and humanity. It puts a stop to his practices thoroughly and effectually, for he can't get any satisfaction out of them. But that's all it does do. It can't injure him or hurt him in any way.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of
ELECTIONEER, GEORGE WILKES, and forty-one trotters in the 2:30 list.

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince; anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five producing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12¼, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, Jout of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼ (who was shown trials the past season in 2:14); Thornton, 2:26¼, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:22¼, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12½, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, (the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams, Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, soft and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29½. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

Souther Farm, San Leandro, Cal.

Australian Thoroughbred Blood

Loyalist and Chesterfield

Two Sons (from Grandly-Bred Mares) of THE MARQUIS, one of Australia's Greatest Sire,

Will make the season of 1892 at the SOUTHER FARM, San Leandro, Cal.

These horses can hardly fail to produce speed and staying qualities from the strains of thoroughbred blood in this State.

THE MARQUIS was equally great as a racehorse and as a sire. In England he won the St. Leger, the Two Thousand Guineas, and was only beaten a head for the Derby, thus winning two of the three greatest English three-year-old races, and losing the third by ever so little.

He was one of the best bred horses ever taken to Australia, and in that great racing country he founded a wonderful family of race horses and producers of race horses. His son Newminister is a sire of the very highest rank, and, since Musket's death, is the premier stallion of Australia: one of his yearlings sold in March for $12,500 at Melbourne.

This is the most unusual opportunity to procure this valuable blood. The service fees are given below, and are certainly very reasonable, especially when it is considered that all mares bred to these horses will be kept free of charge until July 1st, 1892. Special care and attention given mares with foal, which may be sent to the Souther Farm at any time, where they will receive the best of care at feeding time without extra charge.

Mares that prove not to be with foal may be returned without service fee in 1893, provided the horse bred to is alive and at the Souther Farm.

LOYALIST - - - - $100, INCLUDING KEEP OF MARE TILL JULY 1st, 1892.

Bay horse, foaled 1884. Winner of the Brunswick Stakes, worth about $7,000, one and one-quarter mile in 1:08¾.

By THE MARQUIS,

Son of STOCKWELL and CINIZELLI by Touchstone.

First dam LOYAL PEERLESS.....by THE PEER

A first-class race mare herself, and a producer of racers. She is comparatively young. Loyalist was her first foal, and her second, Loyalstone, won the Spring Maiden Stakes, for three-year-olds, one and one-half miles, in 2:45. As a four-year-old Loyalstone was only beaten a head in the Caulfield Cup, one and one-half miles in 2:35, the best time ever made at that distance in Australia; and thus after Loyalstone had made the running for his stable companion. Plenty, who was knocked down, leaving Loyalstone to finish after setting the pace from the start.

A great race-horse and sire, producing among others, Darebin, imported to California by Mr. J. B. Haggin for the famous Rancho del Paso stud. At four years of age, Darebin took up 134 pounds and won the Gold Cup at Sidney, two miles in 3:33½.

Second dam LOYAL DEVOIR by Trumpeter. Third dam LETTY WEST by West Australian. Fourth dam BAY LETTY by Bay Middleton. Fifth dam MISS LETTY (Weatherbit's dam), winner of the Oaks in 1887, etc. See English Stud Book.

LOYALIST'S mile and a quarter in 2:08¼ was the best on record in Australia when made, and has only been surpassed by Abercorn and the great Carbine. His sire was a race-horse and a sire of race-horses; his dam was a winner and has produced winners. Loyalist has proven himself a race-horse, and he will produce race-horses.

CHESTERFIELD - $75, INCLUDING FREE KEEP OF MARES UNTIL JULY 1st, 1892.

Bay horse, no white, foaled 1876. Bred by Mr. C. B. Fisher, Victoria. (See Australian Stud Book, Vol. 2, page 201).

By THE MARQUIS,

Son of STOCKWELL and CINIZELLI by Touchstone.

First dam LAMORMA.....by Fireworks

Winner of many races from good horses. Sold as a broodmare for $5,250.

In the Australian racing season of 1867-8, the Derby was made a double event. Fireworks won on both occasions, beating great horses. He also won the Champion Stakes, three miles, and other good races.

Second dam NIGHTLIGHT.....by ARCHY

Dam of Waxlight, one of the best two-year-olds of Australia, winning six races without a defeat at that age from the best of company.

Son of Camel, sire of Touchstone

Third dam RUSHLIGHT.....by BAY MIDDLETON

The greatest race-horse of his age, and sire of two Derby and two St. Leger winners.

Fourth dam TORCH by Lamplighter. Fifth dam DANOISE by Oscar, winner of the Goodwood Cup; a great handicap horse. Sixth to twentieth dams, see English Stud Book.

CHESTERFIELD was a good race horse and a first-class weight packer. In ten important stakes he was first in four, second in four and third in two. He will produce great two-year-olds from our California mares; in his own two year old form he took up 128 pounds and won the Flying Handicap at Wollongong.

WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU

That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is gloriously mistaken. However, don't point ou the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing o both heels and the entire wearing surface.

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

THE BEST-BERD AND FINEST-LKOOING WILKES STALLION IN THE STATE.

No. 8707. BILLY THORNHILL Rec. 2:24 1-2

By BEVERLY WILKES, Brother of
PROSPECT MAID, 2:23½, WALSINGHAM, 2166 (sire of LATITUDE, 2:19½ at 4 years), GEORGIA WILKES, sire of VALENTINE, 2:18½, BAS BLEN WILKES, 2:24½, BILLY WILKES, 2:29½, BESSIE WILKES, 2:31½.

By GEORGE WILKES, Sire of
GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-four others in the 2:30 list, and seventy-five sires of 249 trotters.

Dam EMILY, Dam of
FORTUNA, 2:22, BILLY THORNHILL, 2:24½, COL. YOUNG, 2:30.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of
Seventy-five producing sons and forty-six producing daughters.

Second dam SUE STOUT,

By ASHLAND 47, Son of
MAMBRINO CHIEF 11 and sire of HIGHLAND WIN 1226, and others in list and the dams of EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, and others.

Third dam LEAR MARE, Dam of
JIM IRVING, 2:23, and YOUNG JIM, sire of BUTTERFLY, 2:19¾, GARNETT, 2:19, and twelve other performers.

By LEAR'S SIR WILLIAM, Son of
HOWARD'S SIR CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES (who died when but three years of age) was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot 2:27½ (sire of Hannis, 2:17¾, and others), out of Juliett, by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2 hands, and weighs 1,050 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well-built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well-shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:40 without boots of any kind. His first colt showed trials last fall in 2:20 in his 3-year-old form, and all of his 2-year-olds that have been handled any show lots of speed and a nice way of going. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

TERMS, $75 WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGE.

I have a good pasture to turn mares in at $5 each per month. The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

He is bred in almost the identical lines of Nancy Hanks, 2:09, her second dam being by Edwin Forrest and Almont Medium's third dam by Edwin Forrest; Nancy Hanks' fifth dam by Lance, son of American Eclipse, and Almont Medium's fifth dam is by the same great horse. The only son of Almont Medium ever trained for speed (Mark Medium) gained a record of 2:25¼ during 1891 as a four-year-old, and all of this horse's progeny show speed at an early age.

NUTWOOD WILKES is a handsome chestnut in color, stands 15½ hands high, is level-headed, kind and intelligent.

RAPID TRANSIT,

Limited to Fifteen approved Outside Mares at $75 for the Season.

RAPID TRANSIT is a fine-looking bay horse, stands 15½ hands high. He is by DIRECTOR 1989, 2:17; dam Lida W., record 2:18¼, dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½ at 3 years. (See above tabulated pedigree.) He is a horse of splendid individuality and excellent blood lines.

LONG BRANCH.

Limited to Fifteen Outside Mares at $50 for the Season.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¾ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, sire of seven with records from 2:17¾ to 2:30), by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Zola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25¾ (sire of seven with records from 2:10 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty Outside Mares at $50 for the Season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27¾, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¾ (sire of 77 with records from 2:11½ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11½ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track); dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30; the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23½, made in 1860; the fastest and gamest representative of the Clay family). This pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great broodmares. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains—the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race-horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and nineteen others from 2:18½ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or ten per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

Delwin is one of the handsomest grandsons of the great Moor; in color, he is a dark dapple bay, sound as a dollar, outside of his broken hind leg, and the best of feet and legs; 15.1½ hands high, and weighs 1,000 pounds; he is one of the finest-formed horses for great speed in the land; has the same level head and intelligence that his half-brother, Guide, 2:16¼, has; in color and form he resembles Harry Clay 45 (sire of the dam of Electioneer and George Wilkes, 2:22), more than any horse that we ever saw. Delwin has the same blood lines as the handsome grandson of The Moor, Stamboul, 2:11; he has two crosses of American Star 14, also of Clay, one of Hambletonian 10, sire of the dam of Stamboul, 2:11; one to Mambrino Chief, sire of the dam of Director, 2:17, and two of the great Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Nutwood, 2:18¾, combining altogether the same blood lines that lay in the grandest stallions, living or dead—Arion, 2:10¾, Stamboul, 2:11; also the first yearling to beat 2:30, and who trotted the fastest last quarter in that mile that was ever trotted by any yearling, 34 seconds—Freedom, 2:29¾.

Del Sur, 2:24, sire of Don Tomas, 2:20, and Cousin Joe, 2:20¼, being a full brother to the dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, sire of Freedom, 2:29¾, and two others better than 2:28. Delwin's colts all show the trot out of any kind of mares.

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18½, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:24¾ and 2:24¼. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. *Balkan.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record 1, 14¼ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¼. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¼. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½. Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:40 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000,

AND HIS SERVICE IS OFFERED AT $100 FOR THE SEASON.

The services of no other young horse of his conformation, breeding and quality, with such a record, is offered at so low a figure.

Bear in mind that colt stakes will soon be given for the get of stallions with records of 2:15 or better. If you want to raise colts which will be eligible to enter in all stakes, BREED TO BALKAN, as he is the only horse in this region with a record of 2:15 whose services are offered to the public.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.
This horse can be seen at The Oakland Track, in charge of A. L. HINDS.

This horse was in Charles Marvin's care for about ten days during the record meeting at Stockton last fall—the only time he was ever on a track—and the first time he was speeded he showed Marvin an eighth of a mile in 19½ seconds. (FULL BROTHER TO STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23.)

Sired by CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of STEVE WHIPPLE, four-year-old race record, 2:23, and KATE AGNEW, 2:28½), dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23, and VOTER), by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of 15 trotters in 2:30; of 9 sires of 12 2:30 trotters, and of 12 dams of 16 trotters in the list.)

CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN 10,178, by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of nine sires), dam FLORA (dam of three sires of 2:30 speed) by CHIEFTAIN 721; second dam a thoroughbred mare.

ANDY R. is a bright bay, with small star; foaled 1885; 15 hands 2½ inches high, and weighs 1,025 pounds. He is a beauty, and a perfect horse in every way. Will make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $40 FOR THE SEASON, FEBRUARY 1 TO JUNE 1.

PRINDEX.

Sired by DEXTER PRINCE 11,363, (sire of seven in the list) dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, VOTER and ANDY R.)

PRINDEX is a dark brown horse, white hind feet; foaled 1888; 16 hands high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a good-sized, fine-styled and well-gaited colt, and will certainly make a trotter and sire of speed. He will also make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st.

AT $40 FOR THE SEASON.

The reader will perceive that the four stallions mentioned herein are all from the same mare. Four individually better or nicer-looking stallions can not be found on any stock farm in California. Horsemen are especially invited to inspect the horses, and I wish to call special attention to their feet and legs—better were never put under a horse. Their dam, TWIST, at sixteen years old, is as sound as the day she was foaled. Their second, third and fourth dams were used for all purposes of farm and road work, and all lived to be over thirty years old—their limbs, at the time of death, being as free of blemishes or of any marks of unsoundness as a suckling colt's.

The disposition of these stallions are of the very best, and their produce are all good size, of fine conformation, have perfect feet and legs, and all show speed to a remarkable degree.

I do not favor extremely high service fees, and the prices on these stallions for this year are placed comparatively very low; that of STEVE WHIPPLE in particular being much less than of any other stallion of equal value or merit in this State.

Mares sent to my address, care of WEBER STABLES, STOCKTON, CAL., will be taken to my ranch at BELLOTA free of charge, provided two or three days' notice be given me by letter.

Pasturage on mares to be bred to VOTER, ANDY R., or PRINDEX free for two months, after that $3 per month. All bills payable at time of service or before the mares are removed.

Usual return privileges, provided mare or horse does not change hands, or money refunded at my option. For further particulars, address

DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently-formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better-bred stallion stands for public service in California to-day. He is only six years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1892 at

WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,

715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

THREE CHEERS

Young Fashion — Fashion (Bonnets o'Blue); Monarch (Trustee (imp.)) — Dolphine; Prism

Hurrah (imp.) — Jovial (Sister to Grey Momus); Bay Middleton — Newminster (Beeswing); Touchstone

Fourth dam Reality; fifth dam, by imp. Medley, sixth dam, by imp. Sentinel; seventh dam, by Mark Anthony; eighth dam, by imp. Janus; ninth dam, by imp. Monkey; tenth dam, by Silvereye eleventh dam, by Spanker. (See Bruce's American Stud Book, Vol. I. page 432.

HURRAH, sire of Three Cheers, produced the great winners Bonnie Lizzie, Chaquita, Ohio Boy, Nellie Peyton, Little Buttercup, Red Fox, Medusa, Brad, Referee, Monk, Hostage, Lady Middleton and many others.

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS.

Seventy-five Dollars for the Season.

Third dam by Boston Boy, son of David Hill's Black Hawk, out of Boston Girl.

ANTEENUT stands 15 hands high; blood bay; best disposition; square trotter; quite speedy; had no trainer's work; never worked for speed. Considering the breeding of Anteenut on sire and dam's sides he should certainly reproduce speed, being bred in the height of fashion. Will make the season of 1892 at Santa Rosa.

TERMS $50 SEASON; $75 TO INSURE.

No return privilege. Good pasturage $2.50 per month. Best of care given to mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Season ends July 1st, 1892. Address

WILKES PASHA 2618

Will make the Season of 1891 at the Stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Springs Road.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

WILKES PASHA 2618 is a dark bay with white hind feet; 16½ hands high; bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elkhorn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky; sired by Onward 1411, record 2:25¼, trial 2:17; sire of 48 in the list. He is proving one of the greatest sires in America and his sons are proving to be sires of extreme and early speed also. Onward is by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of seventy-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten with records below 2:20; first dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:18¾, trial 2:25), by American Clay 34, sire of Maggie Briggs, 2:27, Ella Clay, 2:27½, and the dams of Executor, 2:24½, Ranchero, 2:21½, Judge Hawes, 2:24, Ambassador, 2:22¼, Sir Walter, 2:18¼, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:23; third dam by Paddle Burns, thoroughbred.

WILKES PASHA is the only son of Onward in this part of California. He combines the much-prized Clay cross, his dam being a producing daughter of American Clay 34, who traces to the very best of thoroughbred foundations. As an individual, Wilkes Pasha is as handsome a horse as one could wish to see. He has been bred to ordinary mares. Every one of his progeny shows perfect trotting action and fine size; in color they are all deep bays or browns, and in disposition they cannot be excelled.

TERMS—$30 for the season. Pasturage $4 per month. Every attention and care will be given to mares, but no liabilities assumed for accidents or escapes.

Sixth dam Lady Robin, by Robin Gray, sire of third dam of the great Lexington.
Seventh dam by Quicksilver, son of imp. Medley.
Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¾; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

As the dam of Green Mountain Maid and grandam of Electioneer, Shanghai Mary may be called the foundation stone of the Electioneer family, which now holds practically every best on record. Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

Glen Fortune's oldest colts were foaled in 1891, and show up splendidly in the kindergarten, where they may be seen any week day.

By The Grand Moor.

MOORLAND, $40.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¾.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

The Souther Farm Swimming Tank is in regular operation and horses are given swimming work every week day in good weather. Swimming gives EXERCISE WITHOUT CONCUSSION, and is an invaluable aid in training trotters or runners. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

DIRECTOR JR.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1892 AT THE ASYLUM RANCH, SAN RAFAEL.

DESCRIPTION.

DIRECTOR JR. is a grandly-formed stallion, a handsome black in color; stands 15.3 hands; weighs 1,175 pounds. In appearance and disposition he is more like Director than any other son of that famous sire. He has never been trained for speed, but can easily show a 2:20 gait on the road, and will surely get a mark much below that this fall, as he will be put in training for this season's campaign. Up to the present time he has been in the stud in Oregon and never given an opportunity to show his speed. His colts, like himself, are all grand lookers, show great trotting action, intelligence and gameness. A three-year-old now in training has shown a mile in 2:21, and Directwood, a two-year-old son, won every race in which he was entered last year, and could have gone in the thirty list had his owner so desired. At the Oregon State Fair last year Director Jr. and five of his get were awarded first premiums.

PEDIGREE.

It will be seen that Director Jr. is bred on blood lines almost identically the same as Direct, 2:06, the Greatest Harness Horse in the World.

DIRECTOR JR.

- Director, 2:17 (Sire of Direct 2:06; Margaret S. 2:12½; Evangeline 2:19; Guide 2:16¼; Emma 2:24¾; and 7 others in the 2:30 list.)

The Fast Trotting Stallion

SILAS SKINNER.

RECORD 2:17. STANDARD, 10,681,

Will make the season of 1891, commencing February 1st and ending July 1st, at De Turk's Breeding Stables on Donahue Street, opposite De Turk's Wine Cellars, Santa Rosa, Cal.

SILAS SKINKER, sired by Alcona Jr., 2:24; first dam Fontana (dam of Flora Belle, 2:24½) by Almont 33, sire of thirty-eight in the 2:30 list; second dam Fannie Williams, dam of Bay Chieftain, 2:28¾, by Alexander's Abdallah 15, sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14; Rosalind, 2:21¾; Thorndale, 2:22¾, etc.; third dam by Gaine's Denmark; fourth dam by Robert Bruce; fifth dam by Virginia Whip.

ALCONA JR. was sired by Alcona 730, sire of Flora Belle, 2:21¾; Clay Duke, 2:30; Prince Warwick, trial 2:18, etc., by Almont 33. First dam Madonna by Cassius M. Clay Jr., sire of Durango, 2:23¾, Harry Clay, 2:23½; Clay Davis, 2:26¾; Cora, 2:30, etc.

The above is a condensed pedigree of Silas Skinner, but enough is given to show him to be as richly bred in the best trotting lines as any horse living, besides being a great individual with remarkable speed and staying qualities, which was shown by his performance on the California Circuit last season. In 1890 Silas Skinner started in six races, trotting in all twenty-three heats. Of these six races Skinner won four and was second in two, and closed the season of 1892 with a record of 2:19.

The performance of Silas Skinner during the season of 1891 has also been very meritorious, having started in seven races, three of which he won, being second twice and twice third. In his race at Sacramento, September 19, 1891, Silas Skinner trotted so horsemen said—one of the gamest races ever trotted in California. His competitors were Frank M and Wanda, whom he defeated, winning the first, third and fourth heats, the second heat falling to Frank M. Time of each heat 2:17, 2:17, 2:17¼, 2:19.

SILAS SKINNER is a black horse, sixteen hands high, and weighs in stud season about 1,100 pounds. In color, breeding and conformation he approaches very near the ideal stallion, and he descends on both his sire's and dam's side from ancestors who have few equals in the history of the American trotting horse.

TERMS: $100 FOR THE SEASON.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge, provided SILAS SKINNER remains the property of the present owners. Pasturage $3 per month. Every attention and care given to mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, apply to

DON MARVIN

Five-Year-Old Record 2:28.

DON MARVIN is a beautiful seal brown, foaled 1884; bred by Senator Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal; is 16 hands high and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by Fallis, 2:23 (sire of four in 2:30 list), he by Electioneer. Dam, CORA (dam of Don Marvin, 2:28, and Elected [trial] 2:26) by Don Victor, (sire of the dams of five in the 2:30 list), by Belmont. Second dam, CLARABEL (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24½, and Rebecca, dam of four in 2:30 list) by Abdallah Star. Third dam, FAIRY (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:29¾ and Sweepstakes, sire of 22 in the 2:30 list, and three other producing sires and dams) by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Fourth dam, EMMA MILLS (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star.

DON MARVIN is a horse of great natural speed. His record was made with scarcely any preparation, after making large season in the stand, and is no measure of his speed. His oldest colts (only five in number) are three years old this spring. One of them with very little work trotted quarters last fall in 36 seconds, and could have easily entered the 2:30 list in his two-year-old form had he been given an opportunity.

DON MARVIN will make the season of 1892 at $40, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—Four producing dams.

Kentucky's Futurity

FOR FOALS OF 1892 TO TROT IN 1894 AND 1895.

$25,000

GUARANTEED

By The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association.

REMEMBER IT TAKES BUT TWO SMALL PAYMENTS, AMOUNTING TO ONLY ONE-TENTH OF ONE PER CENT TO CARRY ENTRY TO JUNE 1 OF YEAR OF RACE, AND THERE IS NO HEAVY PAYMENT TILL NIGHT BEFORE RACE.

FOR FOALS OF 1892 Colts, fillies and geldings (the produce of mares that may be nominated in this stake) to trot as two-year-olds at FALL MEETING, 1894, and as three-year-olds at FALL MEETING, 1895, the first race to be mile heats, 2 in 3, and the second mile heats, 3 in 5. On or before March 15, 1892, the mares whose foals may become eligible to start in these races must be nominated, and any mare that has foaled, or is due to foal, in 1892, is eligible. The association guarantees the stake worth not less than $25,000, of which $5,000 will go to the two-year-olds and $20,000, OR MORE, to the three-year-old race, as follows: In the two-year-old event the winner will receive $3,000; the second colt $1,000 and the third $500, and the nominator of the dam of the winner, $500; the three-year-old winner will receive $15,000; the second $3,000; the third $1,000, and $1,900 will go to the nominator of dam of winner. If the whole stake (for the two races) exceeds $25,000, THE EXCESS will go to winner of three-year-old race. Entrance as follows: $10 to nominate mare March 15, 1892; $15 November 1, 1899, when color and sex of foal must be given, and all foals on which payments (of $15 each) are made, November 1st, 1892, will be eligible to start in either or both races without further payment till June 1st of year of race. Those desiring to start in the two-year-old race shall, on June 1, 1894, name and describe their colts, and pay on each a forfeit of $25 (and as many may be named as the owners desire to keep in). On the starters $100 more must be paid by 7½ o'clock of evening before the race. If fewer than three start, those starting and the nominator of the winner's dam will receive only the money that each would have received had three horses been placed; but the other money or moneys will be carried to the three-year-old race. Those desiring to start as three-year-olds shall, on June 1, 1895, name and describe (as in the two-year-old event) and pay a forfeit of $50; and those who start must pay $250 more by 7½ o'clock of evening before the race. In case of a walk-over in the three-year-old race the winner will receive the whole amount paid in, less the amount paid the two-year-olds, and that paid nominators of winners' dams. National Association rules to govern.

If a mare proves barren, or slips, or has a dead foal or twins, or if either the mare or foal dies before November 1, 1892, her nominator may substitute another mare and foal, regardless of ownership. The death of a nominator will not make void his entry or entries. In entries the name, color and pedigree of mare must be given; also the name of horse to which she was bred in 1891.

NDS OF VALUABLE HORSES and Cattle are annually lost, simply because their owners have no proper instruments to administer medicine. An experienced Veterinary Surgeon recognized this fact and invented a combination of Instruments which are indispensable to all owners of horses and cattle, and will do the work to perfection.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50.

ADRIANCE BUCKEYE MOWERS.

WE desire particularly to call the attention of the interior dealers and of farmers to the fact that the Buckeye Mower, which we advertise, is the machine made by Adriance, Platt & Co., of Poughkeepsie, New York, and is the mower that has been sold on this coast for many years by ourselves through our Sacramento house, as agents for the northern part of this State, and by Hawley Bros. and the Deere Implement Co., of this city, who formerly controlled the southern part of the State, and for which territory we are now agents.

The Adriance Buckeye therefore is the mower that has built for itself a reputation upon the name "Buckeye" on this coast, and is the only one of the large number of mowers of that name which has had any standing or foothold in this section of the country. We feel therefore that we should caution all intending purchasers when ordering Buckeye mowers to be sure to remember these facts and to state that the one wanted is the machine manufactured by Adriance, Platt & Co., of New York, and sold only by Baker & Hamilton of San Francisco and Sacramento and their agents; you will then be sure to get the Adriance Buckeye Mower, which hasbeen sold so long under the name of Buckeye, and which has established for itself the reputation which justly places it in the front rank of mowing machines.

In this connection we also want to call the attention of farmers particularly to the question of knives and sections. We will carry in stock knives and sections for the Adriance Buckeye Mower, made by the manufacturers of that machine, and which possess merits beyond those made by outside parties who have NO INTEREST IN THE SUCCESS OR LIFE of a mowing machine, and care only for the profit to be derived from the sale of the knives and sections.

A GENUINE BUCKEYE SECTION WILL STAND ABOUT six GRINDINGS as against about three on those made by other parties. The price of the genuine sections as sold by us is about the same as is obtained for the inferior ones; therefore it is to your interest when buying these goods to insist that you receive the GENUINE KNIVES and SECTIONS as made by ADRIANCE, PLATT & CO. Each genuine Buckeye Section is stamped "A. P. & Co."

A full stock of repairs for The Genuine "Adriance" Buckeye Mowers, Reapers and Binders above referred to are constantly on hand. Practical farmers who know the value of a ready market where extras can be instantly obtained will appreciate this fact.

The genuine SECTIONS will be sold for 90 cts. per doz. Other makes for 70 cents per doz.

Home-Haven.

Hush! adown the western heaven slowly moves the shining sun,
To the east the shadows lengthen, stretching forward, one by one;
From a day of toil or pleasure back again we gladly come,
From the moilingworking places,
Filled with care and wearinesses.
Now to seek a kindly shelter in the haven of our home.

On her nest among the branches now the mother bird can rest,
With her little ones safe nestled underneath her loving breast;
Now the cows their milk are giving into pails all white with foam;
Now from blossoms warm and sunny
Hie the bees back, rich with honey,
And the bleating lambs come nibbling down the pathway toward their home.

Soon the fireflies flash their beacons in and out the garden's gloom,
While within the lamp shines softly on the readers in the room;
In our arms the children slumber, with their feet too tired too roam;
Out from the dewy woodland covers
Whispering come the happy lovers;
In the blessed night we gather in the haven of our home.

MANAGEMENT OF BROOD MARES.

This Important Matter Handled in a Sensible Manner by an Experienced Horseman.

On the management of the brood mare much may be said of importance, but it is not my intention in these pages to enter into the full details, but merely to give what I consider some of the most important points.

In the selection of the mare for breeding purposes one of the first things to see to is that the mare is of good conformation and a grand individual, possessing good size, a point which I think has been too much neglected in the trotting-bred horses in the past, the chief aim being speed without any consideration of individuality and size, granted, of course, that she is bred right.

Another point, the brood mare ought to be perfectly sound and free from any blemish of heredity that is liable to be transmitted to her progeny, the influence of the dam in the transmission of hereditary qualities being usually very much underestimated.

This article, however, will have more particular reference to the brood mare after she is in foal, so we will omit the many difficulties encountered getting them in foal. "When once the mare is surely in foal, says Prof. Fleming, the measures to be observed are in general those which should prevail always, irrespective of this condition. But besides these general principles there are a few particular precautions to be attended to in order that this period may be safely and successfully passed through, and these precautions are all the more necessary as the period of birth approaches. Unlike the human female the pregnant animals do not require those careful, numerous and minute attentions so essential to her health and the welfare of her offspring. Indeed too much nursing and pampering by removing animals from their natural condition is unnecessary and likely to do more harm than good. When once safely in foal she should not be teased by the stallion nor should she be over-worked or fatigued, especially on rough roads."

Yet we must not lose sight of the value of judicious exercise for the broodmare. It is my opinion that a mare in foal is better to be worked at light work, if a farm animal, and jogged lightly if a trotting one. In fact I prefer it to being turned in a paddock for the first months of pregnancy. They will endure with ease a fair amount of work, providing it be of a steady nature and not subjected to rough work and handling. The best authorities regard the trotting brood mare as better off to do regular road work or jogging on road or track as very beneficial to both the mother and fœtus, reducing the amount and speed of the gait as she approaches the seventh and eighth month of gestation, after which I think she should never be urged off of a brisk walk or else turned loose in a paddock by herself, and whatever her exercise may be it should be over smooth places. I have observed, and indeed it happened while I was yet at home on the farm, a mare worked in the plow right up to the time of parturition, foaling during the noon hour with the harness on without any harmful results. But I think this is going a little to extremes in the matter of exercise. Suffice it to say that all kinds of pregnant animals are the better off for plenty of the right kind of exercise in the open air.

The brood mare should be provided with a well-lighted and ventilated box stall, 12x12, with a good, wide doorway, to prevent injury to the abdomen in passing to and fro. Her stall should be well-bedded and kept perfectly clean.

With regard to breeding the brood mare, much may be said. It is a very important factor; she should have food rich in flesh-forming materials; good, sound, sweet, tame hay, grass while in season. I regard it the proper time for mares to bring forth their young when grass is to be had in abundance, for no food so fitly prepares them for the act.

The pregnant animal has to form blood for herself and fœtus, therefore requires more food than one not in that condition.

The food should be liberal, but not of too fattening a nature, crushed oats mixed with an equal quantity of bran and one feed of carrots per day in the winter season. All foods that tend to produce indigestion are to be carefully guarded against. Rank grass and rapid-growing grass, or other grain food, overripe, fibrous hay or straw, and especially food which has been injured and rendered musty and food which is smutty or ergotised. Water should never be given the mare until the chill is first taken off.

It is dangerous to give a pregnant mare a large drink of cold or ice water; any food or water which is likely to cause any disturbance in the digestive or other organs is to be obviated as much as it is possible for the owner or attendant to judge.

Surgical operations and medicines that act acutely on the womb, bowels or kidneys are to be avoided as liable to cause abortion. Study the nature of the feces each day so as to be able to correct before any serious results follow. Correct constipation by proper dieting, never resorting to anything heroic and not thoroughly understood by the one who administers such medical agents.

There is in some pregnant animals a tendency to fatten. This must be guarded against at least when carried to extremes, as it may cause abortion or retard the development of the fœtus. Pregnant mares should at all times be handled carefully. Sudden fright should be guarded against.

As the period of gestation draws to a close, the signs of which are too familiar to those having any experience to be hardly worthy of a notice here, such as enlargement of the udder, filling out of the teats, dropping down at the flanks, termified condition of the external genitals, etc., and a natural instinctive desire for quietness which should of itself point out the necessity of a roomy box stall in a quiet place, and where she can be watched without causing any annoyance. When parturition in the mare is normal it is very rapid, requiring little assistance. The position assumed by mares during parturition is somewhat varied. They usually do so standing, and the position offers some advantages. This position is far from being constant, however; it is rare indeed that the mare lies down at full length on one side of the body, and when it does occur it nearly always indicates a long and difficult labor, the sense of uneasiness created by the presence of the fully-developed fœtus causes contractions of the abdominal muscles which are called into play during the act. At the same time the neck of the womb becomes dilated or opened. When everything is right, a few more efforts, each of which are more violent, expel the fœtus, and complete the act.

If the labor pains are prolonged and the owner or attendant has any experience he may make a quiet and careful examination with the hand; first paring the finger nails short and perfectly smooth and then oiling the hand and arm with some olive oil or some other bland fluid, he proceeds to make the examination. Sometimes the obstacle may be so simple that a little common sense exercised on the part of the examiner may be able to correct at once and allow the act to go to a successful issue, but on the contrary if anything in the manner of the presentation is at all misleading to the examiner I would advise no further interference, but at once to call in the nearest qualified veterinarian to render assistance, as I have so often seen matters that were simple rendered very serious by unnecessary delay.

When the fœtus is delivered it will be necessary to at once free it from the fœtal membrane, or it will perish from suffocation. The next thing is to remove the mucous which some times clogs the mouth and nostrils and hinders respiration. This is quite important to attend to early. If the umbilical cord or navel string is not ruptured, and it is part of the attendant's duty to see that it is not ruptured, as it is apt to rupture too close to the belly and cause serious trouble, not from serious hemorrhage or bleeding, but from a blood poison which colts are so prone to contract from absorption of poisonous materials through that medium, therefore I regard it at this period of civilization when the progeny is so valuable a most important point—use the double ligature, the first one inch from the abdomen and the other one inch from the latter and dividing between the ligatures, and if the remaining portion of the cord has any tendency to remain moist and not wither and obliterate properly, I advise the use of tincture of iron applied once a day with a sponge. Probably the next step, returning to the subject, is to examine and see if the colt is strong and healthy and then place it where the mother may lick it dry. The warmth of the tongue and breath serves to stimulate the cutaneous circulation and thus stimulate the young creature as well as being a source of gratification to the dam. Some mares will not lick their colts. Sometimes a little bran or flour sprinkled over them will induce them to do so. I think this preferable to drying them with the rub rag or wisps, but it is sometimes necessary to do so. The young colt if strong soon endeavors to get up and instinctively to seek the teat, but I think it good practice to assist the colt in doing so. A few times with a strong colt will be all that is necessary, as he will soon learn to find it himself, and the dam will assist if a kind mother. It is very important for the young creature to get the first of the mother's milk, which is called colestrum, and which has a laxative effect on its bowels and causes the passage of the black, tarry feces, called meconium. The colt's bowels must be closely watched to see that it has its regular passages, and in case it does not small doses of raw linseed oil and castor oil mixed, administered, and injections of warm water and soap and olive oil to get rid of the hard pellets of manure that so often cause trouble.

I have many times seen it necessary to oil the finger and insert into the rectum and fish them out and then follow up with injections, but not too often repeated, so as to weaken, and if the finger is used this must be done carefully so as not to irritate the parts. See, also, that the colt passes water properly. All these little minutæ are very important to observe early and attend to promptly, and if not fully able to cope with the difficulties, call in your veterinary surgeon, whose duty it is to attend to them. Sometimes the mare has not sufficient milk to nourish the colt, in which case we will have to resort to artificial measures. Cow's milk, diluted and sweetened, answers best. It must be fed as often as every hour for a few days, and then every two hours, and must be kept warm and dry and encouraged early to take other food, as grass. etc. Gentle exercise is very necessary for this young foal, even a few days after birth; therefore it is wise to turn out to pasture if the weather will permit, but not allowing to be exposed to any inclemencies until older and strong, and not even then should they be neglected in that way. The mare ought to be watched closely after foaling to see that the afterbirth is expelled, which is usually soon after foaling; indeed, I have seen it partially entangled with the fœtus and expelled at the same time or following very soon afterwards. When it does not its retention may do great damage by irritating the passages by decomposing and being absorbed, and thereby causing serious mischief.

In no case should it be allowed to remain longer than from twelve to twenty-four hours. This again I consider too serious for the owner or attendant, as there is liable to be hemorrhage, and it is also necessary to remove every portion of it. This requires some tact and a knowledge of the anatomy of the parts, and is certainly the work of the skilled veterinary surgeon. If left for any length of time after removal thoroughly irrigate the parts with some antiseptic preparation, using a continuous stream syringe and then drawing off the fluid again with another instrument for the purpose. This will prevent to a great extent by washing poisonous material away the absorption of such and thus prevent serious consequences. It is a fruitful source of irritation and discharge from the womb, and thus renders them very uncertain as breeders again. So see that the afterbirth is removed at the proper time, and you will have done much to make the mare confortable. Of course the mare requires other attentions that almost every owner has had experience with. See that her bowels are right for a few days after the act, and then turn out to grass together. If the dam is a very abundant milker it is good practice to milk a little away before allowing the colt to nurse.—Geo. A. Scott, in American Trotter.

REMINISCENCES AND GOSSIP.

Thank Heaven! it looks as though we were to have paid judges at our annual race meetings at last. I never will forget my first appearance in the stand. It was a number of years ago. The races advertised to take place at our district fair were of a decidedly mixed nature, and my associate judges were as much in the dark as I was regarding the rules of racing. We had such exalted opinions of each other's knowledge of the laws of racing that we deemed it unnecessary to study them. We had little trouble in the first two heats. In the third heat the sulkies collided and the drivers came into the stand and "kicked." That was the beginning of a week of trials and tribulations. Every race was decided amid discussions and wrangling. The crowds would hiss and jeer and pass very uncomplimentary remarks about our being "fixed," and one prominent member of a sporting clique mounted a box after a decision in a race was rendered, and, in a very brief, but forcible speech, named each one of us and ridiculed our different vocations, and then appealed to the crowd to endorse his remarks. Resign we could not; to fight would be useless; so we ascended those steps into that rickety grand stand every day with about as much pleasure as if we were going to gratify the morbid curiosity of the people by being neatly and quietly hanged. We would wait until the crowd had passed outside of the gate before we dared to slip down the stairs and go home. We knew we were trying to carry out the laws of racing and were endeavoring to prevent jobbery, but we found we were in the minority. When Saturday, the long-looked-for last day of the races came, we felt better, but as luck would have it there was the same howling, hissing and jeering over our decisions. One of the judges, Moore, was nervous; the other, Johnson, did not care, whilst I felt that my place as the head of this trinity was perfectly unbearable. I had announced the decision on the disputed race when Moore, who was always on the lookout for trouble, noticed a wagon loaded with eggs coming up to a point near the judges' stand. He did not know that they were to go to a little restaurant under the grand stand, and as he saw the employes and the crowd quickly moving over to where the wagon stood he frantically cried to me: "For God's sake, Judge, lay down! There's a wagon-load of rotten eggs they've brought in to assail us with. I knew it would come to this. My God! we're ruined!" I pacified him as well as I could and felt much relieved when that day's work was over, yet I believe I made more enemies, ate less at night and contemplated suicide more often during that week's racing than I ever did in the course of my life.

"I think anyone who plays combinations is either a first-class sucker or a 'hoodoo' of the first water," said an old-timer the other night. "Oh, I don't know about that," said a young fellow near by (whose toe had doubtless been trampled on). "Well," said the old-timer, "you just watch the combination-players, and if you don't hear longer tales of woe from them than from any othes class on earth, I miss my guess and lose the drinks. I used to play them myself, but they turned my hair gray early in the action, and I stopped ere I got on the downward path which is greased all the way to the lunatic asylum. I've seen some close calls on big winnings though. I remember seeing a young fellow buy a three-horse combination one night about two years ago which figured 800 to 1. Before the first race came off that day it rained, and all but three or four were scratched. His horse was left in and won. In the second race there had originally been about twenty entries, and all but about five were scratched, leaving Meriden to win—the young fellow's horse. It wound up on Leap Year for a place, and when the odds came in Leap Year was a hot even-money favorite. Before they went to the post the odds against him were 4 to 5. Someone came up and offered the youth about a fourth of what the ticket called for. The buyer was highly indignant, and asked the would-be purchaser if he imagined him such a fool as to sell him a ticket winding up on a favorite over the entire field (whom he only wanted to run into a place) for one-fourth the amount it might win. He considered it a cast-iron certainty if Leap Year didn't fall down. In less than five minutes the race had been run, and Leap Year wasn't one-two-eight. The combination-buyer who wouldn't sell walked slowly out of the room, swore off on combinations, got drunk and had the ticket framed. I'll tell you what sickened me on combination business. I was thrown down on two heavy ones in one season. Old Checkmate wound up a big fellow for me one day, and he was selling at $500 against $300 for the whole field. It was in the Dixiana Handicap run at Louisville eight or nine years ago. What made the matter worse, it had rained, and 'Old Check' was considered in his element. The smooth people then declared that the race was all over but the shouting. All the same Meditator, by Buckden out of Meanness, got up in the last stride and just nipped "Check" at the wire. I have meditated over this race many a time and thought they ought to have named Meditator Pure Cussedness or something like that. The other big combination I just missed winning was in 1883. I took two. I liked Tally-Ho and Billy Gilmore in a two-year-old race. Fellowplay looked good in the second, and the third race was the Louisville Cup, for which Lida Stanhope, John Davis and Thora were contestants. I took Thora. Tally-Ho won the first race by a nose from Billy Gilmore and as the former was rather short I was happy. Fellowplay captured his race easily. Thora was a red-hot favorite for the Cup, and more money was bet on this race than any racing event that ever came off at Louisville, with the possible exception of Ten Broeck–Mollie McCarthy match. I sat next to old Mr. Patton, of St. Louis, one of the owners of Fellowplay, and asked him what he thought of my chances. 'Young man,' said he, 'I'll give you within $5 of what the combination calls for, but wouldn't advise you to sell it. Thora can't lose, in my opinion, unless she falls down or breaks a tendon.' John Davis ran in the lead for a little over a mile and a half, when Thora commenced to move up on him like he was tied to a post. 'Young man, you're all right,' said Mr. Patton. He had hardly uttered these words ere an old turfman but a few feet away jumped up and shouted: 'A hundred to one Thora's beaten!' I thought he was a lunatic. Far from it was he, however. Taking another look at the horses, I saw that the great mare's tail was elevated, a sure token of distress, and the shouts of Thora's admirers changed to groans of dismay in an instant. She had broken a tendon, and came in a moment later limping, over a distance behind Lida Stanhope, who won by about three lengths from old John Davis. Thora was lost to the turf forever, and my combination and hopes of ever winning big money with a small amount went with her. The queen of the turf has reproduced herself in Yorkville Belle, though, but that don't do me any good."

"I believe that fellow Pittsburg Phil has got some sort of a system to beat the races," said a student of Goodwin's Guide. "No," said a friend of speaker No. 1, "he can't have, for sometimes he don't make a play in two weeks. The bookmakers are looking for fellows with 'systems,' feeling as sure of their game as the faro-bank friend with the Leadville system, three a side, double-out or chop sure thing. A fellow got up a book on 'How to Beat the Races' a few years ago, and while it had quite a sale, the trouble is that people who play the races won't stick to the system arranged for them. They lose three or four times, get scared to death and quit. On the other hand, the man who wins on the scheme a few times gets a very high opinion of himself and goes to plunging on some tip given him by a stable boy or tout, and lands among the hosts of broken players in a short time. This idea of the fellow that wrote the book was to back the second choice for a place and double up every time he lost. It has been very successful, but not one man in a hundred will stick to the slow old goose that is laying the golden eggs. I remember a few years ago a man in New York thought he had got the bookmakers right where he wanted them. His plan was to play the favorite every time and double up when he lost. For a while he was in clover, and Dame Fortune cast sheep's eyes on him until he thought the world was his'n. Along came the "hoodoo," and brought in thirteen winners among the second and third choices and field horses. The man started on $20, I believe, and by the time about eleven favorites had lost in a row the sucker with the system was bankrupt and in a fair way to join the great army of sure-thing lunatics that had gone before. Another system that has flattened many a fat pocketbook is the following of certain jockeys. I remember one fellow picked out Pikey Barnes as a good thing, but when the black demon had lost thirty-three races in a row the follower changed his mind and went back to work a sadder man with the "plunging" spirit erased from his make-up."

The past ten years has seen the almost total abolition of steeplechase and long-distance racing in America. We used to have some grand contests where stamina counted for something, but that quality in a horse is almost lost sight of these days, and now it hardly pays to train a horse after he is three years old. Speaking of steeplechases, I don't know but their decay is really a good thing, in more ways than one. In the first place, few of these races were contested on their merits, and the jockeys used to exhibit wonderful skill in falling off at the wrong time to suit anybody except those in the jobbing ring, and then in at least one out of three steeplechases somebody was injured. Horses that were not successful "on the flat" often made wonderful steeplechasers. The "worst acthor" at the post ever seen in America was a horse called Churchill. He would jump, kick and buck with a prize broncho any time, and sidle off into a fence at a hair-raising rate. Only one jockey, Englishman Evans, ever rode him with success. Seldom was the starter less than an hour getting the field away when Churchill was one of the entries. Little Minch, Lute Fogle and the Duke of Milpitas were angels in comparison, and that is saying a good deal, too. Finally his owners, Churchill & Johnson, sold him to Major Nolan, of Albany, N. Y., if I remember aright. The name Churchill was changed to Jim McGowan, and the horse was about twenty pounds better than anything in the country when it came to steeplechasing. That was his game, to a certainty. Afterward his name was changed to Bourke Cochran, and he won races right along till he broke his leg or neck (I forget which) one day making a jump at Albany. Guy was another wonderful old steeplechaser. For years this son of Narragansett was used by Colonel McDaniel (owner of Harry Bassett, Joe Daniels and many other famous horses in his day) as a kind of trier-out of youngsters at his place, but finally sold him to Chicago parties. When nine or ten years old Guy came out and beat the pick of the country at steeplechase and hurdle-racing. We heard a story about Guy and his owners once that, if true, shows how "square" some of the "jumping races" were. Those in "the swim" were backing King Dutchman in a particular race in which Guy was a top-heavy favorite. The jockey had been instructed to make a graceful tumble at one of the last jumps, but his foot getting caught in the stirrup in some way, he decided to take chances with his employers rather than to fall off and be dragged along the ground to his death. So he went over the final jump and out into the straight track twenty good lengths ahead of King Dutchman, and Guy got the bit in his teeth and was gaining at every stride. Against the fence, up toward the three-quarter pole stood Guy's "friends," and when he got opposite, so enraged and excited were they that they yelled at the top of their voices: "Fall off, you scoundrel! Fall off! What do you mean, you villain, by winning?" In another instant the old horse had dashed by the wire a winner, and a mighty sore combination made a rush for the jockey who had "thrown them down" so heavily. However, he got away as quick as he could extricate himself, and it is claimed that the sure-thing people came within an ace of being ruled off for life. I saw a jockey named Storms fall off of a sure winner very neatly one day at Louisville. He was riding Snowbok, a son of Springbok, and looking around and observing that nothing was near him (at least it appeared very much that way), he took a tumble for the benefit of his friends who were over near the grand stand. Snowbok, without his weight, finished first by nearly a sixteenth of a mile, went up the usual distance past the winning post, and coming back, held his head up proudly under the wire. His eyes said, as plainly as if he had spoken: "Didn't I win?" But of course they gave the race to the leading horse coming in with his proper weight, which was Glasgow. Snowbok afterward broke his neck going over a hurdle.

Somebody wrote an article for a morning paper the other day which showed plainly that however well-posted the scribe might be on trotters, he was sadly deficient in knowledge of the records of gallopers. Among other things he stated that Emperor of Norfolk was beaten just once in either his two and three-year-old form. This splendid horse met defeat no less than six times as a two-year-old and twice as a three-year-old—at least, Goodwin says so, and he is something of an authority in such matters. Notwithstanding this, Emperor of Norfolk was the best horse of his age in America at that time, as far as records go. In looking over the races of the cracks of the past dozen years, I am inclined to the belief that Hindoo, as a weight-carrier and in point of speed and ability to "go the route," was the best horse America has seen. His two cup races (two and one-quarter miles), with full weight up, in 3:57¾ and 3:58, have never been equalled by any horse produced in America, and in his two and three-year-old forms he had no equal in his era, although Crickmore did manage to down him a couple of times when conceded considerable weight. As a two-year-old Dwyer Bros. paid Daniel Swigert $12,000 for him, which at that time was the largest amount ever paid in America for a horse of that age. Next to Hindoo, his son, Hanover, was probably the best weight-packer over a distance of ground among the three-year-olds of the past decade. He won seventeen straight victories, only to be beaten by Laggard. We have never had a horse to race as a two, three and four-year-old and escape defeat. Hindoo's percentage of wins for three years of racing is higher than that of any other American thoroughbred. Luke Blackburn was a poor two-year-old, a grand three-year-old and four-year-old, but he did not meet, as a general thing, very good fields of horses, nor did he carry the weight that Hindoo or Hanover did. The Bard was a wonderful three and four-year-old, but not a very good two-year-old. The Czar ran the fastest mile and a half, weight up, of all the California three-year-olds, and was as promising a colt as ever left California. King of Norfolk beat one of the best two-year-olds in America when he defeated Ban Fox. California can lay claim to the best family of race-horses ever known in the world—the Norfolk-Marion. No mare ever threw so many high-class colts as has the daughter of Malcolm. We will not except Beeswing, Pocahontas, Alice Hawthorne or Lily Agnes, the pride of the English people. Nothing has sprung from Marion but good race horses, and there are eight stake winners—Duke of Norfolk, Duchess of Norfolk, Prince of Norfolk, King of Norfolk, Emperor of Norfolk, The Czar, El Rio Rey and Yo Tambien. Belle Knight is the nearest approach to Marion as a great matron. All of her produce have been winners, but only three have been of a high class. Her foals were: Bell Boy (a fast sprinter), Mary Corbett (a fair performer), Freeland (a cracker-jack), Long Knight (a very fair performer), Free Knight (a stake winner), Freeman (an average performer), Unite (a splendid three-year-old and useful four-year-old), Lavinia Belle (a fairish race mare) and Anna Blackburn (quite a useful filly). Belle Knight is by Knightwood, a son of imp. Knight of St. George, and, like Marion, has brought her lucky owner thousands of dollars. Colossa (dam of Getaway, Inspector B., Bella B. and Kosciusko), by Colossus, has the distinction of being the mother of four mighty good performers, but Marion and Belle Knight are far ahead of any of the American turf matrons.

The American Trotting Register has made a rule that hereafter "No horse, mare or gelding will be registered under a name already recorded for another animal;" another rule is that "if a performer makes its sire or dam standard it must first be registered." A gentleman of our acquaintence bought an unnamed filly a few days ago, and it took him just thirty minutes to select a name not already registered in Volumes 2 to 9 (inclusive), with the possibility of that selected name appearing yet in Volume X, now in print, or Volume XI, for which entries are being received. But let us suppose another application of the rules. Smith, of San Francisco, owns a son Electioneer, dam Molly Brown, untraced—therefore non-standard; Jones, of New Hampshire, owns, trains and now drives to a record of 2:30 a gelding which he has foolishly named and entered in races as Jay-Eye-See for several years past, and that is out of this same, untraced Molly Brown. That record of Jay-Eye-See's makes not only himself, but his dam, Molly Brown, and Smith's son of Electioneer out of Molly Brown, eligible to registration as standard. Smith applies for registration under Rules V. and VI. "Sir," says Registrar Steiner, "your horse is eligible and his name has not been presented by anybody else, but you must also pay for the registration of the 'performer' that made Molly Brown eligible." "That's all right," answers Smith, "here's your two dollars for him also, as well as proofs of breeding and record of my horse's half-brother, Jay-Eye-See, 2:30. Good-day!" "Jay-Eye-See, 2:30! Hold on!" shouts Steiner, "that wont do! There's a Jay-Eye-See in here already! You must change his name, or he cannot be registered, and Molly Brown and your Electioneer will consequently have to stay out also!" "Change his name? I change his name? Why, I don't own a hair in his tail, and that fellow in New Hampshire don't care a farthing whether he be registered or not! How can I change his name?" interrogates Smith. "Don't know, I'm sure," answers Steiner; "Those are the rules; I cannot change them, neither can I depart from them; couldn't do it even to accommodate Ar-I-on, you know." "Yes, I know; in fact I-are-on to it now, and I don't know but I see (a) 'jay' in those rules. Ta-ta! Bye the bye, where does that National Trotting Register hang out its shingle?"

Clark's Horse Review in its eagerness to prove its "fad" that one should breed to developed sires to insure the production of speed quotes Elector 2170 among such of Electioneer's remarkable producing sons and points to, "hoc signo," 2:31. That Elector stands prominent, opportunities considered, among the greatest of living speed producers, we admit, but if he owes it to that 2:31 or any other mark, we should like to know whether those "transmitting powers" will cease when it becomes generally known to the public that Elector 2170 has no mark at all. Certainly Mr. Richards, Elector's owner, neither advertises nor claims the mark credited to his great horse; but, would or will anybody on that account cease to patronize that sire? Will Clark's Horse Review explain why so practical and successful a breeder as A. J. Alexander stands two undeveloped and untried (or at least improved) sons of Electioneer at $500 for the season, whilst Harold, a good producer goes at $300? King Wilkes, highly developed and a proved producer, stands at $200, while Lord Russell, no record, and yet sire of ten in 2:30 at ten years of age and own brother to the illustrious Maud S., 2:08¾, and half-brother to Nutwood, 2:18¾, the greatest of living sires, is offered at $300? Is Mr. Alexander a lunatic or even a crank? or is it that his experience has taught him that blood, and only blood, tells when the producing strains are in both sides.

The La Siesta Stable.

The owners of the different stock farms in California are busy selecting their young trotters and trying to see if it will pay to develop the speed of the youngsters. At the San Mateo Stock Farm, Valensin's, Pleasanton Stock Farm, Palo Alto, and, in fact, every one of our large breeding establishments, the colts and fillies are now receiving their first lessons in the "way to go." The kindergarten system finds favor with some of the trainers, while the old regulation track system has still a large number of adherents. It makes very little difference how the youngsters receive their instructions, however, when the bell rings in the judges' stand for them to meet and contest for honors.

The La Siesta Stock Farm, of Santa Clara, is known all over the world as the home of Eros, for (besides his growing list of performers) his progeny have been sold in the East and in the West, and have given the greatest satisfaction to the purchasers. The number of young ones that inherit the speed, conformation, color, disposition and perfect trotting action of their sire in Santa Clara county are all destined for track work, it seems, if one is to judge by the number of his youngsters around the race track at San Jose; and the most agreeable part of it is, everyone who owns an Eros believes he has a "record-breaker," and is willing to have it trained.

While at the track Saturday, our representative visited the string of trotters belonging to the La Siesta farm, which was under the charge of Wm. H. Vioget. The only trouble was that the horses were scattered all over the grounds in box stalls, instead of being under one roof, as they were last year, but Mr. Vioget says that Mr. F. H. Burke intends to immediately erect a stable for Eros and his family, so that visitors will not have to walk so far; besides, it will be built to suit his ideas of what such a stable should be.

The first horse looked at was Eros 5326, record 2:29½ in a fifth heat. In color he is a beautiful seal brown, with tan muzzle and flanks; the only white to be seen is a small crescent in the center of the forehead. He stands 15.1¼ hands high and weighs 1,075 pounds. At the first glance, his resemblance to Electioneer, his illustrious sire, is most striking. His short back, great length from point of hip to hock, his heavy quarters, stifles and arms, large joints, good shoulder, short cannon bones, and light, wavy mane and full tail; his broad, yet deep chest, and his long, straight Electioneer neck, are all points that seem to increase in merit as the observer watches the fine stallion walking round the stall. His head is a study, and although showing abundance of brain space between a broad flat forehead and wide, muscular jowls, it tapers quickly to a delicate muzzle with spreading, open nostrils, thus making it appear small for a horse of his size. His throttle is wide, clean and gracefully arched. His eyes are large and stand out prominently; his ears small and well set apart, indicating a good disposition. His wither is sharp, while his back and loin is remarkable; looking at him from behind, he is well-rounded, while across from the point of one hip to the other he must outmeasure horses a hand higher. That he should make a name as a sire no student of form can conscientiously doubt, for he has every point that is needful. No tape-line is necessary to convince a person that Eros fills every requirement from the points of his small, delicate ears to his heels. Looking at him from in front, behind, or at the side, he is a grand-looking individual. His progeny are all large, well-formed and natural trotters.

The first ones looked at were Wanda, her full sister Solita, and her brother Rinconado, the latter two being in the Rinconado string of trotters now being handled by that knight of the sulky, M. H. McManus. We had heard of the similarity of these trotters and we wanted to satisfy ourselves. John Dexter stripped the game campaigner, Wanda, and we confess we never saw such an improvement in an animal. In every way she has filled out, her eyes look bright, her skin shines like polished rosewood, while the nervousness that was noticeable during the last circuit seems to have completely left her. She will go into the races this year in better fix than ever, and as her faithful attendant proudly replaced the blanket we congratulated him on his work with her. Mr. McManus led out Solita, the full sister, and Rinconado, the brother, and no other corroborative evidence to fully establish Wanda's breeding could be wished for than these two trotters; the gelding, especially, is like her in conformation, size, gait and disposition. Our correspondent last week "struck the nail on the head" when he wrote: "Every one who has seen them agrees that there can be no further doubt regarding Wanda's breeding, for every foal that is sired by Eros, 2:29½, out of Accident by Elmo, looks as much alike as peas in a pod, and no better evidence is necessary to substantiate the claim made, that Eros is the sire of Wanda, than this family." Mr. McManus believes that both of these are faster than Wanda was at their age.

In adjoining stalls to Eros were the bay fillies Donzella, out of Lady Pierce, a large fine-looking lassie; Willena, a bay filly, out of a Brigadier mare; she is a good one and has a head like Wanda Florin, a bay gelding out of an Elmo mare; this is a heavy-boned youngster that is faster than anyone would take him to be at first glance. In another row of stalls were a few more by Eros; one is a bay colt two years old that will pay for his training this year; then there were two yearlings out of two daughters of old Ida May that have just been taken in from the pasture; all of these Eros youngsters are being prepared for work on the track. Over in another portion of the grounds, are a few more by Eros; one is the bay gelding Daylight, 2:30. This fellow has been given very little work this year, as it was deemed best not to bang him over the roads in a business buggy—that was about the only training he received last year.

Premier, a dark gray three-year-old colt, out of Alice, by Nutwood, second dam by State of Maine, looks like a trotter, and if appearances are any criterion Mr. Vioget will have something to go to the races with when this one gets enough work. The colt that took our fancy is called Montrose out of Rose, by Erwin Davis. He is a three-year-old, a seal brown in color, with tan muzzle and flanks, and is a prototype of his sire in every way. He is as "pretty as a picture" and is noted for the same characteristics that the rest of the progeny of Eros are—splendid legs, well set under them; excellent backs, loins, shoulders and quarters, good strong joints and level heads.

There were several fine weanlings scattered among the various trainers' "strings" that are becoming noted for their many good qualities and all are living evidences of the assertion so often made that "when mares are bred to a stallion that is by a producing sire out of a producing dam the progeny is sure to trot and trot fast." We look for Eros to be among the greatest of all of Electioneer's sons.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The coming summer promises to be an exceptionally animated one in the turf circles here. The directors of the trotting club proposes to have that organization in the swim, as can be seen by the advertisement of stake races which appears in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

The first stock parade or exhibit under the auspices of the club will be held at Pierce Bros.' race track Saturday, April 16th. An invitation has been given every horseman in the county to bring his stock here and show them on that day, and the indications are good for one of the finest horse shows ever seen in Sonoma county.

Every man who has a good stallion, mare, gelding, filly or colt will be asked to bring it or them in, be assigned a place in the exhibit, and thus become identified with a movement that is sure to become an important one in the direction of revealing to the world the vast horse resources of Sonoma county. It is believed that all of the breeders will respond to the invitation given them in this matter and make this exhibition an unqualified success.

The club has opened yearling, two-year-old, three-year-old and three-minute stallion stakes to be trotted for sometime during the month of October. These stakes are open to all of the horses in this district, and in each class the club has added generous premiums. Our turfmen seemed determined that Santa Rosa shall enjoy that prominence in the trotting world to which her many splendid horses entitle her.

We were out to Pierce Bros.' track Sunday, and found things in good shape there. The track is in good condition for this time of the year, and the drivers will soon be making good use of it in the hard work of developing the speed in the favorites. And speaking of tracks reminds us that this is one of the best winter tracks in California. It can be drained with little difficulty, so that after a hard rain it requires but a short time to become dry and ready for use again.

There are many new trotters at the grounds this year, some of them being recent arrivals. From present indications it can be prophesied that the present season will be the most active one in the history of this course. Among the new arrivals at the stables is Electric Belle, a six-year-old Patchen mare, owned in San Francisco. She is in charge of Mart Rollins, and will be driven this season for a record.

Mr. Rollins has another valuable addition to his "string" in Alfred D. 6206, sired by Bonnie McGregor, first dam Jessie Logan, second dam Bessie H. Alfred D. is a four-year-old, has no record, but Mr. Rollins has orders to give him one this season, and he will obey them. Then there is the fine two-year-old filly by Mountain Boy out of a Milton Medium mare. She is owned by Charles Welby, will be bred to Elector, and Mr. Rollins will give her a mark this year. Mr. Rollins' great colt Red Chief is coming along finely, and in another year will be heard from.

Dr. Long, of Helena, Mont., has a good "string" here under the careful supervision of T. Cook, one of the best horsemen hereabouts. The gelding Hinda, by Montana Wilkes, dam by Lexington Golddust, will be sent to the front this year. He is three years old, a nice-gaited fellow, and shows up considerable speed. Wayno Wilkes, a promising three-year-old bay stallion sired by Montana Wilkes, dam by Del Gano, he by Dictator, is a good mover, and has the appearance of being "dead game." His second dam was Mary Eagle, dam of Ranchero.

In Dr. Long's list there is Jerome, four-year-old black stallion, sired by Montana Wilkes, and a full brother to Florida, 2:21¾ as a four-year-old. Jerome looks something like Direct. He has not been worked much, but has turned off quarters in thirty seconds, and Mr. Cook thinks he will get a low mark when he is put into training in his five-year-old form. A two-year-old, full brother to Wayno Wilkes, and a chestnut pacer, the latter ugly enough to be very fast, completed the list of Dr. Long's horses here. The Doctor has bought property here, and we are glad to know that he proposes to join the great Sonoma-county horse union.

John Pender, of Lodi, has sent his stable of valuable trotters here. They arrived here last Wednesday, and will be in charge of Lil March, one of our well-known trainers. That there must be some very superior ones in this stable is seen by the breeding of the different individuals. The head of the stud is Combination. Combination is eight years old, dark chestnut and 15¾ hands high. He was sired by Inca, he by Woodford Mambrino, 2:21½. The dam of Inca was Gretchen, also the dam of Del Sur, 2:24; Romero, 2:19¾; Sable, 2:30. The first dam of Combination is Kittie, by Irvington, full brother to Arthurton; the second dam by John Nelson; third dam by St. Clair. Combination is most happily named, for he seems to combine his individuality in many most excellent trotting qualities. He has never had a record, but will make a crack at the watch this year. He was raised by F. S. Malone, of San Francisco, and one of his colts has already gone within the thirty limit, we understand.

One of the raciest-looking young horses in the county is the two-year-old stallion F. S. Malone. He is a dark bay, owned by Mr. Pender, and is a son of Director Jr. His dam is Nellie by Kisbar, 2:27, he by Hambletonian 10. The second dam was by Pathfinder. Malone has just been introduced to the harness and sulky, and thus far his performances have been entirely satisfactory. Next to Malone stands a black yearling colt by Director Jr., first dam by Altamont, second dam by Mike. Near this one is a black filly, full sister to the one last described. A black filly by the illustrious Director, dam by Berlin, is the smallest individual in Mr. Pender's stalls. The price paid for the little one was not so insignificant, however, for she cost her owner an even thousand dollars.

Mr. Pender has some excellent brood mares. Maid of the Woods, a four-year-old, sired by Hambletonian Mambrino, dam Lady Wood by Rockwood, is a valuable matron. She is now in foal to old Director. Then there is the six-year-old Lorna H., now in foal to Easter Wilkes. The sire of Lorna H. was Brigadier, dam Dollie Varden by Montezuma. After Lorna H. comes a five-year-old chestnut mare, sired by Doncaster, dam by Rose's McClellan. This mare was stinted to Arthur Wilkes, and a fine colt is expected from the union. Mr. Pender also has a mare, four-year-old, by Dexter Prince out of the dam of Arab, and a filly by Director, but these had not arrived when we visited the stalls last Sunday.

Othello Replies to Hidalgo.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Hidalgo, in the Fresno Turf gets off the following:

My own idea of the matter is that if ever the Senator did sell a horse that he should have retained, it was some one of the sons of Beautiful Bells. And while Arion is unquestionably a game colt and a race trotter second to nothing ever seen of his age, his family is far from being a game one. Woodnut, brother to Arion's dam, was a very foul-gaited horse below 2:23, and as for Manon, his sister, she was a very bad quitter. Hence I do not think the Senator made any great mistake in selling Arion, more especially if he got a long price for him. He is a great colt in person, but he may not be able to reproduce himself.

Pfui! pfui! How long is it since every man on this Coast was crying down the Moors and Sultans as the rankest quitters on the Coast! How long since Stamboul's limit was set at 2:15 because he had not the necessary game inheritance to carry him at the speed he possessed to the end of the mile! How long (it is so long that some have forgotten it)—how long is it since George Wilkes was decried "a quitter?" That Woodnut was a foul-gaited horse below 2:23 is admitted; that Manette, the dam of Arion, would not trot at all, is admitted. Query: Did they inherit these traits? If they did how does it happen that Arion is the purest-gaited trotter known and so much the fastest colt of his age? Do all his illustrious qualities come from Electioneer, unaided and uncontaminated by other blood lines? Was not George Wilkes dubbed a failure in the stud until he struck the Mambrino Patchen and other families of Kentucky? Did not these Kentucky mares supply what was deficient and lacking in the mares heretofore covered by him? And has he not since then climbed so close to the top rung of the ladder that it seems no horse of his time but Electioneer will surpass him? Why then may not the Electioneer-Nutwood blood combination prove more potent, more speedy and gamer than the Electioneer–Beautiful Bells combine that Hidalgo claims Gov. Stanford should have retained? Has the latter shown anything superior to Daly's Hattie D. in her capabilities or to Arion's performance?

OTHELLO.

Durfee Answers.

DEAR SIR:—In reply to the article headed "A Challenge," and published in your issue of last Saturday, I beg leave to reply as follows:

In the first place the article seems to be very effervescent in its character and wholly uncalled for.

Secondly—His yearling and two-year-old trotting propositions are, to say the least, very puerile; yes, even ridiculous, because I could not accept them for the very reason that I do not own a McKinney colt, of any age, and Mr. Willet knows it.

Thirdly—I will make a proposition that is entirely practicable, and Mr. Willet will have to either accept or retire hermit-like to his home in silence forever.

I will trot McKinney against Mr. Willett's Silkwood for $5,000 in the month of October—mile heats, 3 in 5—money to be put up as soon as my challenge is accepted; the race to come off over any good track; the race to be made "play or pay," each to select a judge and the two selected to name the third gentleman to act with them.

Now, if this proposition is of too high flavor for Mr. Willet's taste and appetite, I will name another which may better suit his palate, viz.:

I will trot McKinney against Silkwood for $30 and gate money this fall after my return from the races, the stakes and gate money to be given to the Orphans' home or the home for the feeble-minded; and there is no doubt in my way of thinking but what a large number of would-be horsemen, were they properly examined, would be fit candidates for the last-named institution.

Lastly and in conclusion, let me add that McKinney holds the world's four-year-old stallion record, and has proved himself a remarkable racehorse; and why his produce should not trot and show as fast as that of Silkwood, or any other horse, I cannot in any way figure out.

Thanking you for the use of space in your valuable paper, and which is ever the champion of fair play, believe me, sir, yours very truly.—Chas. A. Durfee, in Los Angeles Herald.

Santa Rosa Trotting Horse Club.

A meeting of the directors of the Santa Rosa Trotting Horse Club was held at Capt. Guy E. Grosse's office one evening last week, President Overton in the chair.

On motion, all those who had paid their initiation fee were formally declared members of the club.

On motion, it was decided to give a stock parade April 16th, and the president was authorized to appoint a committee of three to make arrangements therefor.

The president appointed as such committee G. O. Richards, J. W. Ragsdale and John McMinn, Jr.

It was moved, seconded and carried that a committee of three be appointed to arrange for a roadster race to be given on the day of the stock parade, and President Overton appointed W. H. Lumsden, G. E. Stone and C. C. Belden to constitute the committee.

The matter of giving colt stakes came up, and was generally discussed. W. P. Fine was present, and being called upon gave the directors some good pointers in regard to the plan.

It was finally decided to arrange stakes for yearlings, two-year-olds, three-year-olds and stallions without records, open to all horses in the dirtrict, and a committee consisting of W. H. Lumsden, C. C. Belden and G. O. Richards was appointed to formulate a programme for the same. The committee was instructed to be ready to report last Saturday evening, at which time the directors met again to consider them.

The California State Floral Society has arranged a very attractive programme for its spring floral exhibition to be held at the Mechanics' Pavilion May 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th. A promenade concert will be given every afternoon and evening, for which the best musical talent in the city has been engaged. The flower shows given by this society have become so popular and the exhibitors so numerous that no ordinary hall could be found to do justice the lovely floral displays. Nearly $300 are offered in premiums, and judging by the demand for, and interest taken in the premium, each award will be hotly contested.

While Pilot Jr. may not have paced any, he was by a horse that did pace, and his grandam was also a pacer, yet we have seen people who would like to convey the idea that he was not a pacing-bred horse.

Once upon a time, which was several years ago, Tom Crowder had a son whose actions were of such a character that his owners made a wager that he could beat any horse in the world either on the pace or trot.

One of the best-shaped foals we have seen this year is at B. C. Holly's stock farm, near Flosden. She is by imp. Brutus out of Ninena, by Jim Brown. In color she is bright chestnut, with two white hind legs, star and snip. Mr. Holly is very proud of this little miss.

N. E. May, Pacific Coast agent for Spelterine, the famous hoof stuffing, is quite busy at present answering letters and filling orders for this famous article. No stock farm, livery or training stable should be without it. In the East it has a large sale, and has met with the greatest success.

Myers & Myers of Piedmont, have booked their Happy Medium mare, first dam by Almont 33; second dam by Mambrino Patchen; third dam by Mambrino Chief, to Richard's Elector. They have also sent a full sister to Gen. Withers' fine young stallion Maximus to Richard's Elector.

The members of Santa Clara Agricultural Society are worthy of all praise for the manner in which they have kept their beautiful race track and grounds this year. The large number of horses, young and old, that are domiciled in the box stalls there is unprecedented in the history of this famous course.

Guide, 2:16½, is among the stallions whose services are most in demand this year by the owners of highly-bred mares, and the limit placed on the number of outside mares that he will be allowed to serve has been nearly reached. Mr. Hatch will breed about twenty-five of his own mares to Guide this season.

Matthew Crow, of Menlo Park, has a number of well-bred mares which were bred to Eros, 2:29½ last year, and, as the foaling time approaches, he is, like all other breeders, getting a "leetle anxious" about what the youngsters will be. Mr. Crow is an authority on equine topics, and takes delight in the study.

It is stated that Gen. Owen Williams intends proposing that the date from which horses take their age in England be altered from January 1st to March 1st. This would appear to be the outcome of the point so freely advanced during the Ormonde controversy, that horses foaled late have very seldom been roarers.

Governor Markham, owing to the change in the law regarding appointments in the different agricultural districts, was compelled to divide the selection of directors between San Mateo and Santa Clara, and instead of reappointing D. J. Murphy, of Santa Clara, this year, he appointed Thomas Hinds, of Redwood City.

A. F. Middaugh, of Del Norte, Colorado, recently purchased in Iowa the three-year-old stallion Cedar Hoover 16,646, by Red Cedar 1707, by Red Wilkes; dam Kate Barr, by Broughton 1676. Cedar Hoover will be the premier stallion on Mr. Middaugh's fine breeding establishment, which is one of the most complete in Colorado.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of Fred Loeber's closing-out sale. There are some of the finest-looking individuals in this collection that can be found in this State. For gameness, size, solid color, good disposition, splendid, hard, flint-like legs, the Whippletons are a grand family.

San Mateo Stock Farm is the home of some of the finest young trotters in the State. They are looking and working well. When J. A. Goldsmith recovers sufficiently to get up behind them, it would not surprise us if this well-known farm again comes to the front as the birthplace of a few more record breakers.

The Blood Horse Association Directors, at their meeting of last Monday, decided to have seventeen days of racing, with four races every day except Saturday, when there will be five. The moss-covered system of entering horses in ordinary purse races has been put aside, and hereafter the entries will be made on the night preceding the run for the purses.

I understand, says a Tennessee correspondent, that M. C. Campbell, of Spring Hill, Tenn., will send his colt Mercury, by Sidney, to Millard Sanders, at Pleasanton, Cal., and that he will be trained by that driver for a fast mark this year. It is said Mercury is the best-looking son of Sidney on this side of the mountains, and has given evidence of great speed.

Between seventy and eighty acres of land lying on the line of the Winthrop branch of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad in Winthrop have been bonded by a syndicate for a race track. The plans have been drawn for a mile track with everything necessary to a complete racing park that shall be to Boston what Sheepshead Bay is to New York.

Secretary of the Navy Tracy, who previous to his active participation in national politics was a trotting-horse breeder of considerable repute, owning the stallions Kentucky Wilkes and Mambrino Dudley, is again picking up a few choice brood mares, and the chances are that before long he will again be actively engaged in blending blood lines of the different trotting families.

Last Monday C. W. Williams telegraphed to Budd Doble that he had offered $10,000 for a best-three-in-five heat race between Axtell and Allerton, the winner to take the entire purse. Mr. Williams asked for no entrance fee. As Mr. Doble has said that Axtell would be started several times the coming season it is therefore probable that the two great stallions will meet.

News comes from Maine that C. H. Nelson has engaged A. M. Rathburn of Grand Rapids, Mich., to drive Nelson 2:10, the coming season. Mr. Rathburn has been in Waterville about two weeks. Meanwhile Mr. Nelson is selling off his stock of horses, and says they are too much trouble for him. The belief is that he will quit the sulky and become a gentleman of leisure.

Campbell's Electioneer, 2:17¼, was last Monday sold at the Woodard & Shanklin sale, Lexington, Ky., to J. J. Conley, for Boston parties, for $15,100—just about $10,000 short of the sum he should bring. This horse is six years old, bay in color, by Electioneer, dam, Edith Carr, by Clark Chief 89, second dam Easter Carr, by Carr's Edwin Forrest, son of Edwin Forrest 49.

A suit that recently came to an end in St. Louis and which had for his closing chapter the payment of $538.75 in the way of costs, was originally brought for $18, the value of a colt sold by the plaintiff to the defendant. When the attorneys' fees on both sides are added to the costs the amount expended in the litigation will come to more than $1,500. The colt died before the suit was ended.

J. H. Walker, of Wildflower, was in Selma to-day. He found a letter awaiting him in the postoffice from a party in Los Angeles offering to back his (Walker's) horse, April Fool, against a horse in the southern part of the State for $2,000. Mr. Walker wrote him to make the match and he would come on with his horse. He thinks April Fool can beat any horse in the world.—Selma Irrigator.

A. H. Moore, of Philadelphia, has sold to W. C. France & Son, Lexington, Commoneer, brown stallion, foaled 1886, by Electioneer, first dam Molly Cobb, by General Benton; second dam, American Girl, by Toronto Sontag; third dam, Laura Keene, by Hambletonian 10; fourth dam, by Exton Eclipse; fifth dam Lady Marvin, by Young Traveler; sixth dam, by Sea Gull; price, $12,500.

At the Valensin farm there is a light bay colt called Odd Fellow that will bear close watching this fall. He is by Sidney out of a mare by Valensin, second dam Lightfoot, by Flaxtail; third dam, Fanny Fern, by Irwin's Tuckahoe. Every one who has had the pleasure of seeing him trot at the farm comes away believing they have seen the most phenomenal ten-months-old colt that ever was foaled.

George Garrett, Milwaukee, Wis., has just paid Josslyn & Caruthers $2,500 for the trotter Josslyn, 2:20. The proper name of this horse is J. R., and he was sired by Richards' Elector. He is a bay gelding, and was brought from California a couple of years ago in company with two others, and did the grand ringing act through the North and West until Garrity and his gang who handled the horses, were caught and arrested.

C. W. Williams, of Independence, Ia., is certainly enterprising, original and game. Now he has set the trotting world agog with the most valuable futurity stakes ever made available to breeders. It is most appropriately called the Progressive Futurity, for foals of 1892, to be trotted in 1894. To this stake the Independence Trotting Association will add $10,000. Mr. Williams predicts the value of the stake will be over $100,000.

The horse Post Odds, alias Caddo, the latest "ringer," is branded upon both shoulders and hips with a horseshoe. The brands are quite prominent, and he was paraded before the grand stand Thursday, last week. He was then turned over to the Chief of Police of East St. Louis, Ill. No one has come to claim him, and he is held as an astray. If he is not claimed by a certain advertised time he will be sold at public auction for his bill. The Jockey Club ruled off "for life the owners, Quinn, Huff & Co., and all horses owned by them." Post Odds is owned by Brannon Bros., who conducted the Tanner-Polk Badget fraud race.

THE Murphy boys have the old gelding Hello (by Shannon out of Marshra, by Planet) at Bay District track trying to get him into racing shape again. Hello has been a stranger to our race courses for two years past, but the last season he was with us it took a good one to beat him about seven-eighths of a mile. He covered that distance in 1:28. Should he get back into "form" it will take a honey-cooler to head him. Hello is now eight years old.

"ANOTHER kite-shaped track at Louisville, Ky. The new firm of live-stock brokers, Messrs. Chambers & Duvall, of Louisville, Ky., are pledged by quite a number of breeders in their section to co-operate with them and build a new track in Jefferson county, near the city. Ground, grand-stand and building of the track at an outlay of at least $100,000. They propose to be liberal in their purses in 1893 with very small entry fee." So writes a correspondent.

THE American Trotter celebrated its first birthday in a most becoming way—by increasing its size to forty-four pages and by publishing a magnificent full-page engraving of its enterprising owner, C. W. Williams. The paper, notwithstanding the fact that it has been in existence but twelve months, is already in the front rank of turf journals, and typographically it has few superiors in America. We congratulate the Trotter on its splendid appearance and popularity.

THE McAllister-street cable cars now run right to the Bay District race track. Jim Dustin says he intends opening a special entrance for the public on D street, and making an asphaltum path therefrom to the grand stands past the stables. The extension of the Geary-street line will interfere with the road leading to the old entrance at the back of the stands, and the public is sure to prefer the direct cable line to any line transferring on to the objectionable steam dummies.

GEORGE V. HANKINS, the Chicago turfman, has purchased of Lord Randolph Churchill, London, the bay colt Simon Renard, foaled 1889, bred by Sir Tatton Sykes, sired by St. Simon and out of Blue Rock (dam of St. Simon of the Rock), by The Hermit; second dam, Stockdove, by Stockwell; third dam Beatrice, by Voltigeur, etc. The colt will be sent to this country at once, he having been entered in the Derby and Hesing Stakes of 1892 to be run for at Garfield Park, Chicago.

F. C. TALBOT has recently purchased of H. A. Mayhew, Niles, Cal., the brown yearling filly Hyack, by Guide, 2:16¼, out of the Travis mare, by Billy Hayward; second dam the Ransome mare, said to be by Vermont Hero. Price, $1,250. This is one of the most promising trotters in the State, and we congratulate Mr. Talbot on securing such a jewel. If he keeps on capturing trotters of her stamp we shall look forward to some "phenomenals" appearing in the Talbot string before long.

HORSEMEN have paid a distinguished compliment to Secretary McIntyre, of the Brooklyn Jockey Club. Not a single declaration has been made from the Maturity Handicap, the adjustment of the weights being satisfactory to every man whose horse was handicapped. For this reason the event ought to be one of the best contests of the year, and if there should happen to be a close finish among four or five of the horses, then Mr. McIntyre will have every reason to feel proud.

ROBERT STEEL, Cedar Park Stock Farm, Philadelphia, Pa., has recently purchased fifteen fillies, from two to four years of age, by Nutbourne (brother to Nutwood, 2:18¼), out of choice mares, intending to breed them to Woodnut, 2:16½; Epaulet, 2:18, and Pedlar, 2:27¾. Mr. Steel has recently sold Hollywood, bay colt, 2, by Woodnut, dam Fascination, by Santa Claus, and four mares bred to Woodnut—one by Electioneer, one by Piedmont, one by Guy Wilkes, and one by Nutwood.

G. W. SHERWOOD, proprietor of the Sherwood Stock Farm, Sheldon, Iowa, has arrived and is visiting the various stock farms in this State. The stock on this gentleman's place is all gilt-edged, if one is to judge by the catalogue. The premier stallions are Woodford Wilkes, Lockhart, 2:14¾, and Memory. There are also some 125 head of stallions, broodmares, colts and fillies, and every fashionable trotting family in America is represented. We bespeak for this progressive breeder a cordial welcome.

DR. M. W. HICKS writes us from North Vernon, Ind., that he arrived safely with his horses—Prompter, Sterling and Durfee. He had a hard trip of ten days, and says that he is already "homesick" for the glorions climate of California. The weather there is not quite so pleasant as it is on the Pacific Coast; in fact, the storms and blizzards that have been prevalent there of late must have made a large number of our California friends "homesick." We hope to hear good reports from the Doctor while he is living in the "Hoosier State."

THE abolition of the system of giving free tickets of admission to ladies who wish to attend the Blood Horse races is a bad move, and the association will find it out very quickly. The fair sex at race meetings is an undoubted magnet, and hundreds of gentlemen would attend if they were allowed free tickets for their wives, daughters or fiances that would not go otherwise. Col. D. M. Burns ably championed the cause of the ladies at last Tuesday night's meeting of the Blood Horse Directors, but was voted down by his short-sighted and ungallant fellow-officials.

THE Ryan brothers, of Miles City, Mont., are training a lot of fast runners to carry the green colors through the Montana circuit this season. Among them are: Rolla H., by Pantaloon, dam Gold Leaf by Bullion; Kathleen, by imported Keene, dam Calamity, by King Lear; Rosemary (sister to Zillah), by Lucifer, dam Susie Mariner, by Pat Malloy; Spoon, by Story (sire of Montana), dam Miss Mungo, by St. Mungo; Berrisford, by imported Keene, dam Gamma, by Darwin Belle; and last but not least, the crack-brained flyer Al Watts, by Pantaloon, dam Glance by Marion.

L. A. DAVIES, the owner of Roy Wilkes, 2:08¼, has scored first blood in his law suit with the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association. He has sued the association to recover $500, won by his horse, but which was withheld as an offset against a fine of $1,000 imposed on Davies. The association plead that the fine was legally imposed by the National Trotting Association, and that the purse is therefore properly withheld. Davies demurred that the fine was due to the National Association and not to the defendant association, which therefore had no right to withhold the purse. The court sustained this contention, but gave the defendant leave to amend its plea.

JOSEPH GRANT, manager of Theodore Winters' stable, has been in town for several days. Mr. Grant declares all the horses to be in elegant shape to take part in the campaign at the East. In the string is a Joe Hooker two-year-old which he thinks well enough of to match against any two-year-old in America at a mile or little over, 100 pounds up, for $1,000 or any part of the money. As we have heard of a number of world-beaters in the California ranks thus early in the season, Mr. Grant's offer is not likely to stand long.

THE partnership which has existed for nearly a quarter of a century between Col. W. B. Hundley and W. G. Preuitt in the breeding and racing of fine horses, has been dissolved. Col. Hundley retires, Mr. Preuitt taking the ranch and the stock. The stable at present includes such well-known horses as Nevada, Montana and X., besides two Pioneer colts and one Derby colt. Mr. Preuitt, who is the well known and popular secretary of the Montana Board of Live Stock Commissioners, will train his stables for the Montana circuit this season. He has engaged Bob Smith as trainer.

TWO WELL-KNOWN old California sports died in this cit, last Monday—Ned Whipple and Abner Gentry. The former was a brother to Steve M. Whipple, the famous horsemany and was at one time a captain on steamers plying on the Sacramento river. Abner Gentry was a Southern man, and was once very wealthy. He lived in Virginia City at the height of the great mining boom on the Comstock, and had a wide acquaintance on the coast. He was stricken with paralysis five days before his death. Mr. Gentry lost a colossal fortune in South American mining ventures. He was generous to a fault, and never refused pecuniary assistance to any deserving acquaintance.

R. PORTER ASHE, owner of the Maltese Villa Stock Farm, is enthusiastic over the outlook for 1891. "I have my grand mare Geraldine," said he. "She is in great shape. Queen Alta will make the best of the three-year-olds stretch their necks, while Dinero and Paisano have filled out wonderfully. Two-year-old stakes will be a great feature at not only the forthcoming local spring races but in the East, and I own five as promising two-year-olds by Alta as ever looked through a bridle. All my horses are working at the Modesto track. Mike Kelly is training and Mike Hennessey riding them in their work, and I do not wish to employ a better and cleverer pair of steady lads."

A LITTLE over a year ago Frank Rockefeller sent the old white mare Effie, by Pilot Jr., to California to be bred to Electricity. At the time she was in foal to Haroldmont. The old mare was accompanied by F. W. Bell's black filly, by Brown Wilkes, out of Effie, in foal to Nugget. This mare was also booked to Electricity. On the arrival at Palo Alto the two mares dropped colts, Effie's being a brown. The pair now yearlings, arrived from the Pacific Coast the other day, while their dams are in foal to Electricity. Mr. Rockefeller made Senator Stanford a present of Effie, reserving her foal, while Mr. Bell will leave his mare in California until she foals, and will breed her either to Stamboul or Guy Wilkes.—American Sportsman.

TO AFFORD some idea how the relative difference in the length of the forearm and cannon in the forelegs of noted trotters affects their gaits, some examples of these might prove profitable. They are from careful measurements taken by S. T. Helm. George Wilkes had a forearm of 20 inches and a cannon of 10½. He was neither conspicuous for much knee action nor for little. He was a medium model in this respect. Governor Sprague was 21 forearm and 11 cannon. Florida was 11 and 21. He had a very fine movement of the knee, not excessive either way. Volunteer was 21 and 11¼. Hambletonian had 20½ and 11½. An increase of knee action over the others would be looked for in his action. The Pilots had long cannons and short forearms, and they were correspondingly high knee actors.

THE stockholders of the Kern County Fair Grounds Association met on Saturday night for the purpose of receiving reports from the attorneys regarding the matter of incorporation, and also a report from the committee selected to secure a site. There were present at the meeting W. H. Scribner, J. W. Wiley and H. A. Blodget. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved The Committee on Site then reported progress and asked for instructions as to negotiations with the land company regarding the leasing of the land owned by that company just west of the Philo Jewett place. The committee was instructed to secure the best possible terms for lease or purchase of the grounds desired. The meeting then adjourned until next Saturday night.

THE following programme is announced for the spring meeting of the San Benito County Agricultural Association, on Friday and Saturday, April 29th and 30th: First—Pacing, 3 in 5, for all horses that have never beaten 2:40. Second—Saddle-Horse race, half-mile and repeat, for horses used for that purpose only. Horses in this race will be required to be ridden with a Spanish bit and saddle. Third—Trotting, 3 in 5, for named horses. This race will be for horses in the three minute class. Fourth—Trotting, free for all, 3 in 5. Fifth—Running, half-mile and repeat. Sixth—Buggy horse race, 3 in 5, owners to drive to cart. Entries in the first, fourth and fifth races will be allowed from Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties, and Gilroy township, the other races being for the San Benito county horses only.

WHILE admiring Dawn, 2:18¾, at the stallion exhibition last Saturday, in San Jose, we overheard some horsemen conversing about him. One of the gentlemen was a noted driver, and his remarks were so plain we could not resist jotting them down. "Look at that Dandy of the Turf, Dawn, 2:18¾. In my opinion, he is one of the best sons of the great Nutwood. Why, at his age his sire had nothing in the list. Dawn has four at least. This fellow's dam, Countess, is also the dam of four that have trotted better than 2:26½, and no two of these trotters were sired by the same horse. Dawn has the same mark, 2:18¾, as Nutwood; he was always a faster horse, and has shown a rate of speed at his age that was never equaled by any other horse at that time. That man, Agnew, who is driving him has some youngsters on his ranch, I am told, that will make some of the Wilkes and Electioneer enthusiasts keep quiet. By the way, there is another colt yet to go to the credit of Dawn in place of that horse Nuthurst in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, and that is Dot, 2:29½. I know that many of the Eastern papers place Nuthurst to his credit, but I believe it is a mistake. I do not own one of Dawn's get, but I wish I did. There are few Nutwoods in the East that trot as true and perfect as he, and none will make as good a sire."

CLARA, dam of Dexter, was sold once for $13, if report is correct. She stood about 14.2. The dam of Jack was sold for $40, after foaling that speedy trotter. She was a mere pony in size. Williams paid $75 for the dam of Axtell (2:12). She could trot about a four-minute gait. Rysdyk's Hambletonian and his dam changed hands once for $125. Hambletonian was then about four-months old. The dam of Nelly W. (2:14¼), was offered for $125 when a two-year-old. The dam of Ralph Wilkes was sold a few years since for $110. Maud S. (2:08¼) was sold from Woodburn Farm for $250. Nutwood (2:18¾) was sold at auction when a two-year-old for $170.

THE Ocean View Stable of "Pedigree" Brown at Bay District track ought to get some of the money this season, if looks go for anything. In this stable are Folly, Annie Lewis and Wildwood. Folly has developed into a strapping big mare, and from her conformation we should judge she would like a good, long road. Annie Lewis is well-rounded, compact and very handsome. She was coming into fine form when the season closed last year, and from her breeding and appearance she should be a frequent winner during the year 1892. Great things are expected of Wildwood, and as he was better than either of the above last year and is bred to "stay the route," he should prove even more than a "bread-winner." We should say he ought to get some of the cake.

BAY DISTRICT track is now beginning to ring with the hoof-beats of the blue-blooded galloper. The first string to come in was the one of four horses handled by John Appleby, the exceedingly clever conditioner of racehorses. Sidney Ashe owns two of them—the two-year-old bay colt Ghost Dance, by Alta out of a Wildidle mare, and a strapping bay colt, two years old, by Jocko (son of Cariboo and Reply, by Enquirer), dam Minuet, by Norfolk. This colt broke Jockey George Collins' shoulder last week while indulging in some buck-jumping. The others in Appleby's hands are a staunch, compact dark bay three-year-old filly, by Tyrant, dam Lady Leinster, and a light bay four-year-old colt by John Happy, dam Lady Flush.

TO HALTER a colt, take a rope about thirty feet long, or longer, double it in the middle, drop the center, or where it is doubled, over the colt's rump, down a little below where the breeching rests. Slip the hand back on the double rope, a little back of the withers, and there tie a knot. Now bring the two loose ends of the rope, one on each side of the colt's neck, and through the ring or chin-strap of the halter. Step in front of the colt, pull lightly on the ropes, saying: "Come here." The colt will at once step forward, and, by proper management, in a very short time be taught to lead anywhere. When first tying him in the stall run the ropes through the stall ring and tie the halter-strap to them, so that if he backs up he will draw up the ropes, and he will learn to stand hitched without pulling on the halter.

MONBARS, 2:16½ at two years, will remain in California to make a season at Pleasanton Stock Farm. He will be booked to fifteen outside mares at $300 for the season. Monbars has the distinction of trotting faster in a race than any two-year-old that ever existed, and besides this was the greatest money-winner among all the horses of his age. His season will be a short one (March 15th to May 15th), and at the sum asked for his services there should be no trouble experienced in filling his book. Money will be refunded where mares do not prove in foal. Monbars is by Eagle Bird, 2.21 (son of Jay Bird, sire of Allerton, 2:09¼), dam Lady Maud, 2:18¼, by General Knox 140. It will thus be seen that he is from a fast sire and dam and from great producing families on both sides of the house.

ALL farmers who advertise pasture lands and are seeking to have horses sent to their place for the summer should be very particular to examine every animal, and if any signs of disease are noticeable do not turn the afflicted ones out with your stock. The other day we called the attention of a farmer to the fact that the horse he was leading behind his wagon was afflicted with glanders, and while receiving the thanks of the gentlemen we could not help thinking of the "enormity of the crime" the man who owned the animal was guilty of if he knowingly sent for that innocent farmer to lead that horse into his pasture among his own stock. Glanders is prevalent at all times of the year, and a man who allows his horse to drink out of an old horse trough on the side of the road runs a terrible risk. If our readers have any doubts of the existence of glanders in this city or in any large city where no one is authorized to destroy every case that is seen, we ask them to ask any qualified veterinarian if the facts are not as we state them.

ROSEMONT (2:18) and Starlight (2:26½) arrived at the Forbes Farm last Sunday morning. With them came two fillies which Mr. Forbes has just added to his superb collection They were bred by Miller & Sibley at Franklin, Pa., and both were got by the dead St. Bel (2:24½). Ruth Cleveland is a two-year-old, out of Nubietta, by Nutwood (2:18¾), and she from Bonnie Wilkes (dam of Bon Bon, 2:26), by George Wilkes. Bonnie Wilkes took a record herself of 2:29½, and her dam, Bettie Viley, was by Bob Johnson Jr., thoroughbred, grandson of Boston. Scotia is a yearling and from a well-bred daughter of Sultan (2:24). Both of these fillies are described by Mr. Forbes as being beautifully gaited, and the two-year-old is thought to be a filly of rare promise. Six of the Forbes Farm mares were shipped West Monday, and will be bred to Allerton (2:09¼) and Axtell (2:12).—American Horse Breeder.

AT A meeting of the Directors of the Golden Gate Fair Association last Saturday, W. M. Kent presided. C. S. Crittenden, Eli S. Dennison, P. E. Dalton, Alex. P. Waugh, Charles S. and H. W. Neal were present. After it had been decided to hold the fair and races in the week commencing August 15th, which relegates the Napa and Petaluma fairs to one week later in their dates on the central circuit, it was ordered that the Speed and Programme Committee should close the colt stakes on May 1st. Then the Directors were waited on by several gentlemen from the Alameda County World's Fair Committee, who asked that a portion or all of the $3,500 which is given to the association by the State for the encouragement of agriculture be handed over to the World's Fair Committee for the purpose of holding a preliminary exhibition in Oakland of county products, so that the local fruit-growers might determine what exhibits to send to Chicago next year. As racing is all that has saved the association from financial ruin in the past, it is needless to say that the proposition of the World's Fair Committee was laid on the table. It is pretty certain to remain there, too.

THE GUN.

The Alameda Gun Club.

On Saturday last the Alameda Gun Club which has been famous at the trap in this vicinity for years met at Oakland Shooting Park to open the season's events for that organization. The day was lovely, just calm enough to be pleasant and not assist the birds too much in their flight, in fact they did not need much assistance for they were a lively lot and kept the best shots busy to make fair records.

As will be seen from the scores below there appeared a large number of gentlemen at this shoot who were not at the traps last year and the record shows some of them to be skillful in the use of the gun. Mr. F. B. Norton did some splendid work, his only escaping bird being one which none, or but few sportsmen "have taken out a license to kill" as the current comment runs.

Mr. A. F. Adams also lost but one bird, killing all of his remainiug ones in good form, with but two exceptions, with the first barrel near the traps.

Mr. W. W. Haskill lost but two birds grassing the balance in fine form.

"Slade" lost two birds dead out of bounds and another escaped. Mr. C. M. Osborn made a similar record.

The membership scoring eight birds out of twelve contained many very good shots, and the number of birds which fell dead out of bounds to their credit would have placed them well up in the front rank. Mr. H. B. Houghton, the genial Secretary of the club, was very unfortuaate in this respect.

Mr. W. E. Mayhew lost his second bird by neglecting to use his second barrel after knocking it down with first.

Mr. J. O. Cadman lost two birds dead out of bounds as did also Mr. L. Ph. Bolander.

Dr. Bell was trying the effect of this 16-guage quail gun on the pigeons, but found that the doses were too much of the homœpathic order, especially on swift drivers, and that the birds in general required more heroic treatment.

In the distribution of absolute prizes it was found that Mr. Norton and Mr. Adams were a tie for first. On the "toss-up" Adams won first choice and took the silver match-safe from among the prizes offered, Mr. Norton selecting a cleaning apparatus and leather belt. The third prize, a neat leather cartridge box, went to Mr. Haskell. The fourth, a silver footrule, went to Mr. Osborn, while "Slade" took a unique locket made out of a silver dollar.

Pools were then indugled in until the birds were used up, and at a late hour the final contingent of the sportsmen present returned to the city.

The State Sportsmen's Association.

What are the objects of the California State Sportsmen's Association? For what purpose was it formed and what good does it expect to accomplish? Why should I become a member of it and should I do so what will it advantage me?

These are some of the questions which are very properly asked of the officers and membership of this Association.

To reply intelligently to these questions it becomes necessary to look back over the records of this Association for a number of years and re-collect the items of merit performed by and under the management of this body.

It is safe to say that the first genuine effort to enact a proper code of laws looking to the protection of fish and game in California was made by and under the direction of this Association. Years ago when Mr. Austin B. Sperry, deceased, was president of this body a presistent effort was made, in which the above lamented gentleman was materially aided and assisted in the work by Mr. Crittenden Robinson, the present president of the Association, which resulted in great good. By reason of the prosecutions inaugurated by these gentlemen under the direction of the Association the laws in this behalf were first brought into repute. This period of activity lasted for several years but finally dropped into disuse. It was determined at the last annual meeting of the Association held at the Palace Hotel in this city on last September to revive this important feature of work and to become once more an active factor in enforcing due observance as may be of the laws touching upon the subject of fish and game. Elsewhere in this issue will be found the official announcement of the Association to the effect that it will prosecute free of charge to informants any person or persons who may be shown to be guilty of violating the game and fish laws of the State. It is not the intention of the Association to usurp or take the place of the legally constituted authorities of the State in this behalf but rather to investigate all cases submitted to it and whenever sufficient proof is found to warrant an attempt at conviction that the Association will actively co-operate with the authorities in an attempt to enforce the provisions of the law to the end that they shall become efficient for the purposes for which these laws were enacted. All communications touching this matter and calling attention to violations of the laws with proof touching the same should be addressed to Crittenden Robinson, President of the Association, at 24 Fourth Street or C. W. Kyle Secretary, 313 Bush Street, San Francisco.

(Concluded.

A few days before the expected return of Captain Anderson a grand hunting and fishing expedition was decided upon. All except those who were needed to take care of the camp participated.

Three parties were formed—one to go down the creek to where it joined another tributary of the Gila, for the purpose of fishing; a second to go into the mountains eastward; and a third to scour the hills and valleys to the west and north.

I joined the third party. It was my ambition to kill a turkey, and they were plentiful in the sylvan hills.

An early start was made, each party taking its separate course. As soon as the woods were fairly entered, the party separated, each following his own bent, and I was left alone. Soon the reports of rifles were heard, showing that the sport had commenced; but, for the time being, I had lost all interest in the sport; in shooting and killing. I was absorbed in admiration of the beauty of the environment; the sweet solemnity of the woods; the delicate softness and freshness of the morning air, which stirred just enough to faintly fan the cheek and gently sway the sprays and make the foliage feebly flutter; the rays of the morning sun, shimmering aslant through boughs, twigs and foliage, and sifting down a subdued, solemn light that gathered the vari-tinted hues of the leaves of the forest, reminding one of the light in some vast cathedral.

I was very suddenly and effectually awakened from my day-dream. While passing an over-hanging rock, close to which grew a large tree, and, in a dreamy sort of way, looking out for a turkey, I was startled by a savage growl, and from beneath the overhang of the rock out rushed a huge, brown bear. He ran past me not ten feet away, and rushed down the hill, growling furiously, and was soon lost to sight. It never occurred to me that I had a rifle until the bear was out of sight.

I had disturbed his slumbers and he my reveries, but neither seemed to think of resenting it; each was glad to be relieved of the other's presence. It is hard to say which was the more frightened—bear or man. I was never so scared in my life. It made me weak, and sitting down on the trunk of a fallen tree, I shook with a buck-ague-fit, and it took me nearly an hour to recover my equilibrium.

I don't think I am a coward, for I have passed through many dangers without tremor of nerve, and been frightened where there was no danger. After all, courage is not inherent, but the result of conditions. Under certain conditions all men are brave, while under other conditions all are cowards; the question of danger has nothing to do with it. Men will grow panicky and get frightened where there is no danger, nor any reason to believe that danger impends, while, in the presence of real danger, they will be as firm as rocks and brave as lions.

After pulling myself together I started again in quest of turkeys. I was not looking for other game, but I kept a weather eye out for bears, and it would have given me infinite pleasure to send a bullet through the heart of the beast that scared me so badly.

While ascending a slight ridge I heard the peculiar kieup, kieup; kieup of a gobbler, that seemed to come from the opposite side of the ridge. Creeping cautiously forward to the top of the rise, I saw, just beyond it, as fine a flock of bronze turkeys as ever gladdened the eye of sportsman. Selecting the one that appeared the largest, I drew bead, taking no chance of a fancy shot, but aiming at the butt of his wings. He stood with erected head, facing the flock, and looked as proud as a major representing the colonel on dress parade; but at the crack of my rifle he groveled in the dust.

Before I could insert another cartridge the flock was out of sight and I got no more shots; but when I saw the size of the turkey I had killed I did not regret it, for two would have been too much to carry. The old Colonial Governor of Pennsylvania would not have said of my turkey what he said of his: "A very inconvenient bird; too much for one and not enough for two." My turkey would have furnished a meal for a dozen hungry men. When weighed he turned the scale at thirty-two pounds.

I was always diffident about telling the size of the turkeys in that region, but since that time many have been killed of much larger size. A short time ago one was killed in the Mongolian mountains that weighed forty-nine pounds.

Though early in the day I had had enough of hunting. To confess the truth, the scare that that bear gave me had made me nervous, and I caught myself watching for bears and Indians at every step; so I shouldered my turkey and returned to camp. I didn't indulge in revery, nor study the beauties of Nature much on the return trip.

I was the first to arrive in camp but the others, soon after, commenced straggling in by ones and twos and threes, all loaded down with game except those who had killed so much that they couldn't pack it and had come to camp to get mules to pack it in. Before sunset all had returned and all the game was in. It was a sight to behold. There were three bears, a brown, a cinnamon and a black; nine deer, five antelope and twenty-seven wild turkeys, all of them big fellows, some of them larger than mine. There were also quantities of smaller game; grouse, quail, wild pigeons, squirrels, rabbits, etc., with the skins of two wolves, two foxes and a mountain lion. The fishing party had had equally good luck and brought in as many fish as they could carry. That evening many a story of hunting and adventure and hair-breadth escapes was retailed around the camp fire; but all were fatigued and early sought the repose of their blankets.

The next day was devoted to feasting. There were good cooks in the command and they volunteered their services in getting a good dinner. They prepared dishes that would have tickled the palate of a sybarite, amongst others an immense turkey pot pie, or, to speak more correctly, several small ones, for we had no cooking untensil that would hold above four gallons.

The cooks announced that dinner would be served between two and three o'clock. In the meantime every one was feasting on his own hook; broiling, frying and roasting; bear steaks, venison steaks and antelope steaks; grouse, quail, squirrels, rabbits and fish; each according to his taste, and everyone his own cook. And so the feasting went on until dinner was announced, when all gathered round the festive board, which was the bare ground or the trunk of the fallen tree, with as keen appetites as though they had fasted since the day before. Just as the feast commenced Capt. Anderson and party rode into camp. They had ridden, since their departure, to Fort West and back, over mountain and through cañon, encountering many difficulties and enduring many hardships, but failing to discover a feasible route for a wagon road. They were aweary and ahungry and the bounteous feast spread before them was a welcome, an enchanting sight, for they had roughed it on scant rations since starting on their trip, and, without waiting for invitation they "sailed in" and did ample justice to the viands set before them. For the space of an hour iron knives and forks rattled against tin plates, and jaws worked incessantly.

After dinner Capt. Anderson announced that camp would be broken at daylight on the following morning and the command marched to a point about fifty miles to the northwest and another effort be made to find a feasible route for a wagon road to Fort West.

Among the soldiers was a man by the name of Chase. He was an invalid and had been sent with the expedition in the hope and expectation that the trip and the pure mountain air and resinous-laden breezes would restore his health. He had no duty to perform and was convalescing rapidly. In fact, he appeared to be a perfectly well man and ate with the appetite of a horse; but there was nothing peculiar in that for every one had an insatiable appetite. At the feast he ate plateful after plateful of pot-pie.

He "got away" with more turkey pot-pie than any other three men, but the tables turned and the pot-pie got away with him. He overloaded and at two o'clock the next morning he was dead, knocked into kingdom come by an over-dose of turkey pot-pie. At five o'clock he was in his grave under the spreading and protecting branches of a giant pine.

A suitable inscription was carved in the bole of the tree; a salute was fired over the grave; the place was christened "Camp Chase," and at six o'clock the command was on the march at quick-step to the tune of Yankee Doodle.

It was a long and wearisome march between the two camps but there was no halting, for there was no water between the two points and the march had to be kept up. At last about 9 o'clock in the evening we reached the new camp, worn and weary, both man and horse, and with nothing to refresh us but a cup of water, we lay down in our blankets to rest and to sleep.

The new camp presented no such charms to the sportsman and to the lover of the beautiful and grand in scenery as the old one, but to the geologist, the minerologist and the antiquary, it was a field of absorbing and enchanting interest. Within a limited area was a jumble of almost everything. The ridges were black basalt through which run sprangling veins of pure copper. Cinnabar cropped out from the face of the rocks, so rich that the mercury dripped from it in tiny globules. Gold and silver and zinc and lead were found. Several little nodules of a dark brown color and polished appearance were picked up that the miners of the party pronounced tin ore. In the valley were long narrow stretches of scoria or black lava, showing where ancient volcanoes had poured their streams of molten lava. In the same valleys were scattered great granite boulders which had been deposited there during the ice age.

These boulders were covered with hieroglyphs, cut deep in the solid rock by some prehistoric race. They have never been deciphered, and, probably never will be; their meaning is locked in the silent store-houses of the remote past and the key is lost. Scattered broadcast were many varieties of chalcedony, agate, carnelian, onyx and sardonyx. There were tons of agate geodes of all sizes from a grape-shot to a cannon ball, with their colors arranged in concentric rings. Most of them were hollow and their inner face was studded with brilliant quartz crystals. Some were solid, but where the cavity should have been was a solid mass of crystallized quartz.

Some entertained the idea that diamonds might be found there, basing their opinion on the fact that they found itucolumite rock, which is said to be the matrix of the diamond. Considerable search was made for diamonds but none were found though many beautiful crystals were picked up. I carried a small sack full of stones away; crystals, agates, garnets and carnelians, and several other varieties for which I could find no name, and had many of them made into jewelry and most beautiful jewelry it was. At that time I thought, and I still think, that diamonds will be found, someday, in that region.

After two months of tireless endeavor to find a feasible route through the mountains for a wagon train, and failing to do so, the command returned to Fort Craig.

A few lines back I mentioned the great granite boulders, and that they were deposits of the ice period. I am aware that in venturing this opinion I run counter to the accepted opinions of geologists, who limit the ice flow to the thirty-seventh or thirty-eighth parallels. But, these are exactly like those found on the northern prairies and plains and are spread more thickly over the ground. There range is from the Colorado river to the Llano Estacado (staked plains) of Texas, and so far south as the thirty-second or thirty-first parallel, covering an area, in the form of a parallelogram, two hundred by eight hundred miles in extent. These boulder deposits are not continuous, with a uniform continuity but in detached sections, each section of many miles extent.

To reconcile the theory of the ice flow so far south with that generally entertained, it must be remembered that the general elevation of the region is several thousand feet above that of the northern plains and therefore much colder; but, there is a lowering of altitude from the thirty-fifth to the thirty-first parallels and a consequent rising of temperature, and when the vast river of ice, holding these great boulders suspended in its chilling embrace, reached a temperature that melted it the boulders were precipitated to the solid earth. I believe such to be the fact; and that accounts for the other fact that the boulders are found only in the lower levels. The higher mountain ranges were above the ice flow; their trend is south by east. They split the frozen river into many streams and each stream deposited its burden in the valley beneath. The sudden melting of the ice also accounts for the fact that the boulders in the valleys are so thickly clustered, and sometimes piled into mountain pyramids.

The hieroglyped rocks all lie west of the summit of the Cordilleras. They are not worn or defaced by the action of the elements and the characters cut in them are as distinct as in a fresh intaglio though they must have been subject to meteorological changes for ages upon ages. East of the Cordilleras the boulders present a very different appearance.

They are not inscribed but their surfaces are worn and chafed and scarred, owing to a difference in the meteorlogical conditions. Though the boulders are not inscribed, there are many Indian inscriptions on the walls of cliffs and cañons, but they are of a very different character from the hieroglyphic inscriptions of the granite rocks to the west. They are mere scratches, made on the face of some friable rock.

They are of recent date, depicting recent events, such as sacking and burning villages, and murdering defenceless women and children; raiding and destroying trains of emigrants; capturing stage coaches and torturing the passengers; but there is a conspicuous absence of anything depicting a fight between Indians and soldiers.

These picture writings are very crude but easily read, and the subjects show that they were executed long subsequent to the advent of Europeans on the American continent.

There is one feature of the boulders east of the Rio Grande that is very interesting, and to most people very mysterious. For a long time it was a mystery to me, but I solved it satisfactorily to my own mind at least. In the tops of many of them are cup-like excavations brimming over with the purest and sweetest of water. Anyone who has traveled across the arid, thirsty stretches of the southern plains in the dry season, can appreciate what a boon to the weary wanderer are these little reservoirs.

The cups have a capacity of from a thimbleful to eight or ten quarts. The water in them remains the year round, through the hottest and dryest seasons. The water is deliciously cool, and many a thirsty wayfarer has cooled his parched tongue and slaked his burning thirst at these fonts of Nature's providing.

For a long time I puzzled over the question of how these cups were formed—bored out of the solid granite.

All at once the solution of the mystery flashed through my mind. I had just taken a drink from one of the little reservoirs and was sitting on an adjacent boulder studying the matter. There was a stiff breeze from the north blowing across the sandy plain. A few feet from me was another boulder with a knob-like projection on the top. This knob, in appearance, was very like a toadstool. Curiosity prompted me to examine it more closely and I saw that the wind was constantly picking up little grains of sand and hurling them against the knob, around which they eddied for a moment and were then driven forward to be succeeded by other grains of sand, each doing its moiety of the work of excavation by grinding away an infinitesmal portion of the rock around the knob. How many ages must be required by this process to bore out a cavity of two gallons capacity! The sand, little by little, bored down into the solid rock until the cup was finished. Further investigation developed the fact that this boring, or grinding, was carried on around a core which supported the knob as a slender stalk supports a flower. After a time the stalk would be worn away at the root, and knob and stem would fall into the bottom of the cup, where they would remain until the whirling sands wore them to atoms and the winds bore the atoms away.

There was one mystery that I could not solve. In none of the excavations that contained a vestige of knob or stem was any water found. Perhaps the friction of the whirling grains of sand generated enough heat to keep them dry. Those containing water were perfectly excavated, with no sediment or debris in them and they were always full to the brim. These boulders with the little cups lie in the path of the northers—fierce winds whose home is the Boreal region. These sweep across the plain with mighty force, chilling and killing everything in their path; both man and beast succumb to their icy breath. Their influence is felt as far South as the city of Mexico. It is these northers that, with the aid of the sand they pick up in their course, bore holes in the solid granite. But what fills them with water and prevents them from drying up? It can not be the rain, because for many months of the year not a drop of rain falls; neither is there any dew, and the atmosphere absorbs moisture like a sponge. The rocks are kept chilled by the northers and act as condensors, and the water is condensed from the atmosphere, and the cups are kept full by the same process. West of the Cordilleras, northers do not prevail; the country is sheltered from devasting winds by high mountain ranges; there are no cups in the tops of the granite boulders and their faces are not torn and jagged from having sand hurled against them by blasts of Boreal winds.

In southern New Mexico, east of the Rio Grande are mountain peaks, springing abruptly from the level plain to a height of several hundred feet, and composed entirely of granite boulders of immense size, some of them as big as a ship.

In the centers of some of these peaks, at an elevation of from fifty to sixty feet above the general level of the surrounding plain, are great reservoirs of sweetest and purest water, which can be reached by crawling through the interstices of the rocks. These reservoirs have neither outlet nor inlet, but the waters are perennial; never rising, never falling; their constant, even fullness, is the result of condensation.

Enforce the Game Laws.

Notice is hereby given that the California State Sportsmen's Association will prosecute any and all cases of violation of the game and fish laws of this State. All parties interested in the enforcement of these laws should submit proofs of violations to the undersigned. Crittenden Robinson, President,

Or C. W. Kyle, Secretary of C. S. S. A., 313 Bush street, San Francisco.

We are pleased to note Mr. Budd's success in his first two matches with Mr. Fulford. We are inclined to think Fulford, as he states and as the report of the matches state, was "away off" on these occasions. This, however, does not detract from the honor due Mr. Budd, as his shooting against records so to speak on these occasions show him to be a first class man. Now if Mr. Budd will defeat Brewer we will be pleased to record that fact, and we believe he can do it. If Budd should defeat Brewer, J. A. R. Elliot, the genial trap shot of Kansas City, will be avenged in a measure, for the records attest Elliott's wins over Budd. We we anxious to see Elliott pitted at Kansas City or Chicago against Brewer, for we believe he can defeat him in a contest where all things are equal and both men in first class condition.

Mr. P. J. Murphy, who furnishes the birds for the live bird shooting contingent of sportsmen of this city and vicinity has, in compliance with the suggestions made by this journal, provided a large roomy place for the birds where they are now being kept in splendid condition, having plenty of room, air, water and a chance for exercise. This is a long step in the right direction and will do much toward furnishing fine, vigorous birds far the season's trap shoots.

Howls.

The old chestnut is daily verified, "A young dog will bay the moon." But it should be the old one instead.

The wolf-killing contest, Borzois vs. Deerhounds, will take place in Colorado about seventy-five miles from Denver. The chances are in my favor of being present and if so I shall be pleased to give a short sketch of the contest for the benefit of the Breeder and Sportsman's many readers. May the best dog or dogs win. Will ye moind that, now?

I wonder how far away the Hon. Mr. Cam—Cam I beg your pardon; Can-Can, I should say—lives from the residence of the most Honorable Mr. Mason By the way he squalls one would think some one's fingsrs were most awfully "squoze." My, oh, my! phat a head I have on me! and I say will ye do me a favor. "Turn the water from the hose on me."

One of the most contemptible sights, and one, by the way, which occurs most frequently, is the damnable one of shooting a dog with a charge of bird shot, all because the poor dog does not understand and obey a multitude of commands, which are the eminations and concoctions of the grey matter of the owner's fertile brain. I have on several occasions been sorely tempted to relieve my pent up feelings by peppering the master's diaphragm with bird shot No. 9.

* * *

While on the subject of dislikes I may as well mention also another one—that of using on young chickens the repeating shot gun. I was completely disgusted the other day with a game hog who, enthusiastically described to me, his adeptness with the above-mentioned firearm when he said he could and did invariably kill from four to seven birds from each covey, provided the said covey contained that number at the first rise. Is it a wonder what causes chickens and other game to be scarce?

* * * *

Another dislike is the cold-storage or Freezers that certain parts of our game country is cursed with. Dakota and Minnesota, for example, are thus cursed, and it is to the everlasting disgrace of tke sportsmen of those States that they are allowed to exist. Come, be men and true sportsmen, and show your colors by driving them out. Tar and feathers is rather rough, but about the proper caper for these hellhounds; and, furthermore, I propose soon to give names and location of these parties; also the names of those who sell them game—as far as I am able—in the near future, and show them up to respectable men, as they so richly deserve, every mother's son of 'em."

Now for a wee bit of a scrap. Mr. Anthony comes back at Judge Post rather loud; go it, boots, but be civil. I have read Mr. James Anthony's able contributions in the various papers, and like them very much, with this exception: "He is prone to lose his head and becomes entirely too personal." Now I sincerely trust such will not be the case in this instance, and I am sure the controversy between such able opponents will be very interesting indeed. Personalities should be left for the rag-tag division.

Talk is cheap; it takes money to buy soap, as several business propositions to the various fanciers remain unaccepted. It seems about time to either "put up or shut up."

Aloin.

"Every dog has his day," and that dogs of Boulder Creek have had their day, says the Watsonville Rustler. A dispatch from that place states that scarcely any live dogs are left in the town, the canine population having been poisoned by unknown parties. Among the slain are a number of valuable dogs whose owners offer a reward of $100 for the arrest and conviction of the dog-killer." We trust the sportsmen may be successful in discovering the miserable wretch who has been guilty of such despicable conduct and mete out to him the punishment his wanton act deserves.

We see that the Southern California Kennel Club has chosen Mr. J. Watson as its representative to the American Kennel Club. A good choice and one that will be heard from occasionally in that capacity.

The English setter Hope's Mark seems to have made his mark as a bench winner of the first quality. The cuts presented of him by several of our exchanges bear out, as far as a picture can, the high enconiums presented in type of him.

The American Kennel Club proposes to issue and offer a medal to be competed for, under conditions to be announced, at the bench shows of the various clubs.

Field Trials and Coursing Meets Recognized.

At the meeting of the A. K. C. held last spring, a committee, consisting of Messrs. J. L. Anthony, J. M. Taylor and L. C. Whiton, were given charge of the subject of considering if advisable and how best field trials and coursing meetings could be recognized by the A. K. C. At the February meeting of that body this committee submitted the result of their deliberations as follows:

The committee originally appointed at the meeting of the A. K. C., held May 21, 1891, which committee was modified by the appointment of Mr. J. L. Anthony as a member of said committee in place of Mr. Childs, beg to report, in accordance with the original resolution, under which the first report was recommitted to them at the last meeting of the A. K. C., the following as, in their opinion, "the best method by which field trials and coursing meetings can be brought within the jurisdiction of the A. K. C.:"

Wins at field trials and coursing meetings to be recognized.

First: At field trials or coursing meetings where competition is open to all and held by, or under the auspices of clubs, members of the A. K. C.

Second: Or at field trial or coursing meeting where competition is open to all, and where the club holding such trials or meetings agrees to recognize the jurisdiction of the A. K. C. and the right of appeal to said A. K. C., by any competitor, from any decision rendered at any "such trials or meetings."

It is suggested by your committee that in accordance with the foregoing, and to carry out the spirit and intention of the original resolution, that a standing or permanent committee be appointed and added to the regular committees, and called "The field trials and coursing committee," which committee shall be composed of five members, to be elected or appointed from among the delegates representing the field trials or coursing clubs, members of the A. K. C., and to whom primarily shall be refered all matters pertaining to field trials or coursing meetings.

The California Kennel Club.

As the dates for the coming bench show draw nigh the interest in the show is quickened and the outlook brightens daily. Scarcely a day goes by but the secretary of the club is in receipt of some inquiry as to the coming event. The fact that Mr. James Mortimer, of the Westminister Kennel Club of New York, is to act in the capacity of judge of the coming show has done much to awaken the interest beyond its usual point in such events. It is a well-known fact among kennel men that there could be no better man selected in the entire country for this position and no kennel man can afford to allow the opportunity to pass without having Mr. Mortimer pass upon the qualities of his dogs.

The labor incident to the preparation and proper conduct of an exhibition of this event is large and to the persons engaged in the work it becomes enormous, more so, perhaps, from the fact that exhibitors do not make any allowance for the convenience of the management and leave their entries until the last moment before perfecting them. This is an error which all should seek to avoid by making their entries in due time. The President of this club, Mr. E. P. Schell, is an earnest worker and is doing everything possible to regulate the work of preparation in such a manner as to have all things move off smoothly this season. The premium list and the catalogues will doubtless be issued in ample time so that all work dependant upon these necessary arrangements may be duely fulfilled.

Sound Financiers In Dogdom.

It is with no small degree of pleasure that we note the financial standing of many of the specialty clubs.

The Collie Club of America reports a balance on hand of $594.88.

The American Pet Dog Club exhibits a balance of $162.86.

The National Greyhound Club's committee on prizes reported contributions to the amount of $365, while the Stud Book Committee shows a balance of $39.74.

The St. Bernard Club of America has in its treasury $421.30.

The American Spaniel Club has to its credit the sum of $95.

The Bull Dog Club of America has a balance of $113.

This all goes to prove the fact that there is a good interest taken in these clubs and indicates that the real advantage to the breed is best represented in specialty clubs.

The Southern California Kennel Club.

The premium list of the Southern California Kennel Club announcing the awards to be made at its fourth annual bench show is at hand, presenting a long list of valuable specials. The show will be held on April 20th to 23d inclusive. All entries close on April 16th. Wells Fargo & Co., will return dogs sent to the bench show free of charge to point from which they are sent.

All communications should be addressed to C. A. Sumner, Esq., Secretary, 107 South Broadway, Los Angeles, California.

Bred.

Dr. R. A. Fergusson, Bakersfield, Cal., has bred Jess, fox-terrier bitch, by Tally—Clover Blossom, to J. B. Martin's Blemton Shiner, by Champion Blemton Rubicon—Champion Blemton Brilliant, at San Francisco, March 6, 1892.

Mr. E. B. Bishop, of Coffeyville, Kansas, proprietor of the Glenmore Kennels, which are, we believe, the largest kennels devoted to the breeding of Irish setters in the country, reports himself as being well pleased with his new location and is looking forward to securing very much greater consideration for the Irish setter, during the coming year, on account of the fine qualities developing.

We glean from The Rustler, of Watsonville, that Mr. Geo. T. Allender is making extensive improvements in his kennels at his dog-training quarters in San Miguel Cañon. This is in keeping with the well-known methods of friend Allender, who may always be depended upon to keep abreast of the times.

High-Class a la Avent.

By Charles Wesley Kyle.

Hi, there! come in! you "rantankerous" cuss,
What in the devil are you doing there?
You'll make of this bevy a h——l of a muss,
Come, sir! to your work; of your nose have a care!

By Jove, he don't hear me; he's too far away,
And going still farther; more speed, I declare
He shows than a race horse when under the flay,
Or a prize-winning greyhound chasing a hare!

You see he's "high-class;" that's something, you know,
"Not much to be proud of!" That shows you're a fool,
And fancy a "plug dog" pott'ring and slow;
A cautious, obedient bird hunting tool.

A dog that is never too fast for his nose,
And one that will trail up a lone, single bird,
With head in proximity close to his toes,
And ears ever ready to catch your least word.

Your dog, sir, is such a low, plebian cur,
That for his defects I can but sadly grieve;
So careful, he's never been known to "point" fur,
And then only think, sir, he stoops to retrieve!

Now see your "plug-hunter" he's pointing a bird
So slow he don't flush 'em not once in an hour,
But for style he ain't "in it," and whoever heard
Of his having regard for esprit du corps?

You may stay and shoot birds but I must go seek
My "high-class;" I wonder wherever he went"
I'll find him, perhaps, sometime during the week;
This "high class" whose training is a la Avent.

Why I Went Not Westward.

The following important kennel item appears in the current issue of Turf, Field and Farm. We say important, because it must be so, else our contemporary would not devote almost a column of its vauable kennel department to the subject, but as the name, Chas. H. Mason, appears by actual count only six times in the matter, it of course is worthy the designation important with a big I. The following is a portion of the matter:

The Breeder and Sportsman has given the Fanciers' Journal this support (?) "We take this opportunity of saying that the California Kennel Club, of this city, and the Southern California Club, of Los Angeles, 'are in a position to accept' anything which they might desire, and that no want of financial backing has compelled or induce them to do otherwise than they have thought best. Selah."

As the above statement is made by a sheet that is generally credited with being pretty close to the California Kennel Clubs, and in a position to state facts, more weight may be attached to it than to Mr. V. M. Haldeman's unreliable bluster in the Fanciers' Journal. Both sheets have hinted that I have been attempting to mislead; and the Western Kennel Clubs, composed, as I believe they are, of gentlemen, will not; I hope, object to the publication of their official letters in vindication of my position in this matter. When I say that I hold "proof" in support of my statements I mean just what I say. When Mr. Haldeman and other kennel editors like him make willful misstatements and then refuse a man the right he has to correct such misstatements, they prove themselves unworthy of the trust placed in them by their employers and the readers of their misleading and unjust kennel departments. Below is my "proof," now let the Fanciers' Journal and the San Francisco sheet produce theirs or retract.

Charles H. Mason, Esq., 310 West 116th Street, New York:

Dear Sir: Yours of the 16th inst. to hand, and I am glad to see the Denver Club has written to you about judging. I have to-day written to both San Francisco and Denver, urging them to accept your offer, and to the latter saying, in case San Francisco refused, that we would be glad to co-operate with them to get you out, and so soon as a letter reaches our club I will communicate with you.

We are anxious to have you out, and will do our best to talk the other clubs into it if possible. Yours truly,

C. A. Sumner, Sec. S. C. K. C.

Los Angeles, January 25, 1892.

C. H. Mason, Esq.:

Dear Sir: Yours of the —— duly received and was referred to the executive committee on the evening of the 13th inst. We regret very much our inability to accept the terms you offer. While realizing fully that they are low enough, the outlook for bench shows on the coast this season is not such as would warrant us in incurring such an expense. We hope, however, to some day be in a position that will warrant us in having you with us. Thanking you for your kindness in answering our letter so promptly, we remain,

Yours respectfully,

Executive Committee,
Per. E. P. Schell, Pres., 710 Geary street.

San Francisco, Cal., January 16, 1892.

The time has come for the gentlemen who own the kennel papers to compel their editors (Heaven save the mark!) to either state facts or step down and out. Chas. H. Mason."

We stand on our remarks as above quoted. The California Kennel Club cleared something like $1,500 at its last bench show and its treasury is still ample to support the position taken by us that they are in a position to accept anything in this line which they may desire. No suggestion of inability to pay is made by the Southern California Kennel Club, hence there is nothing to answer. The context of our remarks as quoted by Mr. Mason is as follows, and appeared in our issue of February 27th. In that issue we said:

Mr. Charles H. Mason appears as follows in the Fancier's Journal of current issue:

"In regard to the judging of the shows in the far West and about which there appears to be both interest and anxiety, allow me to clear away the cobwebs that has gotten into some folk's eyes. Having been in correspondence with the clubs for many weeks, it is probable that I am in a position to know of what I am writing. The reason, and the only reason, why I am not going to two of these shows is not because they wanted anybody else, but because my terms was higher than the clubs are in a position to accept. As I hold proof in support of this statement there need be no guessing and no more misrepresenting."

We take this opportunity of saying that the California Kennel Club of this city and the Southern California Kennel Club of Los Angeles "are in a position to accept" anything which they might desire and that no want of financial backing has compelled or induced them to do otherwise than they have thought best. Selah.

Now we ask if the letter presented by Mr. Mason from Mr. C. A. Summer, above quoted says anything abaut Mason's terms being too high? If not is not Mr. Mason's allegations a little strong? It is considered by gentlemen, the world over, to be somewhat a matter of delicacy to inform a man that his services are not wanted and such letters are usually couched in such terms as to convey the least amount of harshness. Members of the California Kennel Club there are who would object to Mr. Mason's judging on other grounds than the amount demanded for services. A communication from one of them appearing in the Breeder and Sportsman of the 27th instant, hints very plainly at some of these grounds which it would appear strike at the very essential elements of good judging.

By the way, why was the letter last above quoted, and which appeared in the Fancier's Journal, ever written? Had any one publicly attacked Mr. Mason? It would seem not. Does it not breathe a spirit of supersensitive egotism, an insane desire for notoriety, for which all this "tempest in teapot" was inaugurated and is being continued on the part of this modern Falstaff? It is common for men who fail to do any specific act attempted to be prolific in excuses for their failure.

We have entirely too much of egotistical assumption on the part of some would-be leaders in dogdom. It was to rebuke this spirit that we first quoted the letter last appearing in this article. It has been productive of much good in the line intended. Don't solace yourself, Mr. Mason, with the idea that the kennel clubs of California are not able to purchase your services, if they desired them. If your services are really worth so much more than that of other men as you would have us believe, in this capacity, why were they not required by the great Eastern shows recently?

Are Preserves a Good Thing?

To the thoughtful sportsman, the sight of the rapid destruction of all classes of game birds and animals, becomes a matter of the most serious aud careful consideration.

How to check this rapid destruction and yet maintain an opening,an opportunity for the exercise of a reasonable amount of sport in the open field is even now a practical question.

It was one of the old traditions of the war-like Sioux Indians that when the buffalo should pass away that tribe also would pass away. This tribe protected, as far as their own necessities would permit, this lordly game, for it furnished them sustenance in their annual journeyings from the mountains of British Columbia across the plains of Texas to the Gulf of Mexico.

The sportsman's life, as such, depends upon the preservation of the game birds, animals and fish of the country; when they are extinct, sportsmen, as such, at least in the highest and truest sense will become extinct,for that there will no longer be found aught upon which they can subsist.

It has been our earnest conviction that the government should be importuned and petitioned in season and out of sea son until it shall select, sequester and carefully preserve large bodies of land, chosen from the remote and least accessible portious of the mountainous regions of the country, which sections shall be maintained as "cities of refuge" for all classes of game and fish where the same may be securely and certainly protected from any and all forms of destruction by the hand of man. Where the report of firearms should never break the peaceful silence and where no rod and line should ever fret the waters of its laughing streams. Why this absolute prohibition? In order that the fish and game might thrive and multiply until their increase would become so great that the overflow would furnish admirable sport throughout all of the adjacent regions.

To select and preserve these great national parks is one of the absolute duties of our government and definite and decided action should not be deferred a single day in order that the duty be well performed. Neglect in this matter for a decade means an irretreivably lost opportunity. The practical features, other than those of the preservation of fish and game, are of the first importance, which depend for their solution upon prompt action in this direction. The preservation of the forests, where they form the keystone to the arch of values, is of primal importance. Destroy the forests in many of our mountainous districts and there is nothing of value left. The lands without their shelter become barren, dry and arid. The snows which are held in place and sheltered from the sun's rays by the forests so that the heat of summer is sufficient only to allow their precious wealth to trickle from the cooling shade in sufficient qualities to supply the streams with life during the entire season essential to this needful condition. Without the economic influence of the forests in the distribution of the snows, giving to each month its just quota the streams would become dry and trout life would be impossible of preservation there.

These lands would be found berefit of beauty and attractiveness and their availability for park purposes effectively destroyed. These lands would indeed become valueless, for nature has intended them evidently for park and preserve purposes, as they are capable of being used for no other. Shall the forests be destroyed and the lands become utterly valueless, or will the government preserve them and render them useful and valuable as parks and preserves for all future time? These are questions in which, in a large measure, the sportsmen of the country are materially interested.

In the mean time the best, and in fact the only effective means by which the game and fish may be absolutely preserved is by the work of private clubs, corporations and persons who are directly and specially interested in the question of perservation for their own use and benefit.

There can be no question of the legal, as well as all other forms of right, of the owner of land to preserve the fish and game thereon. That the exercise of this right on preserves accrues to the benefit of the public at large there can be no question, as it is a well known fact that wild game of all varieties from its very nature cannot be absolutely confined, and whenever it passes beyond the boundaries of a preserve on to unpreserved lands or waters it at once becomes, in the fullest sense, public property, subject to the right of any one to reduce to absolute ownership by pursuit and capture. From this fact of overflow from preserved lands the public at once become gratuitous, recipients and beneficiaries.

For the same reason, under the present conditions of this country, all preserves culturing, protecting and fostering game and fish, or either of them, are public benefactors and as such should receive the countenance and encouragement of every true sportsman.

Our effort, as a State, to foster and preserve the game and fish has so far received but scant encouragement from the public at large who are the beneficiaries of this movement.

Private and club preserves have been forced into existence solely by reason of the inefficiency of the State's efforts in this direction. We have frequently taken occasion to state and here repeat that we are persuaded that our present Fish and Game Commission is doing all in its power to render effective, with the feeble and ineffective "sinews of war" provided, the laws enacted for this purpose. These public officials find their most ardent and active supporters among the membership of the clubs owning preserves within the State.

We earnestly desire the preservation of the fish and game within our State. We would gladly welcome the day when preservation by the State could be made absolute during the proper seasons, and also in the meantime, and at all others, we would voice a fervent Methodistic "Amen" to every effort which has for its object the preservation of our game birds, animals and fishes, by all classes of preserves, which are effectual in preserving the same. Are preserves a good thing? Can there be but one answer to this question? We think not.

The Webster-Crocker Match.

On Thursday of last week a large number of the friends of President F. R. Webster, of the Country Club, and Mr. George Crocker accompanied them by invitation to the Oakland Shooting Park to witness a match between these two gentlemen. The day was beautiful and all conditions favorable to recreation of this nature, as near perfect as any one could desire. Among the invited guests we noticed Mr. Clark of the Country Club an old-time lover and participant in field sports in this vicinity, also Messrs. R. A. Eddy, Wm. Kittle, R. H. Sprague, J. G. Oxnard and J. L. Robinson.

The conditions of the match were fifty live birds each, for the birds and general expenses of the match, each party to derive as much pleasure out of the contest as possible which in fact was the prime object in view at the meeting. The shooting was most interesting from beginning to close, not because of any special display of skill but from the fact that the skill exhibited by the gentlemen was as near equal as it could well be, and yet leave a deciding difference.

The final score stood 29 to 28 in favor of Mr. Webster. During the match, as bird after bird sailed away out of bounds, and yet the scores stood so even that there could be practically no choice made by the spectators between the contestants, the interest was kept at a growing point. After the match had been decided the sportsmen present engaged in a lively succession of "freeze-outs" until there were no more birds left on the grounds. In these events Mr. Crocker did some very creditable work while Mr. Eddy carried off the first honors with Messrs. Kittle and Sprague following closely on his record. It proved a very interesting afternoon's season of sport.

Wyoming Kennels For Sale.

It has been rumored for some time that Mr. E. B. Sears, proprietor of the famous Wyoming Kennels was thinking of parting with his choice collection of leading St. Bernards and hence the announcement, which came by telegraph a few days since, that he had placed his kennel on the market was not really much of a surprise. He offers his entire stock, some eighteen or more in number for sale, including several of the leading dogs of this famous breed known to the fancy, including the world's champions, Sir Bedivere and Hepsey. Following this famous pair comes next in order of merit, Champion Plinlimmion Jr., Lothario, Manon, Lady Wellington, Wyoming, Hesper and Hilda II. This sale will doubtless create quite a stir in dogdom but we much doubt if Mr. Sears can possibly realize anything like the prices he has paid for these famous dogs. The fever has abated and dog flesh has come down to something like a rational basis.

We are inclined to think that a very great reduction in the matter of fancy prices will have a favorable tendency on the kennel interests of the country. But of course monied men have a perfect right to pay into the thousands of dollars for a dog if they so desire and it may well be considered an honor and it certainly would be the source of supreme satisfaction to any dog fancier to own such a grand dog as Sir Bedivere, or, in fact, any of the above mentioned celebrities.

The E. T. Allen Company.

The E. T. Allen Company,on Market street, below Sansome, is a busy place in the firearms and sporting goods trade. They were appointed agents by Mr. W. W. Greener a year ago for the sale of his fine hammer, hammerless and ejector guns, and have been very successful in introducing them. This is the home of the Parker gun, of which they have sold more than any other house on the Coast, and in addition to the large stock of Parkers is added a complete stock of Remington, L. C. Smith, Lefever and all standard makes of rifles, revolvers, etc.

Their fishing-tackle department is an attractive feature in the business, and is most complete and thoroughly stocked with all the new and useful novelties. They are showing many new specialties, among which are solid silk line, club waterpoof line, alluminum reels, gossamer leaders, improved trout and bass flies with rubber wings and bodies. The superiority of their rods, casting spoons and other specialties is due to the ingenuity of the manager of this department.

In lawn tennis they are at the front, their specialties being Spalding & Bros.' new oval-handle racket. They have a large stock of Beckman, Taylor, Sears and also all the cheaper rackets.

Athletic and gymnasium goods in abundance; the furnishing of uniforms for base ball and foot ball clubs has grown to large proportions.

The Lincoln Gun Club.

The Lincoln Gun Club, the oldest and strongest target shooting club in the State, or West of Chicago for that matter, will hold its first monthly shoot of the season on Sunday, March 20th. There will doubtless be a large attendance and a splendid season of sport.

Visits.

Property of Echo Cocker Kennel, Stockton, Cal., cocker spaniel bitch Vixie 13193. To same owners, liver white ticked stud dog Kute, Feb. 16, 1892.

On March 4th C. W. Budd, of Des Moines, Iowa, defeated the much lauded champion of the East, E. D. Fulford, easily. It is but justice to say, however, that the latter named gentleman must have been much out of form as he only killed 38 out of 53 birds fired at, while the former killed 49 out of same number.

A lease of three miles of a good fishing stream in Alameda county is offered in this issue. Terms reasonable.

The Morgan Family.

Hannibal has a Morgan mare, and he is very proud of her says the Newark Call. He has a right to be. Her name is Whisper—a very euphonious and appropriate name, too. The writer knows, by daily association with one of the breed on the road, that a whisper is all that is necessary to get the best effort of which a Morgan is capable. What a race the Morgans were! They were in their day not only the swiftest, but the most beautiful and stylish horses in the world. A recent writer apostrophizes the memory of Justin Morgan as follows:

"Remember thee, thou king of the Morgans! The green grass of her summers will wither into ashes, and the snows of her winters will melt under the fires that bring the end of the world before the sons and daughters of Vermont will forget thee, thou eagle of her hills—thou pride of the Green mountains!"

The Morgans, though not a distinct race, were a distinct family, and their descendants to this day are noted for their excellent qualities. The founder of the family, Justin Morgan, could trot in about three minutes. His gait at the trot was low and smooth, and his step quick and nervous. A writer who saw him says that his proud, bold and fearless style of movement and his vigorous, untiring action have, perhaps, never been surpassed. He was foaled in West Springfield, Mass., in 1789. Nothing definite is known of his sire; he is supposed to have been True Briton, a horse that was captured from the British General DeLancy at Hartford, Conn., during the Revolutionary War. True Briton was a son of Imported Traveler. Traveler was a typical Avalian, and in form, size, build, disposition, strength and endurance Justin Morgan showed his relation to the desert breed.

Justice Morgan went to Vermont in 1795, and remained in that State until 1811, when he went to New Hampshire. He died in 1821, the property of Levi Bean, of Chelsea, New Hampshire. Although he was thirty-three years old, he did not die of old age. He was running loose in the stable yard with other horses when he received a kick on the flank; being without shelter and exposed to the rigors of a Vermont winter, inflammation set in and the old horse died. Those who saw him in 1819-20 describe his appearance as remarkably fresh and youthful. A gentleman, speaking of him many years ago, said he was perfectly sound and free from all blemish. Years of severest labor had not sapped his vigor nor broken his constitution; his eye was still bright and his step still firm and elastic.

Justin Morgan was a small horse, weighing not more than nine hundred and fifty pounds, and about fourteen hands high. The Morgan of to-day is a larger horse, and will weigh from ten hundred to eleven hundred pounds. He is remarkable for compactness of form, strength and docility. When speed became a requisite the Morgans, having the other excellent qualities, were bred accordingly, and some of the best trotting stock of the country has been produced by the admixture of this blood with that of the highly-developed trotter. No sensible breeder will ever be deterred from breeding on a certain line because there is a tincture of Morgan blood in it. The blood of Vermont Morgan, great-grandson of Justin Morgan, mingled with that of Zilcaadi, produced the well-known Golddust family, of which Lucille Golddust, 2:16¼, with two having records below 2:20, was the bright particular star. The first gelding that ever trotted a mile in 2:30 was Beppo, by Gifford, son of Woodbury Morgan.

Look back more than thirty years and see what some of the Morgans did in the trotting line. Nearly fifty years ago Black Hawk won a match of $1,000 by trotting five miles in sixteen minutes. In 1843 he won a race of two-mile heats in 5:43. In 1853 Black Hawk Maid, by Black Hawk, won a race of two-mile heats in 5:53. In 1847 Lady Sutton, by Morgan Eagle, won a race of two-mile heats, best time 5:17. In 1843 Beppo, by Gifford Morgan, won a race, best time 2:31½. In the same year Pizarro, by Morgan Cæsar, won a race in 2:35. In 1853 Vermont Boy won a three-mile race to wagon in 8:32. In 1853 Blue Morgan won a race in 2:33½. In 1852 Black Ralph, by Black Hawk, won a heat of two miles in 5:33½. In 1855 two Morgans, Lancet and Know-Nothing, trotted a match-race; Know-Nothing won the first heat in 2:27½, and Lancet the third in 2:27½. In 1855 Belle of Saratoga, by Black Hawk, won a race in 2:29½. In 1849 Mac, by Morgan Cæsar, won a race under saddle in 2:29½. Blackstone Belle won a race in 1856 in 2:28½. Kettlebail, by Pollard Morgan, foaled in 1850, has a record of 2:31½. Annie Eastin, by Morgan Rattler, son of Green Mountain Morgan, produced Golden Rod, 2:19¼; Endymion, 2:23½, and Dolly Davis, 2:29. Morgan Hunter, by Gifford Morgan, was the grandsire of John H., 2:20, and Stephanny, 2:28½. Black Hawk, by Sherman Morgan, son of Justin Morgan, sired three trotters, and is the sire of fourteen sons, with twenty-four trotters. The records show that out of the horses that make up the 2:30 list, nearly 200 of them are out of Morgan mares.

The Morgan chroniclers may well say: "As dams, the Morgans, when bred to stallions of other strains, have been the means of lifting their progeny to a high pinnacle of fame."

Jealous Breeders.

The following from the Buffalo Horse World, one of our most able contemporaries, is interesting to Californians, and contains not a little sound advice:

California turf-writers are stating in emphatic terms that the breeders of that State made a grievous mistake in allowing Margaret S., 2:12½ to come East, and to uninterested persons it would seem as though they are right. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN makes no bones of saying that that mare would have been almost invaluable to Senator Stanford, and it further adds that Palo Alto Farm has always been weak in its broodmare department, and if a floating paragraph can be believed, even Senator Stanford has admitted the truth of this latter statement. It will also be a matter of conjecture as to what Electioneer's showing would have been had the broodmares at Palo Alto been composed of daughters of Mambrino Patchen, Pilot Jr., George Wilkes, Nutwood, etc. It is worth nothing that out of the only two Pilot Jr. mares he ever covered he sired Electricity, 2:17¾, from one and Re-Election, 2:27¼, and Electrix, 2:28½, from the other. Out of three living foals from daughters of George Wilkes one is Advertiser, 2:16 at three years, and one of the remaining two promises to be almost as fast. Out of the only daughter of Belmont at Palo Alto, Electioneer sired Sphinx, 2:20½, and Egotist, 2:22½. Arion, 2:10¾, shows how much help a daughter of Nutwood could give Electioneer, and what the increased value of the foals produced at Palo Alto might have been had more of them been bred in these lines is hard to say. Despite the fact that the brood-mare blood at Palo Alto has always been weak Senator Stanford does not seem inclined to go outside to reinforce it. He has no daughters of Director on his farm, although that horse is now recognized as one of the most valuable of living sires. Guy Wilkes is known as one of the very best of the sons of George Wilkes, but none of his daughters are found at Palo Alto. The breeding establishments of California could borrow elements from each other that would add immensely to their strength, but they do not seem to do so. The breeders of no other section have begun to take advantage of the strength of their neighbors' breeding establishments as those of Kentucky have done. In other sections they seem to have a certain prejudice against introducing strains of blood from neighboring studs, although they must be convinced that it would add to the strength of their own establishment. It is impossible to say if this is the cause of so little interchange of stock among the California breeders, but to an outsider it would look that way. The day will come, however, when such prejudices must die out, no matter where they exist, for all breeders of any prominence have stock with valuable qualities, and those qualities may be utilized to a good advantage by almost any breeder in the land.

The Construction of the Turns for a Fast Track.

In the construction of race courses too little attention has usually been given to the problem as to what rise should be given the turns, from the inner to the outer edge of the roadway. The greater number of regulation tracks have been constructed with a rise on the turns of a half an inch per foot for a mile, and one inch per foot for half mile tracks, that rise being adopted without further investigation as to its correctness. It is a fact, that many race courses would be a second or two faster if the most suitable rise were given the turns.

A rise of a half inch per foot is theoretically correct for a speed of 3:42.7, on a regulation mile track. As the average speed in racing is much faster than that, it is obviously insufficient rise for the turns of the regulation mile track. To form a definite idea of the importance of having the proper rise on the turns, a comparison of the centrifugal forces acting at different speeds will suffice.

At a speed of 2:30 on a regulation mile track (assuming the weight of a horse to be 1,000 lbs), the centrifugal force is 91 67 lbs., and at a speed of 3:42.7, the centrifugal force is 43.33 lbs. The centrifugal force tends to force the horse at right angles to the circular course in which he is moving around the turns. If the turns are properly sloped for the speed at which he is going, it requires no effort for him to maintain his equilibrium; but if, for example, the turns are only sloped a half inch per foot, and he goes at a speed of 2:30, the slope for which should be one-tenth inches per foot, he must balance himself by his own exertion against a centrifugal force of 48.34 lbs., the difference between the centrifugal force of 43.33 lbs counteracted by a rise of a half inch per foot (the rise for a speed of 3:42.7), and the centrifugal force of 91.67 lbs., counteracted by a rise of one and one-tenth inches per foot (the rise for a speed of 2:30).

Besides the greater energy which must be exerted by the horse on turns not properly sloped, he has not a firm and even footing. In case of 2:30 speed, on turns with a rise of only one half-inch per foot, the effect is the same as it would be to have the stretches sloped six-tenths of an inch per foot.

Although the best results would be secured by preparing the turns for each rate of speed to be made, as that is impracticable, it will be best to construct them for a speed somewhat faster than the average; but in speeding a horse against a world's record it would certainly be more profitable to specially prepare the track for that event.

It would also be advantageous to have a gradual transition curve from the stretch to the full curve of the turns, thus giving the most easy and perfect turns possible, and avoiding all abruptness.

The foregoing points properly observed in construction, most of the disadvantages of a circular course in comparison to a straight one will be eliminated; and with conditions of material for the roadbed favorable, the fastest possible regulation or kite-shaped track will be obtained.—F. B. Krause, C. E., Cleveland, O., in American Sportsman.

Chunks of Horse Sense.

When you go to pick out a horse with a copper bottom take one with a short, round body, with big leg bones and a full girth. The stayer is never long and tall. He is generally built so your hand will hide the space between his short ribs and his hip bone, and a common saddle will cover his back from coupling to withers.

If you want a natural born saddle horse be sure that he is heavier and lower behind than in front. He needs driving powers. If his rump droops down like the roof on a Queen Anne cottage you can take it as a good mark for saddle qualities.

But if you want a horse to pull heavy loads you can change ends on him. Let him have a heavy front, full chest and high rump. He needs drawing powers.

When you see a horse with a dished face and narrow front head, with his ears turned back wrong side out like he was always listenin' and lookin' for somethin' to happen, let him alone. He is a fool for the want of sense.

A horse born with the saddle gaits in his legs will cover twice as much ground as the one that has to learn, and do his work three times easier.

Flat hoofs and white trimmin's are not good marks. Round hoofs and a black finish are better.

There are good horses and bad ones, but there is lots in the man that handles them. A bad man can soon spoil a good horse and a good man make a bad horse better.

If you will take a ear of corn out of the troft, or a hand of hay out of the rack every time you go to the stable and use them for currycomb and brush, you will never have to ride a shabby horse.

Rubbing your horse on the outside is a waste of time if you don't treat the inside square and right. It is like putting on a silk hat to cure the stomach-ache.

Let your horse have what he wants and all he wants, and then it don't make any difference how constant he wears the saddle or looks through a collar.

You never saw a good-all-around man that didn't have a soft spot in his heart for a fine horse.

A man that neglects his horse is more than probable likely to treat his family about the same way.

You can't hang out a better sign than a fat horse.—Rufus Sanders, in Dallas News.

The History of Bell Alta.

Numerous letters of inquiry have been received at this office regarding the history of Bell Alta, and as the following article, written and published some years ago in the BREEDER AND SPORSTMAN, may perhaps be sufficient to satisfy those who are seeking information and also furnish interesting reading to our hundreds of new subscribers, we decided to republish it:

Having seen a number of inquiries in regard to the pedigrees and history of Bell Alta in your paper, and as the blood of this son of old Belmont courses through the veins of a number of our noted trotters, I think a short letter from one who is in a position to know all the particulars would prove of interest to many of your readers.

Bell Alta was bred by S. I. Jammison of Santa Clara County, foaled August 14, 1858. He was a beautiful bay, sixteen hands, by "Williamson's Belmont;" his dam was a dark bay mare, 16 hands, that was brought across the plains and purchased from Captain Simmons, of Alviso, by Mr. Jammison. This mare had the qualities of a thoroughbred, though little was known of her breeding. She was an extraordinary road animal, and could trot in three minutes to a buggy. Captain Simmons, who at that time kept a warehouse at Alviso, had on several occasions driven her from San Jose to San Francisco and return in one day, and I believe that it is to his dam that Bell Alt owed many of his good qualities.

Mr. Martin Mendenhall, then of Contra Costa County (now of Livermore, Alameda County), purchased the colt when eighteen months old from Mr. Jammison for $700. Mr. Mendenhall broke him late in the spring as a three-year-old, and drove him in a spring wagon until he commenced to work him for the three-year-old race he was to have in the following September. He was then hitched to a spring seat sulky, or rather a cart, weighing 150 pounds, in which he received all his work, never being hitched to a track sulky until he started in his first race at San Jose. Mr. Mendenhall had on his ranch a rudely constructed track, on which he gave his pet the preliminary lessons. He started in his first race at a District Fair in San Jose. The race was for three-year-old colts, September, 1861. There were seven entries, but only three starters. His competitors were a half-brother of his by Belmont and a colt by General Taylor. The three-year-old races in the olden days were two in three. He easily won both heats, the time in the last heat being just three minutes, he distancing both his opponents. Mr. Mendenhall was then offered $3,500 for him, but the offer was refused. He also took the diploma awarded for the finest stallion. I might state right here whenever exhibited he carried off first honors. On the old Willows track, San Francisco, as a four-year-old, was his next race. Again did he have two contestants, and there seemed to be an understanding between the other two to down him at all hazards. There were no societies and not many rules then save what the drivers made, and a race generally resolved itself in a "go as you please" contest. The late Jim Eoff, whom some people say used to drive races against the Egyptian mummies, was handling a mare by Dave Hill out of Lady Vernon; the other contestant was the somewhat famous "Spotted Colt" from Sacramento. It was a desperate contest over a rough track, and each of them had two heats to their credit. When in the seventh heat Bell Alta won in the fastest time of the race—2:42. He was next trotted at Pacheco, Contra Costa County, in 1864; when driven by his owner, whose weight was 205 pounds, he won the stallion race and gained a record of 2:37. He never had received any work except what he got on his home track. He was without doubt one of the best sons of Belmont, was pure-gaited and very level-headed, and if people in those days had had the knowledge of training and care of trotters they now possess, he would be one of the equine stars of the age. Bell Alta never had much opportunity to distinguish himself in the stud, as the mares he served were usually farm mares, of very little, if any breeding. Yet he gained some distinction, having sired Henrietta, trial 2:21. Her dam was by Peacock a good horse, said to be thoroughbred. Mr. Corbitt afterwards secured Henrietta, and, I believe, has some of her produce at present. Mr. Valensin has in his harem a very fine mare by Arthurton, dam Henrietta, that will be heard from as a broodmare. Mr. Polhemus of Santa Clara County had a mare by Bell Alta called Josephine that was very promising, and could trot in 2:26, when she died with "epizootic." Her dam was by a half thoroughbred horse called John Lemon. Mr. Polhemus had refused $6,000 for her. Almost any of his colts could trot a three-minute gait, and they made fine road horses, and from their sale his owner derived a large revenue.

Mr. Mendenhall has but three of his get left, keeping them as broodmares. A few years ago Mr. Mendenhall disposed of him to a Mr. Sturgeon who resides at Hill's Ferry, San Joaquin County, where he was destroyed at the age of thirty, as he was unable to masticate his food. Thus ended the life of a noble animal that did not have the opportunities he deserved.

Yours truly, "ALTA."

No Culls at the Vineland Sale.

The synopsis of the closing-out sale of the Vineland Stock Farm in this issue represents the names of many of the finest-looking individuals horsemen should earnestly seek. All of them were selected and bred by one of the best judges of equine form in California who is compelled to sell in order to devote his whole time and attention to the stallions he has bred many of these mares to, viz: Alconeer, Grandissimo and Caducas, and give them low records. This sale will prove a blessing to many a breeder, for if these fine mares receive any show at all they will be heard from through their produce.

ACCIDENT, by Elmo, the dam of Wanda, 2:17¾, is one of the broodmares that will become famous. She is the dam of an Electioneer mare called Regina, owned in Redwood City that has trotted trials in 2:24; she is the dam of a colt called Rex, by Anteeo, that has trotted as a four-year-old a half mile in 1:11; Solita, a bay mare, two-year-old trial 2:38, record 2:41; Rinconado, a gelding (trial in 2:27), and a two-year-old filly that will enter the 2:30 list. These three are all by Eros, and therefore full sisters and brother to Wanda, 2:17¾. Accident is thirteen year sold, and will soon have a foal by St. Kilda, that magnificent son of Woodnut and Girofle that is in training in McManus' string, San Jose. Accident is young enough to have a number more good ones.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

Nevada as a Race-horse Region.

Wassau Rancho—From a copy of the Daily Nevada State Journal I learn that the original name of the valley in which Mr. Winters' breeding farm is located was Wassau, and that Washoe is a corruption of the title. It was so known for several years after its first settlement by white people, and when the territory had to be christened, previous to admission, there was a good deal of contention whether Washoe or Nevada should be the favored appellation. The last had a meaning, snow, and when on the highest peaks of the Sierras that were in constant sight, and being also high-sounding, when properly accentuated, the Spanish term prevailed. From the same journal I learn that Wassau Breeding Farm was the title of Mr. Winters' place, but I have presumed to change that to Wassau Rancho partly on account of being more euphonious and more in accordance with Pacific Coast usuages. I am also indebted to that paper for further information, a portion of which will be quoted:

"It is not known who was the first civilized being that gazed upon the beautiful meadows of the Truckee or looked across the Wassau Valley to the majestic Sierras beyond. His name has left no record. Some trapper or hunter perhaps, who was known to have penetrated thus far westward as early as 1832. But he who first saw them and has left a record was the Pathfinder, Lieutenant John C. Fremont, who came down on his explorations from Oregon in January. 1844, and who, on the tenth of that month discovered and named Pyramid Lake, and on the fifteenth came to the Truckee River, which he called Salmon Trout River. Another party of emigrants passed through to California the same year. When near the Humboldt an old Indian presented himself to act as their guide. He proved so faithful and useful that when they arrived at the beautiful Salmon Trout Stream, which Fremont had named, they rechristened it after him, the Truckee, a name which it will bear in history. For ten years immediately following 1849 no winter passed without finding belated trains of emigrants encamped at the feet of the stormy barriers of the Sierras, their stock recruting strength on the luxuriant grasses of the Truckee Meadows. These soon became famous as an oasis beyond the desert; the resting place for the last great effort of the long journey across the plains—the passing of the Sierras.

"The first actual settlement within the limits of Washoe county was made in 1852 by a man named Clark, who built a cabin on a lovely jutting ridge near the present site of Franktown. He named the place "The Garden of Eden." During the year following an emigrant who was known as "Old Man" Rose, settled near him, and a German named Christopher West located the ranch now owned by Theodore Winters."

When the "luxuriant grasses of the Truckee meadows" enabled emigrants to recruit their teams in the winter season it is good evidence that natural conditions are favorable for horse and cattle breeding, and with proper precautions to guard against occasional storms there will be little in the way of rearing first-class racehorses. So far as I can determine from two trips to Nevada, one of them late in the fall, the other in midwinter, the greatest drawback will be the absence of green herbage in the early months of the year, when compared with California, though no worse than in Eastern sections which have earned, and justly earned the title of "racehorse regions." The lack of green food when early foals come is certainly an objection unless a substitute can be found, and I am assured by people who have tested it carefully that cows fed on alfalfa hay will give nearly as much milk as when green pasturage is abundant, and that butter made, when it is fed, will be as richly-colored as that which is produced in May and June. I am also informed that alfalfa hay cured in Nevada is superior to the California crop, and hence it may prove that this wonderful plant will be a counterprise to the drawback mentioned. Should it be necessary to house mares and their young foals for any length of time that would be a serious trouble, but from what I have, learned there will be little if any greater drawback from that than when rainstorms of several days' duration prevail, such as are likely to occur in this State. The description of Wassan Ranche—that is, should Mr. Winters endorse that name for his place—will show what Mr. W—— has done to guard against inclement weather, and it seems to me that the precautions are ample guards.

Much has been written and printed, more has been said, in relation to the effects of elevation, the discussion being usually directed to the effects a lesser degree of atmospheric density on the lungs and bronchial tubes. As a rule debaters have argued that diminished pressure is advantageous and that the whole of the machinery of respiration is benefitted and that the blood is better from superior aeration. Muscular development is certainly not retarded by elevation, so that if lung, heart and muscular fibre are strengthened, it will be somewhat singular if that most potent of all forces in the make-up of a racehorse should be under an adverse influence when generated and matured in a lighter atmosphere than that of nearly an ocean level. That is the nerve force, the will power, mental status, or whatever term is used to denote resolution, game, courage, inflexible determination, the quality which is oftener found in the thoroughbred than in any other breed. Mainly through inheritance comes this valuable quality. Not entirely so, however, as members of the same family frequently differ, one possessing it in a high degree, others showing a deficiency.

The results of two or three years from now following the transfer of that portion of Mr. Winters' stud from California to Nevada will be of far greater value in coming to a correct conclusion than speculative arguments. Several brothers and sisters to celebrities which were foaled, reared and trained in California will be a capital test, the only varying conditions being birthplace and subsequent developments.

In one respect the Nevada horse will have an advantage, as having them at home will enable Mr. Winters to give them closer personal attention, and as every year increases the knowledge of a man who watches as closely as he does, any change made will be for the better.

The gallops at the track were finished in good time for lunch, and with an hour or so to spare to look around Reno before the train started for Carson and Virginia City—great improvements since my former visit. Then the track and fair grounds were on the other side of the river, and the present location is certainly an improvement, while course and buildings are also superior. Many new and fine residences, churches and schools, and with an air of all-around prosperity evident on every side.

Up the Wassau, passing fine farms, the celebrated Steamboat Springs, mountains to the left, the grand Sierras on the right, snow-clad and majestic. There is some freight for Mr. Winters, and we pass Washoe City, the regular station, and stop directly opposite the house, which nestles at the foot of the mountain, and partially hidden by a grove of deciduous trees surrounding the house, a large orchard on the slope between it and the meadows. Pleasant as it was at Reno, the air is certainly milder, notwithstanding the increased elevation. I was too anxious to see El Rio Rey to give much attention to matters of secondary interest, and the new barn was the first spot visited. I had not seen the world-renowned racehorse since the early spring when he was a two-year-old. Among all the colts of that age formerly seen there was such a difference that it was troublesome to place him. His size, although that was noteworthy, had little to do in making comparisons. It was the harmony of proportion, the symmetry of form and the evidence of power, taking into consideration that he was of the kind that requires maturity to bring to full perfection. A little ragged in the hips, feet if anything too big, not so much "quality" as many others, and yet there was that in his appearance which led me to think that here was the "flower of the family," and if that should prove a correct estimate he would stand on one at least of the pinnacles of fame.

The second inspection was fully as startling as the first. I anticipated changes, looked for improvements in the form when time, to the extent of nearly three years, had put on the finishing touches. From colthood to full maturity, from two to five years of age, is a momentous period in equine life. And yet I did not expect to see as perfect a job. The minor points which could be faulted by a hypercritical observer when the subject was a two-year-old were now overcome. The greater bulk of body and increase of bone and tendon had brought the feet in proportion, the filling up of the muscles on loin and quarters had taken away raggedness, and there was all the quality that could be desired. I have tried to overcome the tendency to say or write "that is the finest colt or horse I ever saw," but do not hesitate in this instance to publish that El Rio Rey will stand comparison with all the horses I have seen and not suffer from the juxtaposition. I do not intend to describe him minutely, and further than to say that he is a bright golden chestnut, rather more than 16 hands in height, the only measurement taken showed that he was 76 inches girth of chest, immensely muscular, but so well-balanced that when looking at him as he stood a few yards away he did not appear to be much more than a medium-sized horse:

Joe Hooker is a magnificent looking horse, in fact, for muscular development he can scarcely be surpassed. El Rio Rey has not such tremendous fillets as on each side of the backbone of Joe, but there is greater development of the muscles of the lower thigh, especially the inside of the gaskin, and there is more taper to them—a longer reach, it might be called, giving more elasticity and, consequently, increased freedom of action.

Two superb horses these stable companions, and when I give the preference to El Rio Rey it must be borne in mind that affection for Marion and her progeny may bias the judgment.

The "old mare" was looking well, though owing to suckling her colt until she was brought from California, some time in October, she was not quite in such high flesh as she usually exhibits. She is a grand milker, and should she hold the flow when debarred from the green pasture fields of Rancho Rio, it will demonstrate that alfalfa hay is entitled to all the encomiums awarded it as a milk-producing food.

Notable broodmares are generally bountiful suppliers of the lacteal fluid, the best of all pabulum for young foals. But those which are also entitled to high rank, and are inferior in milking qualities, have been in hands which supplemented the natural fountain with artificial food, or rather by extra care of the mother, using the milk of cows or something which will make amends for a diminished supply. That Mr. Winters will watch closely himself goes without telling a long story, and should there be indications that the dam is not affording sufficient nutriment, auxilliaries will be employed. Countess Zeika had a ten-days-old foal at her foot when I was there, and from its appearance and gambols through the paddock, its commissary department was plentifully supplied. There was a long look at El Rio Rey in the paddock, and plenty of time given to further consideration of Joe Hooker's form, remembered so well, as our acquaintance with him dates from the time he was a two-year-old, eighteen years ago. It hardly appeared possible that any horse could "lay over" him in a marked degree, and so another trip was made to the stall of the River King. Docile as a pet dog, intelligent, if intelligence is denoted by a lustrous hazel eye, handsome as a picture, big and strong enough to haul a ton on a sled or carry "sixteen stun" in the front flight of a fast run; a racing-looking fellow from every point of view. It is no great disparagement to Joe to give the younger a decided preference. A glance at the broodmares and yearlings was all that could be given, for the shadows of the big mountain were falling deeper and deeper over the valley and a longer inspection postponed until the next day.

That was still finer than its predecessor. I am quite an early riser and was fortunate in obtaining an early breakfast in company with Mr. Haskell, Mr. Winters' book-keeper, and ere the sun had risen above the crest of the eastern mountains started on a brief prospecting tour. There is a rapid mountain stream which finds its way through a cleft in the hills, the natural channel being a short distance from the house. It is tapped at an elevation which gives ample force to send the water supply to house and barns, and so it is useful as well as ornamental.

Up this was the route for the explorations of the morning. Above the upper range of barns the snow still covered the soil, and there was a "crust" which crackled under the footfalls—an old familiar sound if unheard for eighteen years, and in that invigorating atmosphere there was a feeling of returned boyhood, and if a hand-sled or a toboggan had been part of the outfit there would have been a strong temptation to climb far up the side of the mountain and coast downward at a speed that would be beyond the flight of El Rio Rey. Still upward, the music of the crisp snow-crust lending buoyancy and spirit to the tramp. A point had been marked for a resting place and observatory, and with an assurance that the view from that summit would be well worth the effort, I refrained from looking back until that was reached. At the base of the steep part of the mountain side a rounded knoll which deflected the course of the stream forming a small semicircle, beyond that a narrow glen with nearly perpendicular sides, and a huge bowlder on the summit of the knoll gave a few feet more of an elevation. There could not be a better station for an outlook, and when I turned to the eastward Wassau Valley was spread before the vision, a range of several miles apparently bounded on all sides by mountains. The eastern part of it was still in shadow, Washoe Lake divided into two parts, the western glowing in the sunlight, the eastern in a shade, black, then grey, then silver.

After gazing for several minutes I sat on the bowlder and lighted a cigar, admiring the grand scenery. Five hundred feet, at least above the top of Mr. Winters' house, as the topmost twigs of the tall pines passed on my way up now far below the level of the rock on which I sat; somewhere between six and seven thousand feet higher than tide water and yet there was no hindrance to respiration, and notwithstanding the crusted snow was on all sides, the air so bland that the temperature was in keeping with a quiet smoke. Comfortable? I could have sat there for hours enjoying the sunshine, the mountains piled upon mountains, those to the southeast appearing like huge masses of white clouds, the happy valley, the whole a dream of beauty.

I could easily understand the feeling which has prompted Mr. Winters to retain his home where it is, although I have frequently been at a loss to understand why he gave it the preference when the pick of California sites could have been chosen. He has made it his home for thirty-five years, and when away there must have been heart-yearnings to be among the mountains again. There are four thousand acres in the rancho, and from where I sat the greater portion of it was in sight. For four miles it takes nearly the whole of the valley, a great part of it so nearly level it can be flooded by the streams which run from the mountains, and to give an abundance of water, in the driest season five artesian wells have been sunk, and from them flow an inexhaustible supply.

Some years back, not very many at that, there was a different scene and from my point of advantage on the big boulder in place of quiet and tranquility and herds of cattle and bands of horses scattered over the plain there were the smoke of huge chimneys, the clang of heavy machinery, long strings of freight wagons, an army of men, the tumult and rush of a busy throng.

Where those few buildings now stand were the Ophir works, a stamp mill of seventy-two stamps to crush the ore which was hauled over the Ophir grade. Just around the point is the Bowers mansion, which cost in the neighborhood of $200,000, and some distance further along was Franktown, with a mill of sixty stamps. It is safe to estimate that millions of dollars were expended within the territory which is now embraced in Wassau Rancho, and in the many queer revolutions which the whirligig of time has made this valley has had its share.

One thing I learned from that morning expedition, that if at a further elevation of five hundred or more feet and with a coating of snow on every side, before the sun had gained an altitude to have much effect, I could sit in ordinary clothing, ungloved, and smoke a cigar entirely out without discomfort, and that in the middle of January, it should not be very unfavorable for horse culture. I got back to the house when the family were breakfasting, and not a late one as the children had to go about two miles to school, and then to the new barn to have another look at stallions, mares and colts. It will be in place to give a description of the new barn to show the latest provision that Mr. Winters has made for taking care of the brood mares and foals. The barns and stables heretofore erected gave a great deal of room and are well adapted for the stock which was formerly kept in Nevada, but the transfer of the California division compelled additional quarters, and in providing them Mr. Winters determined to build in a manner that would insure comfort in the most severe weather experienced in that section.

The building is 153x56 feet, and so substantially is the work done that from foundation to ridge pole there is not a weak spot to be discovered. The outside wall has double planking leaving an air space, the best non-conductor, and weather boards and roof heavily coated with fire-proof paint. There are 24 boxes 12x16 in the clear, and between them are stalls for weanlings and grain bins. Between the boxes and the central arrangements is a space giving ample room for exercise when outdoor work is prevented, and there are numerous water faucets so that this indispensable adjunct is convenient to every part of the building. The upper story affords ample storage for hay and straw, so much space that hundreds of tons can be stored in a loose shape, far preferable to bailing, the hay keeping better and with far less danger from spontaneous combustion.

Plenty of paddocks surround the building and lanes leading to the pasture fields. Comfort for the animals and convenience of those who are in charge of them has been carefully studied and to a good purpose. A large number of the mares, on the morning mentioned were grazing in the field which extended down the slope from the paddock line well on to the bottom. Singly and in groups they were scattered over the wide enclosed space busily engaged in feeding, every head down, until Jimmy Walsh whistled and called. Heads up, an instant of reflection to be sure that the summons was correct, and they came, as these mothers of race horses should come, with a flight of speed that was astonishing. Up that gentle grade, the front rank tossing their heads like colts at play, those behind with a steady rating gallop which proved that their early education had not been thrown away. Thirty or more in the band, some of them quite heavy in foal, those which were nearer "due" not being allowed the full liberty of the place, and with one exception all of them in prime condition. Here was another evidence that a Nevada winter was not so serious a drawback as outside people think, as I never saw a band of mares which looked better than these did at that time of the year. Ballinette was the exception. She had missed and was brought there sick, and that the sickness was a thing of the past was evident from the way she ran from the furthest part of the field, and not willing to stop after she was in the paddock, kept to her gamboling after the others were at rest.

The weanlings, or rather yearlings, as the first of January was a few days in the past, were turned into one of the paddocks, and it did not require more than one glance to select Yo El Rey from the collection of youngsters. Not that they were so much inferior in appearance, as a finer "bunch" would be difficult to gather on any breeding farm. But in the same way as El Rio Rey struck me when a two-year-old, this younger half-brother was a different looking colt from any I had previously seen. It is very difficult to express in words the distinction which marked him above his companions and other colts of the same age. Not size, as I have seen larger; not in quality, as others in the band had as much, [if not more, of that desirable element, but the happy balance, if the combination of good points may thus be termed, the whole make-up, the forcible impression, intuition, that there is a remarkable individuality which compels attention. He is a large colt, with immense depth of chest, quarters like a four-year-old, great barrel, gaskins and arms showing a volume of compact, muscular fibers, strong enough, though lacking a few days of twelve months, to carry a man; in short, a great deal more troublesome to find poor than good points. "Will he be long enough?" was Mr. Winters' query, that implying that he thought him deficient in that respect. "He is long enough now, and there is not one here which will measure more from point to point," was my response. "Yes, there is," replied Jimmy, pointing to the Lou Spencer filly, his favorite—a magnificent young miss after the Crucifix pattern. The tape showed that she was half an inch the longest, and after they were turned loose I did not feel quite satisfied with the accuracy of the measurement. "'Catch them again, Jimmy," was the order, but Jimmy admitted that he had favored the filly in holding the end of the line, and it was evident that he did not desire a recount to leave his candidate in worse shape than she was. The great depth of chest, big barrel and depth of quarters misleads the eye when estimating length. A handsome shade of bay, four white feet and white marking in his face are the color and marks of the brother of Yo Tambien, and as he will be a prominent factor in determining the availability of Nevada climate and soil for rearing racehorses, his future career will be watched with additional interest.

The Lou Spencer filly is not the only one which will come into prominence, albeit Jimmy, who takes as much interest in these youngsters as ever a fond mother felt for her babies; in fact, he is nearly as anxious about their welfare as a grandmother—gives her the preference. Not to bring in the colts, there is a bay filly by Hooker, from Countess Zeika, that I fancied greatly, and a bay filly from Bonita which is also promising. The colts by Hooker, from Jessie R. and Mattie Glenn, and one by the Prince of Norfolk, from Ballinette, are surely cast in a race-horse mold. The poorest colt in the paddock to look at was a Great Tom, from Florence A., but he was foaled late, and in all probability a few months will bring decided improvement. He is said to be a miniature copy of his sire, and as Florence A. is by Hooker, her dam Atlanta, it may prove, as oftentimes has been proved before, that the "runt" of to-day gains high honor in the future. Here will be another test in relation to the race horse breeding question in Nevada; that being whether "early foals" can come and possess the same advantages as those in California. The following is a list up to and including March 9th:

By Joe Hooker—
January 4th, Countess Zeika, b c.
January 22d, Marion, ch c, Rey del Sierras.
January 22d, Bonita, b c.
January 31st, Avail, ch f.
February 1st, Lou Spencer, b f.
February 8th, Addie O'Neil, ch f.
February 17th, Ogzille, ch c.
February 23d, Alice N., ch f.
March 7th, May B., ch c.
March 8th, Lady Dare, b c.
March 9th, Polly Vic, b c.

By El Rio Rey—
February 28th, Joanna, ch c.
March 8th, Blizzard, ch f.

The January and February foals can be termed early, and fortunately there are noted and tried dams to give the experiment a fair chance.

Marion's Nevadan has a hard start before him, as he will be weighed in the balance, on the opposite scale of which are so many high class race horses that it does not depend upon favoritism for the dam to rank her a true queen among all the queens of the turf.

In the paper of last week he was called Rey de la Sierra, but in a letter from Mr. Winters received a few days ago, he writes: "I like the name, Rey del Sierras, very well, and, as it is certainly appropriate, King of the Mountain goes." Then there is Countess Zeika with her distinguished progeny, and Question, the dam of Almont, Bonita, Lou Spencer and several more "dams of winners." I shall have great expectations that the daughter of El Rio Rey and Blizzard will do honor to her birthplace, and the Joanno colt is nearly sure to race.

I will postpone the history of the afternoon's trip, and it is well worth a chapter by itself. But I must say that the songs of meadow larks and robins were floating in the mid-winter air; not in the early morning when my seat was on the big boulder on the hillock at the gateway of the dark glen, and far above that the mountain crest, but caroling among the broodmares in the field, lilting from fence rail and hedge-row along the road, and singing vespers amid the ruins of Ophir, the pleasure grounds of the Bowers mansion and the scattered debris of the "Dall Mill."

Neither will it do to further delay the mention of one of the most distinguished of the equine inhabitants of Wassau, and whose owner said, with an emphasis that could not be misunderstood, or a doubt of sincerity, that she would not give her for El Rio Rey. That is a thoroughbred daughter of Three Cheers, the favorite saddle horse of Miss Nettie Winters. A handsome brown, resembling in many respects Lady Amanda, and with form and quality enough to please the most fastidious. Mr. Winters proposed to make an exchange, giving the Breckinridge—Sooner three-year-old in return. "Make the trade Miss Nettie," I said, "and get the El Rio Rey colt to boot." "No! I would not trade her for El Rio Rey and a lot more of the horses at the big barn," she replied. She was in the saddle when the conversation took place, and as the last word was enunciated she waved her hand and the beautiful mare, as though she understood the purport of the words and appreciated the compliment, went sweeping down the road at so easy a gallop that there was only a slight swaying of the plumes in the young lady's hat; a picture full of grace, the veriest poetry of motion.

I have watched with a great deal of pleasure the equestrians in the parks and on the rides of many of our large cities. Beautiful pictures to criticize which, with harsh remarks, is an evidence that the critic has little æsthetic taste in his composition. And yet there were discordant features. A tincture of conventionalism which betrayed the riding school, an artificial pose, a constrained seat, that stereotyped poise of the whip, lessons taught by gaslight, tanbark reminiscences, too much of the Clara de la Vere, not enough of the Di Vernon. A girl who has been reared from infancy in close companionship with horses, who has owned her own saddle horse, and a thoroughbred at that, before reaching the teens, to whom Nature has granted the pluck to give control of the most highly-mettled youngster, a fondness for, and an intuitive knowledge to handle the most obstinate, and in place of the riding school and its tanbark circle she has been favored by a residence among grass-clothed hills and plains and mountain trails, is far in advance of her city-bred cousin, not only in practical horsemanship but also excels in grace. Miss Nettie has enjoyed all these, and in addition thereto the form, which is the best adapted for graceful equitation. Tall and slender, "willowy" is the favorite expression nowadays, though the easily bent Salix has not snap enough to represent a horsewoman so skilled as Miss Nettie, and hickory, lancewood or ash a better emblem.

The racehorse boys came very nearly spoiling this high-strung daughter of a high-strung sire, and if her owner had not been accomplished in the art of managing horses of high temperament she would have been worthless outside of the breeding ranks. As it was she got a terrible fall owing to the breaking of a horn of the saddle when the filly was bucking with the intensity of a dozen wild bronchos. Few young ladies, however ardent in their fondness for the saddle, would have ventured again, but as soon as she had recovered in part from the severe "cropper," taking advantage of the absence of her mother on a visit to Sacramento, she completed the breaking, or it would be more proper to write finished the education of her favorite pupil, and now, in her hands, she is the embodiment of sense and docility.

In my early morning peregrinations I went into the stall of the daughter of Three Cheers, being attracted by her appearance, and there was a wicked gleam in her eye as a notice that she resented the intrusion. When with her mistress that fierce glance was replaced by a look of affection, and the ears, in place of being thrown back on her neck, were in a position not to lose the slightest modulation of the friendly voice.

A NOTED BROODMARE.—Last Tuesday I received a letter, of which the following is a copy:

DALLAS, TEXAS, March 10, 1892.

DEAR SIR:—I own the colt Electrite, by Electioneer, dam Sprite, by Belmont. I notice that Sprite was ten years old when she went to Palo Alto. Will you be kind enough—if possessed of the information—to give me something of her history before she was bought by Governor Stanford, telling me what colts she had before she was bred to Electioneer, and what has become of them? Thanking you in advance for this information, I am

Very truly yours, HENRY EXALL.

Inquiries of like tenor have been received from Sutherland & Benjamin, East Saginaw, Mich., owners of Sphinx, and from John E. Green, Esq., Glenview Stock Farm, Louisville, Ky., owner of Egotist and others who are interested in the progeny of Sprite and her noted dam, Waterwitch. Although I cannot fill all the blanks in the history of Sprite since she was brought to California, I can answer the most important queries. I think it must have been in 1876 or 1877 when Luke DuBois, of Denver, brought her here from Kentucky and sold her to Samuel Elmore, of Oakland, who sold her to Frederick Clay. Mr. Clay, a short time before the purchase of the mare, had returned from Australia, bringing with him a thoroughbred colt which he had purchased there. He invited me to visit the place where he lived, adjoining Colonel Jack Hayes' farm in the valley beyond Piedmont, and I then saw Sprite and the Australian. Mr. Clay moved to Mendocino county, California, to which he transferred his horses. I think he drove Sprite on the road before leaving Oakland, and sent Kelpie, the Australian, to Frank de Poister to train. In 1880 he brought Sprite to Oakland, then in foal to Kelpie, and traded her for another horse to Samuel Elmore, the first purchaser of Sprite in California, reserving the prospective foal. Mr. Elmore, through Budd Doble, sold her to Governor Stanford for $1200, and at the time was highly elated by receiving so much more than he anticipated, but since then has bitterly regretted the sale. The coming foal, of course, had to be reserved, and her first foal, now called Sanel, was foaled the spring of 1881 at Palo Alto. As Mr. Clay bought the sire of Sanel in Sydney, New South Wales, the colt was named Sydney, and was so known in Mendocino county, the change being made after I bought him, not wishing him to trespass on that of the famous Sidney. He was sent to Mr. Clay's ranch when a yearling. He was first broken—literally broken—by an Indian vaquero when two years old, who galloped over the hills of that mountainous country in true vaquero style. Mr. Clay died and the colt was sold to the parties who bought the ranch, the manager of which, Mr. W. E. Harvey, who sold him to me June 30, 1889. To hark back to a long ago occurrence which was indirectly the cause of my ownership of Sanel, when I came to California, I brought a brown filly one year old by Alhambra—a son of Mambrino Chief, his dam Susan, by American Eclipse, her dam Oriole by Blackbird 401 (the dam of Knap McCarthy's mare Anniversary). I presented her to an old friend of mine, who afterwards bought a ranch near that of Mr. Clay.

Knowing that there was a son of Sprite in Mendocino county I advised him to breed the Alhambra mare to him, which he did, and the produce, a black filly, I bought of him when a year old. I was so well pleased with her form and trotting action that I wrote to my friend to obtain a price on her sire, and that being satisfactory, I made the trip to Sanel, the railway station four miles from my friend's farm. On the way there Mr. Harvey overtook the vehicle I was in and I changed my seat to the cart which the horse was hauling. I was well pleased with the way he "handled himself," and well satisfied with his form, so that the purchase was soon consummated. A man was sent after him on my return home, and he reached here the 4th of July. Mr. Harney informed me that he had used him usually to the cart I saw, a heavy cumbersome affair, and that he was the best road horse he ever drove. For a while he made one of a four-horse team hauling grain from the ranch to Cloverdale, and he also gave him the credit of being a capital horse for that kind of work. There was a small splint on the inside of his off fore leg when I bought him. He was somewhat "touchy" when driven on the track, though his action was all that I could desire, and he was improving in speed faster than I anticipated, but in a short time, August 6th, he "struck" very lame in the same leg where the splint was. The suspensory ligament was affected, and I let him have a long run. When taken up he was jogged on the road for a time, again showing lameness. Taken up the last time in the winter of 1890-91, driven occasionally, but still "favoring" the bad leg, on March 12, 1891, I put him in a big stall 36x18, and that and with "runs" on the miniature track, and in the lot inside of the little track, has been his regular routine.

The leg looks better now than it has since first injured, and I intend to commence again with him in a few days, trusting that a full year of rest may have had a beneficial effect.

All that I shall say in regard to the prospect for him trotting fast is that if he stands the work I shall be greatly disappointed if he fails. He is a handsome horse, remarkably stylish in carriage and action, having rather more knee action than I fancy for a fast trotter. He is of the same color as his dam, a dark chestnut, resembling her more than he does his sire, a brown, and a good deal larger than his son. His granddam, Waterwitch, having a son by Bonnie Scotland which got a record of 2:22½, I was greatly in hopes that there would be a still faster grandson with a "further infusion" of racing blood.

Mr. Exall is mistaken in regard to the age of Sprite when she was taken to Palo Alto in 1881. She was nine years old, Spry having been foaled the spring of 1882. I learn from good authority that the big Benton gelding had his back injured when a colt, and that was the probable cause of his failure to obtain a far faster record than 2:28¾.

With three sons having records of 2:20½, 2:22½ and 2:28¾ Eclectrite, who has shown capacity to equal his brothers, and Sphinx, the sire of Gift O'Neer, who made 2:24¾ when a two-year-old, Sprite is certainly worthy of being the daughter of Waterwitch and the sister of Viking, 2:19¼.

A Successful Veterinarian.

In four years' practice upon this coast Dr. G. W. Stimpson, of Oakland (whose office is on Nineteenth street, near San Pablo avenue), has not lost a single case by his method of castrating horses—a remarkable showing, truly. The beauty of his work is that he performs the operation with the animal standing unsecured, and he is probably the only veterinarian in the country who does this in the manner mentioned. A number of the leading stock farms speak in the highest terms of Dr. Stimpson's work. Among the many cases he has operated on successfully were several horses that had reached the age of seven and eight years. Castration is a very dangerous operation when performed by an inexperienced person, and owners of valuable colts needing castration should call on this eminent veterinarian, Dr. G. W. Stimpson, who has been so successful in this work. *

THE purchasers of Florida and Gabrielle, two mares sold at the Palo Alto sale on the 24th of February by Killip & Co., will confer a favor by sending their names and address to Killip & Co., 22 Montgomery St.

United We Stand; Divided We Fall.

The lack of friendship or the prevalence of jealousy among many of the breeders of trotters on this Coast has been so often spoken of and written about that it bears the ear-marks of truth. This "characteristic" is so unlike everything else "Californian" that Eastern breeders marvel at it and wonder why it is so. No reason can be assigned for it except narrow-mindedness and egotism on the part of those whose wealth should place them above such a charge. Their judgment in regard to breeding has never been questioned, although they have never felt at liberty to help their fellow-breeders in any way.

Many of the breeders on this Coast are united—frozen together; it is about time for them to thaw. The warm sun of protection and the bright heat of competition with the East should dissolve this cold, icy mass, and bring to life the long-dormant ideas that, if once made known, would do more to solve the breeding problem than all the theories that might be advanced by men who never intelligently bred a mare nor understood what is requisite in a horse to make a campaigner.

Many breeders are so bigoted that they can never see anything good outside of their own pastures, and seem to be inseparably attached to the buildings wherein their stallions are. If they ever do venture away and stand face to face with trotters of other breeds than their own they are in a hurry to return to their loved retreats and puzzle their brains in trying to find words to depreciate the animals they saw. These breeders' colts and fillies multiply and are sold in the East. Such men at are never seen at the auctions here and never send a representative to purchase stock at the sales that take place in this State. Breeders, as a class, are not partial to such people.

In Kentucky or New York, whenever there is an auction sale, every breeder makes it a point to attend, and even if they do not bid, yet by their presence they show a spirit of friendliness in the horse business that is most commendable. Here in California the few breeders that attend our auction sales purchase from each other and introduce an exchange of representatives that is destined to improve their stock.

The old stock of California mares has not been excelled by the Eastern ones so far. The mares that are brought direct from the East have not proved as valuable broodmares as those that were here and known to be thoroughly acclimated. The small breeders know this to be true, and of the large number of trotters that got inside the "list" last year there were not ten that were the first-born of mares brought from the East and bred here.

Let us look forward to a wholesale conversion among the large breeders. There will be a number of auction sales held this year; let us see every one of our large breeders attend and "pick up" fillies and colts by our young California sires, and breed them to the trotting-bred horses and mares on their large farms. If the crosses that have proved so successful among animals that they deemed inferior to theirs, is there any reason why their stallions and mares will not produce even better ones? Let us, as breeders, throw down the bars of prejudice and jealousy and step into the broad field and help each other to bring to perfection the choicest representatives of man's best friend, "the trotting horse." Nature has generously lavished upon California the most glorious of climates. Let the whole world know that we have liberal-minded breeders whose views are broad, and whose sole aim is to produce the best, the most beautiful and the fleetest of all the equine race, and an era of prosperity will then dawn here—one that will attract the attention of others who will come and join the ranks of our progressive breeders.

Height, Bone and Lung-Power.

"A good-looking horse, but a trifle under-sized," is a remark you will often hear passed when trotter or galloper is the theme under discussion. Maybe the horse is not over 15.2 hands high, but yet may have proportionately larger and stronger bones and be deeper through the heart than his 16-hand stable companion. Good bone and immense lung-power should be sought after at all times in a horse for track or stud. Height should be a secondary consideration. As many great racehorses have been under 15.2 as over it. Of course, if you can get a tall fellow with wonderful lung-power and plenty of "substance," it is all very well, and nine out of ten persons would prefer such an animal to the squatty-built horse. A deep student of horse-breeding, a trainer of forty years' experience, declared the other day in favor of the medium or small racehorse. We refer to William Day, of England. He said it had been his experience that the horses of medium height (15.2) could beat the 16-hand or taller animal from a mile and a half up. We believe all hinges on whether the tall horse has the lung-power and the "bone." Longfellow and Enquirer, undoubtedly the greatest American thoroughbreds of their era, were both over sixteen hands in height, but they had bone, muscle and lungs in proportion to their height. Lexington "the Great" was just a trifle under sixteen hands. Eole was over sixteen hands high. His conqueror, Hindoo, was 15.3. Luke Blackburn and Bramble, champions in their day, were scant 15.2, but Bramble, especially, had a powerful body set on short legs. Volante, the famous California turf hero, was built very much like Bramble, while his stable companion, Lucky B., the great "cup" horse, was a giant in build, being about 16.3. Old Checkmate, who once defeated Hindoo, was a sway-backed, pot-bellied horse, very nearly sixteen hands high, with a wonderful depth through the heart. Kingston is anything but a tall horse, but has lots of substance. Tenny is called "the sway-backed runt." Leonatus was a big horse who was never headed in his three-year-old form.

Height, therefore cuts little figure, for we have had tall champions and sawed-off kings and queens. One thing noticeable, however, in all the best horses is good length of body. No short-bodied horse ever earned championship honors in America, and we never expect to see one do so.

Among the trotters we have had tall kings and queens and short-legged emperors and empresses. Flora Temple, Dexter, Goldsmith Maid, George Wilkes, Arab, Jay-Eye-See, Small Hopes, Guy, Director, Sable Wilkes and Nancy Hanks belonged to the last-named division, while Palo Alto, St. Julien, Maud S., Allerton, Smuggler, Phallas, Piedmont, Guy Wilkes, Temple Bar, Bonnie Wilmore, Stamboul, Nelson and Vic H. were all large horses. The horse to pick out is one with an intelligent head (size cuts little figure), wide through the jowls, strong neck of good length set on powerful shoulders, great depth through the heart, long body, but short back, and you want a long sweep from hip to hock, short, strong cannon bones, good-sized feet and clean, staunch forelegs. Legs, lung-power and length of body are the three important points to be observed in a horse, and when these come up to the ideas of the close observer, he is pretty certain to have a horse worth owning, whether short or tall. Many great performers have had ugly heads and short necks, but as they do not run or trot with these, the legs should be looked at first, the heart and lung region next, and the rest of the animal can be examined at leisure.

The Programme Delayed.

Although we have endeavored to get the programme of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, for some unexplained reason it was not ready in time for this issue. This is unfortunate, because the race meeting is advertised to commence three weeks from to-day, and every horse-owner and interested person is anxious to learn what the quality and quantity of the horses are that will compete. The Bay District track is being placed in readiness and the stables are being filled by thoroughbreds that are in training for this meeting. The programme will appear next week in these columns, we hope.

Newspaper Ethics.

"Thou shalt not steal" is an old and trite law, the enforcement of which lies at the very foundation of society. Every man is clearly entitled to the fruits of his own labor, and this fact has been recognized and recorded as the law ever since Jacob dug a well on the arid plains of the far East to obtain water for his people and his flocks and herds. As society has advanced, and by reason of settlement and the growth of intelligence, a multiplicity of rights to property have arisen which are as varied as the channels into which intelligent labor has been directed. For instance, the editor and publisher of to-day have as much right to the products of their brain and enterprise in compiling and presenting the news of the day as have the men who cultivate the soil for the crops which their labors are instrumental in producing.

Any man who will deliberately take the news and the editorials of a rival paper and re-write them is as guilty of theft as though he should steal a horse, paint over some of its markings and sell it as his own property. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN has noted, not a single instance, but a multiplicity of them, wherein our Eastern contemporaries have published, by correspondence from this city and otherwise, matter which has been all but bodily taken from these columns. It is poor policy. How our exchanges can afford to publish such matter as original news is beyond our conception of fair dealing. We trust that they will bring their correspondents in this city to an account, to the end that such action may cease.

Our Speed Track.

When the subscription list to build the speed track in the Golden Gate Park was opened, nearly all the gentlemen who were interested in driving subscribed liberally, expecting that the course would be kept in perfect order. The beautifully-colored descriptions of this driveway looked very inviting, and as these gentlemen paid their money they pictured to themselves a beautiful straight-away track rolled and harrowed level and smooth as a well-kept race track. The corps of employees busy filling the hollows or leveling the high places also seemed to add life to the picture they imagined. But alas, it was all a dream! The course, it is true, was completed, and while gazing at it from a distance it looks well, but the need of a little care upon it is observable as soon as the roadster strikes the soft ground, which is almost as uneven as a plowed field. In the morning it is soaked with water; and, as for rolling, scraping or harrowing it, such a process is never thought of. Instead of filling the purpose for which it was designed it answers the double purpose of springing the wheels of vehicles and crippling the horses that are speeded there. The Park Commissioners should put two or three good men and a team of horses to work on it immediately if they do not wish to see that "beautiful course to the sea" only used as a parade ground by the inoffensive policemen instead of being one of the principal features of the park.

THE original "thoroughbred" horse was a mixture of three breeds—Arabian, Turkish and Barb. This eventually produced a grand type of race horse, and observant breeders, seeing it, stopped bringing Arabians, Turks and Barbs over to England. They were satisfied with the type they had produced from a mixture of the three races. The trotter of the present is a mixture of the thoroughbred, pacer and "scrub"—that is, members of these races were mated years ago. Let us now follow in the footsteps of our thoroughbred-raising brethren, stop bringing in the thoroughbred, pacer or "scrub" and breed trotter to trotter. We may thus fix a fine type of race horse—at the diagonal gait—and in a few years the trotting-bred galloper may be just as scarce as the thoroughbred trotter. The thoroughbred of the present could easily distance all the purely-bred Arabians, Barbs or Turks, and when the time comes that a horse can show five or more crosses of good trotting blood on both sides of the house, there is reason to believe that he will know little but to trot, and trot fast. The business of breeding trotters is comparatively new now, but there will yet be a fixed type of trotter, to whom the gallop will be a gait almost unknown.

A MATCH was made last Wednesday that is certain to enthuse horsemen all over this country. We refer to the one between the stallions Allerton, 2:09¼, and Axtell, 2:12. The terms are $5,000 a side. Axtell made his record at three years of age and was sold by C. W. Williams, of Independence, Ia., to a Terre Haute syndicate for $105,000. Mr. Williams owns Allerton, and drove him last season in all his races. The horses are the same age, and while Axtell was Allerton's superior as a three-year-old, the race is sure to be a great one.

Classification of Trotting Records.

Mr. Edwin F. Smith, Secretary of State Board of Agriculture, sends the following list of horses with their trotting records for the purpose of classification for the current year, and says:

"I find the outlook quite promising, as will be seen by the classified list sent herewith, which will, no doubt, be of interest to the various associations in forming their programmes.

"I have classified them in such a way as would indicate the classes to be given to insure filling, and have only taken such horses as are in training and are likely to trot on the California circuit. I have not given slower that 2:28 class, as the 2:30 and 2:40 classes are generally filled by green horses, of which there will be the usual number this year, but from 2:28 up I would recommend the following classification.

"I may have omitted some horses that are in training and are eligible, of which I have no record, but the owners can readily see in what class they belong."

San Jose Colt Stakes.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of the San Mateo and Santa Clara County Agricultural Association. The races for the colt stakes will be trotted at the fair doing the week commencing September 26th. With the number of exceedingly well-bred and perfect trotting colts that are in this splendid district there is no reason why there should not be a large list of entries; the conditions are most liberal, and as can be seen by reference to the list of stallions whose produce can trot, they are all owned by the "small breeders."

THE make-up of the stable which Sanders will bring East from the Valensin Farm is as follows: Sid Fleet, 2:26½, three years, by Sidney out of Flight by Buccaneer; Smilax, three years, by Sidney, dam Ivy by Buccaneer; Red Sid, bay colt, three years, by Sidney, dam by Red Wilkes; Dictator Sid, bay colt, three years, by Sidney, dam by Dictator; Frou-Frou, 2:25½, chestnut filly, two, by Sidney, dam Flirt by Buccaneer; Fausta, 2:22¾, bay filly, two, by Sidney, dam Faustina; Oddfellow, bay colt, yearling, by Sidney, dam by Valensin; bay colt, yearling, brother to Gold Leaf, 2:11½; Faustissimo, bay colt, yearling, brother to Faustino, 2:14¾, and to Fausta, 2:22¾; Sans Souci, bay filly, yearling, by Sidney, dam by Buccaneer; Belle Helene, bay filly, yearling, sister to Dictator Sid; Carina, black filly, yearling, by Sidney, dam by Red Wilkes. Faustino will likely be sent to Sanders, and Sidney Boy and Mercury, two two-year-olds that were sold at the last sale in New York, may also come to his hands for the season. Altogether it will be the most remarkable collection that ever challenged the world, for in the whole string there will not be an aged animal.

AT A special meeting of the Capital Turf and Driving Club Directors on Saturday evening at the Golden Eagle Hotel, James W. Stafford was elected secretary, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of F. A. Jones, who is about to leave that city to enter into business in Portland. Mr. Jones can leave Sacramento knowing that the association has appreciated his labors in the past, and wish him success in his new undertaking.

KITTY IRVINGTON will not be reserved from the Whitney sale next month. She is by Dawn, 2:18¾, dam Nellie Irvington by Irvington 379; second dam Lady Allen by Geo. M. Patchen Jr.; third dam Old Peanuts (dam of Billy Hayward), by the Morse Horse. Her first foal is the eight-months-old filly Marchioness, that can beat a 2:40 gait.

HON. B. V. SARGENT has sold his black gelding Keno, record 2:23 (pacing), to a gentleman from New York who is now sojourning at Hotel del Monte. The horse left the race track here recently for Del Monte and will be shipped East to be used for a roadster. The price for which Keno was sold is said to be $1,250.—Salinas Journal.

THE fillies that will be offered by Mr. Whitney for sale next month are not only choicely-bred, but are good individuals, each one of them being a trotter. The few that will be offered are the cream that has been the result of years' skimming.

DURING his turf career of six years Kingston has won seventy-three races of a valuation of $114,671.

Naubuc as a Sire.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I accidentally came across a recent number of the Fresno Turf, a journal devoted principally to the horse. In an article by T. B. Merry on some of the early trotting celebrities he refers to the famous ten-mile mare Gipsey Queen and the success of her son, Thomas Jefferson 2:23½. As a sire he mentions his full brother Naubuc, the horse that I imported to California many years ago, as being a comparative failure. I have often heard it said that "opportunities made men," and the same can be said of horses. When Naubuc first came to California good broodmares were scarce. The class of mares I owned and bred to him were farm mares, selected more for their usefulness to raise general utility and road horses than wtth any view of getting trotters, but whenever Naubuc was fortunate enough to get a good mare he got colts of a high order. The first colt I raised by him was out of a common farm mare. Most of the horsemen of twenty years ago will recollect him He was called Jim Munroe, and trotted in a three-year-old race at San Jose against a Belmont colt, the only other starter out of seven or eight entries. Munroe won this race handily in about 2:56 or thereabouts, trotting the last half in 1:20. He could show better than a 2:30 gait easily, and would have made a great racehorse, but the prevailing epizootic attacked him the following year which disabled him from further racing. This was the only colt I ever tried to do anything with. Mr. A. Patterson, of Alvarado, bred some good mares to Naubuc, and got a class of colts that should have been race horses had they got the proper advantages of training. He had a colt called Don Pedro that I have seen trot in 2:35 in his work; this would have made a great colt, but got disabled in a runaway. After Naubuc went to Napa county his chances for getting well-bred mares were more limited than before, yet under adverse circumstances he got some colts that should have made great horses. Mr. H. W. Crabb owned a black colt by him that, as a four-year-old, with less than one month's training, taken out of a vineyard plow, trotted a winning race in 2:42 at Vallejo. It is a well-known fact to all the local horsemen there that he could trot better than 2:30.

Burton, by Naubuc, out of a mare by Dashaway, was a great horse. He was used on the road and in livery until he was ten years old, and then trained and raced. No one that ever saw him trot would doubt his race horse qualities. He was a large horse, over seventeen hands high; he was a little slow getting off, but when under headway was steady as a clock. He trotted three races in four days at Napa the fall of 1888. On October 3d he won the district 2:40 class in straight heats, 2:30½, 2:33½, 2:32. October 4th, the following day, he trotted third in the race in which Direct made his three-year-old record of 2:23. On October 6th he won third money in a five-heat race in a field of five horses, trotting second to Mount Vernon in the third heat in 2:22½. Burton's further development was stopped by a kick, which disabled him. Had he not met with this accident, his owners were willing to trot him two-mile heats against any horse in the State. There is no question that Naubuc mares, when out of dams of any breeding, will breed speed and gameness.

Eva W. 2:23½, is out of a Nanbuc dam. I see that when J. Malcolm Forbes went to Palo Alto to purchase the great Arion he also purchased an Electricity filly out of Eva W. Redwood, 2:27, is out of a Naubuc mare. The mare Etta, by Naubuc, owned by Mr. Crabb of Oakville, is destined to be a great mare; she is the dam of Cora C., 2:28½, and Like Like, three years old, 2:31. Every colt this mare has shows speed of a high order. There is every reason to expect Naubuc to breed on. His sire, Toronto Chief, was a trotter, one of the best of his day; he had a record of 2:24¼ to saddle, his dam, Gipsey Queen, was a noted long-distance race mare, with a ten-mile record of 28:39. His full brother, Thomas Jefferson, 2:23½, known as the "black whirlwind" of the East, was as game a horse as ever trotted and a good sire; he has fourteen in the 2:30 list, three below 2:20, all records earned in contested races.

I have written these few lines in defense of a horse whose qualities remained buried to the public, whose opportunities kept him down, nevertheless we will find his name in the pedigrees of some of the coming trotters. Yours,

BARLOW J. SMITH.

Petaluma Pencilings.

Wilfred Page & Bro.'s bay mare Contra, by Electioneer, foaled on 13th inst. a chestnut filly by Dexter Prince; this credits the old lady with two foals inside of eleven months, as her previous filly by Mambrino Wilkes (sire of Balkan, 2:15) was dropped on April 14, 1891. Electioneers breed fast, as well as speed, it appears.

J. H. White, of Lakeville, is the owner of a black stallion colt foaled last week by his game and speedy mare Hittie Almont, 2:22¾, she by Tilton Almont, 2:26. The sire of this colt is Eclectic, brother to Arion, 2:10. He has also from the same mare a yearling filly by that Beau Brummel of the turf, Stamboul, 2:11. "Si" is in the swim once again, and long may he wave there.

It behooves every stockholder of the American Trotting Register Association who cannot be personally present at the annual meeting of the association in Chicago next month to send his proxy to somebody in the East that will. Those who believe that that the "trotting sire of trotters only" can be bred in the course of time and by careful selection should instruct their proxies how they desire to vote on this vexed question. There is no doubt but that on the admission or rejection of the pacer to "the standard" will depend the feasibility of at some time or other starting and maintaining a "standard trotting register." Trotting "purists" may be laughed and sneered at now, but the breeder who sticks to that idea and breeds to that type will win in the end—and he will and must have a register sooner or later.

Arion, 2:10¾, stands at $2500; his undeveloped brother, Athel, stands at $500. The former in Boston, the latter in New Jersey. In California another full brother Eclectic, stands at $200. There is money in breeding the trotting horse in California, but it does not look as though stallion-owners on the coast got their dues. FOLIO.

A. L. WHITNEY is preparing a catalogue of his mares, colts and fillies that he will offer for sale at auction. The list includes every trotter he has, and all who know this gentleman have faith in his judgment as a breeder.

Successful Stallion Exhibition.

In all the older States, before the advent of turf journals, with their lists of correspondents, it was customary to have stallion exhibitions early in the spring. The days when the sons of Justin Morgan, Hill's Vermont Black Hawk, the Woodbury Morgans and the Durocs were paraded at the fair grounds in New England are still remembered by many of our older citizens, who never weary of telling of the crowds of people that gathered from all sections of the country to see how the horses compared with each other and to make terms in regard to breeding. The turf annals of those times were replete with descriptions of how proudly these stallions marched and pranced, almost spurning to step heavy on the sod. With their beautiful, small heads, proudly-arched necks, round bodies, short legs, full manes, and tails that were always carried high, these horses would parade up and down, showing their short, trappy action, and while galloping to and fro the chroniclers of these events delight in telling us of "the great ease with which they carried their riders so gracefully and so comfortably." That this custom of giving stallion exhibitions was but one of the many "heirlooms" that the Revolution did not obliterate is admitted. Although our forefathers disdained to be known as imitating or copying anything that had a trace of the royal serfdom or had been associated with the tyrannical powers of England's rulers, still the old love for the "fair" days, when the fine stock were gathered from near and far, was as strong within their bosoms as any of the other bright remembrances of their childhood's days, and to carry out the same plans, but in a more modified form, seemed to them to be quite proper. The absence of booths, games of chance, theatrical strolling players, and all the noises that characterize the fairs in the United Kingdom were omitted by these loyal Americans, and in carrying out their ideas of what a display of beautiful specimens of the equine race should be they endeavored to instill in the minds of their children a love of gentleness, a spirit of kindness and a high regard for the welfare of man's best friend that time has never effaced. The animal or "horse shows" were looked forward to with as much interest by the people as they were by the owners of the horses. Consequently the little rivalry that was occasioned among the various participants regarding the merits of their respective animals was productive of much good, and useful knowledge was gleaned from the discussions about the merits and demerits of the animals exhibited.

In California there is a growing demand for these exhibitions, and those agricultural districts that are foremost in having them, seem to be doing more to encourage the horse interests than those who are not quite so progressive. There was a stallion exhibition at Livermore two weeks ago which attracted a large number of people. The Santa Clara Valley Association advertised a free stallion exhibition at the race track last Saturday, and many admirers of horseflesh came from San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda, Contra Costa, San Benito and Monterey counties.

There were fully a thousand people in the grand stand and in the quarter-stretch when the horses were called up in front of the judges' stand, in which were to be seen D. J. Murphy, G. H. Bragg, T. H. Hobson and several other members of the Association. The horses presented a splendid appearance, and the number of good ones exhibited far exceeded that of any previous year. The absence of any "man-killing" stallions was noticeable; all of them seemed to be entirely under restraint, and acted as quietly as could be expected, considering their close proximity.

The standard trotters were a most excellent collection, representing not only the very best and most fashionable strains, but also many that had made low records in hard-fought races on the turf, and were now coming into fame through the transmission of their good qualities to their progeny. To give a description of each and every one would take up too much space, so we will merely give the name, color, breeding and owner's name, as follows:

After these horses had been called up and were paraded in front of the stand. As each passed the judges announced the names, pedigrees and price of service fees of each of them. The heavy stallions were then led on to the inside track and the trotters and pacers were driven to show their different gaits. The critical audience compared notes and criticised the different individuals, and long after the horses were in their stables they lingered talking over the events of the day.

The English Hackney stallion was highly spoken of, and we doubt if his equal ever arrived in America. For variety and excellent individuality the collection to-day stands far ahead of any like exhibition in this State.

Before leaving, a look at the various stables where the thoroughbreds were kept disclosed the fact that there were many great stake winners among the lot. We herewith publish a complete list of the horses in training there:

The Eastin & Larabie String in Training.

Louisville correspondence Chicago Horseman: One of the most prominent stables here is that of Eastin & Larabie, which is in the hands of that expert trainer, Doc Morris. Morris is a trainer who has often been accused of being the slowest man that ever undertook to fit a horse for a race, but it is worthy of notice that whenever he sends a horse to a post he is right up to a race. His intelligent handling of High Tariff and Poet Scout last year will forever mark him among horsemen as a careful and successful trainer. He will this season handle that good colt Michael, who was so horribly butchered last year and rendered useless for the year early in the season. In the hands of Morris that good colt may be brought to that phenomenal form he exhibited at Lexington early last season, when he was run off his feet.

The following is a list of horses now being trained by Mr. Morris:

Michael, ch c, 4, by imp. Glen Athol—Verbena.
Poet Scout, b c, 4, by Longfellow—Gypsy.
Carlsbad, b c, 3, by imp. Glenelg—Lady Wayward.
Lake Breeze, b f, 3, by Leonatus—Eva S.
General Miles, b c, 3, by Falsetto—Hypatia.
Decapod, b c, 2, by Sir Modred—Christina.
Julia K., b f, 2, by George Kinney—Julia L.
Gypsy Girl, ch f, 2, by Sir Modred—Gypsy.
Alice Brand, ch f, 3, by Hindoo—Lady of the Lake.
St. Cuyer, ch c, 2, by St. Blaise, dam by Baden-Baden.
Teddy, ch c, 2, by Regent—Ordinance.
Halma, b f, 2, by Hindoo.
King Leo, b c, 2, by Leonatus.

This is the string that Mr. Morris will take out on the circuit this season, and there are some very promising ones among them. Of the lot Poet Scout is the best, with the possible exception of Michael, of whom Mr. Morris is not yet quite certain as to how he will stand training. But of Poet Scout there can be no question as to his stamina and quality. He has rounded into his four-year-old form a model Longfellow. He has shown more improvement in the last year than is generally seen even in the get of that sire, whose colts are rarely ever fully developed before they are four-year-olds. Poet Scout is entered in the Suburban handicap at an impost of 118 pounds, and will start if everything goes well with him. He showed speed and staying qualities last year that marked him as a first-class colt, and he gives promise of being a much better four-year-old than three-year-old.

Brookside Farm.

Mr. N. J. Stone, proprietor of the Brookside Farm, Santa Clara County, recently secured the services of Humphrey Sullivan, the well-known trainer and conditioner of trotters, as superintendent. The appearance of the premier stallion, Election, shows what an improvement can be made in a horse when cared for by such an artist as he. This horse has not only improved in appearance but also in his way of moving; that he will enter the 2:30 list this year unless some accident befall him is a foregone conclusion. A number of well-bred mares are entered on his books by horsemen who have seen this handsome stallion and his progeny. His pedigree appears in our advertising columns, and by reference to it our readers can see that he traces to the very choicest of trotting families.

A kindergarten some 250 by 75 feet has just been completed; here the youngsters are given their daily exercise. Mr. Sullivan is confident that he has some that will achieve fame on the turf, and everyone who sees the youngsters trot coincides with him in that opinion. There are two colts here by Sable Wilkes that would bring a feeling of pride to Mr. Corbitt, were he to see them trot; one of them is out of a mare called Abdallah Queen, by Odd Fellow (a son of imp. Chloroform), and the way this beautiful fellow trots is a revelation to all who have heretofore considered that Sable Wilkes, as a sire, would not cross well with thoroughbreds. This youngster has a head, ear and eye that would attract attention anywhere, and a more perfect-gaited little fellow would be hard to find. Another colt by Sable Wilkes is out of Lady Bayswater, by Bayswater (son of Lexington and Bay Leaf); he is another exemplification of the merits of his sire as a "gait-controller." This fellow is a "hummer." Roy Wilkes, 2:08½, is represented by a bay filly, out of Happy Signal, by Brigadier 2:21, and if she does not enter the gates of the 2:30 circle at a 2:25 clip there will be more than one person disappointed. That game sire of campaigners, Director, will always have a staunch supporter in his son that is trotting so squarely and speedily here under Mr. Sullivan's tuition. This ebony-hued trotter is out of Lodi Princess, a mare by Dexter Prince, second dam by Black Boy (brother to Sisson Girl 2:28½), by McCracken's Black Hawk. When his days of racing are ended, what a sire he will make?

The Election filly out of Clara Belle, by Alaska, is a splendid individual, and one that would be hard to excel on any farm in California.

All of the broodmares and yearlings are looking well on this new stock farm, and as the owner has not restricted himself to any particular trotting families from which to select his broodmares, the youngsters that will be foaled during the next three months will demonstrate Election's worth as a transmitter of his individuality.

Orange County "Horse" Notes.

SANTA ANA, CAL., May 13, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—As your paper has quite a large circulation in this county, perhaps a few notes from the county seat would be read with interest by the numerous horsemen in the adjacent towns.

I think it is safe to say that there is not a horseman living on this southern circuit but that anticipates much pleasure from the meetings to be held next fall, to say nothing of the sensational performances they hope to witness during the local spring races, that will probably be held on the first day of May.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Thirty-Second District Agricultural Association, held yesterday, a committee was appointed to make arrangements for holding a spring meeting for the local horses, and as they have had some experience with outside "ringers," it is to be hoped that the local horsemen will take enough interest in the meeting to make it a grand success. A committee was also appointed by the board to put the race track in first-class shape, to keep it so during the summer months, and to collect $1 per month for each box stall or for the privilege of driving on the track. Parties paying $1 per month for a box stall have free use of the track commencing on the first day of April.

Upon opening the entries for the colt stakes it was found that race No. 1, three-year-old trotting stake for foals of 1889, contained eight entries; race No. 2, two-year-old trotting stake, for foals of 1890, seventeen; race No. 3, two-year-old pacing stake, for foals of 1890, one; race No. 4, yearling trotting stake, for foals of 1891, thirty; race No. 5, yearling pacing stake, for foals of 1891, nine. Upon motion the races were all declared filled and closed except Race No. 3, which was declared off.

The large number of entries in race No. 4 probably comes from the fact that the Silkwood and McKinney youngsters have received a great deal of free advertising. But judging from present appearances, if they think they will have a "walkover" on the day of the race they are very much mistaken. Of course all of the Orange County people, with a few exceptions, think Silkwood invincible, both as a race horse and a producer, and it is to be hoped that the challenges that have appeared in the local papers over the signature of the respective owners of these horses will in the future prove to have been intended for something more than a free advertisement.

W. K. Robinson sold to J. W. Blee a McKinney colt last week for $500. Although this colt is but eight months old, Mr. Blee has placed it in the hands of our local trainer, L. J. Felton, to be worked for the fall races. Both the trainer and owner hope to have the pleasure of starting it against any or all the Silkwood youngsters, and it is needless to add that they will have an opportunity to do so.

"BEN FISH'S COMET."

History of a Game Race Horse and Sire of Trotters in the "Early Days."

"Ben Fish's Comet was a grand horse, but it's a pity we can't find out more about him," has been remarked by old horsemen in this State and Oregon scores of times. Numbers of magnificent trotters on this coast trace back to this stallion, but here a stone wall always loomed before the eyes of the pedigree-hunter that, like Banquo's ghost, refused to down, and no further could they go. Efforts of horse historians to lift the curtains of uncertainty which seemed to shroud the breeding of Ben Fish's Comet were unavailing—in this the land where he first saw the light, at least..

The questions, "Give breeding of Ben Fish's Comet," "Was Fish's Comet a thoroughbred or of Morgan blood?" and "Will some of your readers please tell me something about Ben Fish's Comet?" have been asked so often that the "Answers to Correspondents" man has grown prematurely gray in his despair. At last we can answer all these questions at one time, and is is through the kindness of Ben Fish, Esq. (Postmaster at Santa Clara, Cal., now about seventy years of age), and William J. Casey, also of that place, that we are enabled to do so. They have furnished us with a good photograph of Ben Fish's Comet, a certificate on which his breeding is given, some letters from M. H. Wallace, who leased the horse, stood and raced him in Oregon in 1863-64-65, and a number of newspaper clippings detailing some of his races in the Webfoot State.

In 1855 Mr. Fish went East from California to Vermont and purchased for Mr. Easton, of San Francisco, a horse well-known in after years as Easton's David Hill. This ho se was by Vermont Black Hawk, and for several years was regarded as about the best bred trotting stallion on this coast. While on this trip Fish tried to purchase Ethan Allen, offering for him $10,000. The latter horse's owner was quite indignant, and declared that this sum "would not buy Ethan Allen's tail." Being unsuccessful in his efforts to secure the then champion stallion, Mr. Fish purchased David Hill. He also on this trip made arrangements for the delivery at San Francisco the year following, 1856, of the young brown Black Hawk horse, Comet. The consideration was $1,750. His correct name was Morgan Black Hawk Comet, and he landed at the city by the Golden Gate in good shape at the time stipulated in the contract. The horse's picture shows him to be a typical Morgan. He carried his head as proudly as any emperor, and it was a clean-cut, gamey-looking and shapely head; his ears were small, his neck beautifully formed and of good length, and his shoulders were powerful in the extreme. Comet's forelegs were calculated to suit the most fastidious, and his arms showed lots of muscle with all their shapeliness. He had a long mane and a beautiful tail that almost touched the ground. His barrel was long and well-rounded, and the depth through the heart denoted that he was built to "stay the route." Comet had the regular trotting rump, and from hip to hock there was a long sweep. From hock to ground he was of average length, and the horse stood with his legs well under him. From his picture he reminds us very much of Guide, 2:16¼. In his day "Fish's Comet" was almost invincible in five-mile races, and considering the tracks of the era, the time he made was exceedingly good. Following is his pedigree, as given to us:

Morgan Black Hawk Comet, sired by Young Black Hawk, son of Vermont Black Hawk 5, he by Sherman Morgan, son of Justin Morgan. Morgan Black Hawk Comet's first dam was by Morgan Tally Ho; second dam by Andrew Jackson 4. Morgan Tally Ho was by Woodbury Morgan (son of Justin Morgan), dam by Tally Ho.

Comet won a number of races at Sacramento and elsewhere in 1859-60, and stood for public service at San Jose until 1863, when M. H. Wallace leased the horse and took him to Oregon. He stood at Albany, Corvallis and Peoria (mostly at the latter place), and was returned to Mr. Fish at the end of season of 1865, being twelve years old. In Oregon he was considered the best trotting stallion in the State, and his colts were uniformally large and excellently-gaited. He beat Van Bergen's Mohawk at Portland, leading his rival all the way in a five-mile dash. The miles were made in 3:08, 3.09, 3:02, 3:04, 2:58, or 15:21 for the five miles. Comet was beaten by Emigrant in the same kind of race, but this was due to a series of disastrous breaks and lack of condition. The drivers forgot how many times they had made the circuit, and went six miles. In the last mile Comet, after a bad break, struck his gait again, overhauled Emigrant, and got home half a length ahead after losing at least four lengths by the break. He did the last mile in 2:55, and the five miles were trotted in 14:39.

Returning to California in 1866, the horse stood at Santa Clara until he died, which was in 1878. If Comet had secured mares with breeding anything like as good as his own, that he would have made his mark as a sire of fast horses is certain, We are happy to be able to throw some light on the gloom that hung over the breeding of Morgan Black Hawk Comet, who was undoubtedly one of the best racehorses of his era, and a royally-bred one, too, as it happily turns out.

Saratoga Racing Association.

Thoroughbred owners should be happy in contemplation of the amount of money their flyers can win during the racing season of 1892. Saratoga Racing Association assists largely every year in making racing men and the public happy, but this season that organization has added a number of valuable stakes to their already long list. The Saratoga Racing Association aims to revive interest in that class of racing which tries the stamina and gameness of horses—steeplechasing—and with that object in view has instituted the Beaverwyck Steeplechase Stakes (guaranteed value, $2,000), the Kensington Hotel Stakes (guaranteed value, $1,500) and the Okolona Steeplechase Stakes (guaranteed value, $1,500). Then there are the usual rich stakes contested for over the flat. The Flash Stakes, for two-year-olds, guaranteed to be worth $3,000; The Foster Memorial, for all ages, a handicap, guaranteed to be worth $2,000; Congress Hall Stakes, handicap, all ages, guaranteed $2,000; Merchants' Stakes, guaranteed $3,500; The Spencer Handicap, all ages, guaranteed value, $5,000; United States Hotel Stakes, for three-year-olds, guaranteed value, $2,000; Grand Union Hotel Stakes, for two-year-olds, value at least $2,000; Trenton Stakes, handicap for two-year-olds, guaranteed value $1,750; American Hotel Stakes, Troy Stakes, Alabany Handicap, Morrissey Stakes, Hudson Stakes and Watkins Glen Stakes, not one of less value than $1,500—at least the Saratoga Racing Association guarantees them to be worth that, and that should be sufficient. In another column will be found the advertisement of the famous Saratoga organization, containing conditions in all the stake races. Do not fail to read it and enter liberally, also bear in mind that entries to them close April 1, 1892.

New Catalogues.

The Witch Hazel Farm catalogue is at hand. Hambletonian Mambrino 5341 (sire of Jane L., 2:19½, Fred Hambleton and others) is the premier stallion at Mr. De Lashmutt's farm, ably abetted by Duke of Portland 12,939, by William L. (sire of Axtell, 2:12), dam Miss Leggatt, by Mambrino Star 585; Pilot Champion, by Pilot Medium (sire of Jack, 2:12½, Lady Bullion, 2:16½, etc.), dam by Royal Champion; Blondie, 2:24½, by Lemont, dam by Frank Chapman; and Vanquish, by Hambletonian Mambrino 5241, dam Nautilla Jr., by Rockwood 1467. The mares at Witch Hazel Farm (Reedville, Or.) are by Nutwood 600, Hambletonian Mambrino, Altamont, Adirondack, Woodbury, Georgia Wilkes, Bellfounder 62, Kisbar 1273, Rockwood 1467, Nig, Gov. Sprague Jr., Alwood, Oregon Pathfinder, Resolute 4458, Hartwood 1213, Lemont 12,718, Hambletonian 725, Milton Medium 4782 and other good sires, and Mr. De Lashmutt has shown by these selections that he understands his business. The catalogue is neat typographically and compiled in good shape, and we predict that Witch Hazel Farm will become famous as the home of fast and game horses ere many years have rolled around.

The catalogue of Glenview Stock Farm, Louisville, Ky., has arrived. It is an exceedingly neat volume of 122 pages, complete in every detail. At the head of the Glenview stud stands Egotist, 2:22½ (brother to Sphinx), by Electioneer, dam Sprite, by Belmont 64. Though only seven years of age Egotist has sired Betsy Britton, 2:29½ at three years. Artegall is another California stallion who is destined to take a place in the stud, but he is now only a yearling. He is by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, dam Clarinda, by Nutwood 600; second dam by Mambrino Patchen. Other stallions at this noted farm are Sol, 2:30, by Nutwood, dam Sunshine, by Golddust (sire of Lucille Golddust, 2:16¾); Hermann, by Nutwood, dam Hermia, by Woodford Mambrino, 2:21½; Fincastle, by Egotist, dam Nadir, by Dictator; Greenland, by Greenlander, 2:15½, dam Sunshine, by Golddust; Bishop Dudley, by Egotist, dam Belle Dudley, by Belmont 64; Bonapartist, by Egotist, dam Bonnie Doon, by Aberdeen; Claymore, by Phallas, 2:13½, dam Clabata, by Harry Clay 45; Lucre, by Earl, dam Lucina, by Cuyler; Orion, brother to Fincastle; Stonewall, by Egotist, dam Dixie Sprague, 2:25½, by Gov. Sprague, 2:20½, and Trotwood, by Phallas, dam Matilda, 2:30, by Nutwood. The broodmares are by Dictator, Belmont 64, Argyle 772, Egotist, Blue Grass Hambletonian (2:19¾), Aberdeen, Nutwood, Harry Clay 45, Princeps, Gov. Sprague, Harold, Director, Robert McGregor, Woodford Mambrino, George Wilkes, Pancoast, Cuyler, Kentucky Prince, Phallas, Onward, Harry Wilkes, Epaulet, Pilot Mambrino, Whirlwind, Brown, Guy Wilkes, Sable Wilkes and Electioneer—a grand collection, surely.

THE highest-priced colt does not always make the fastest trotter or the greatest sire. Blood lines minus individual excellence is not very far from a blank.

IT never pays to bid a horse in at a sale, as a decline in his value sets in from that hour and keeps getting lower and lower as the weeks roll by.

HE'S ABOVE IT ALL.

Don't tell HIM that his stallions waste themselves by self-abuse! They wouldn't do a thing like that! They'd have too much respect for him and his bank-account.

Well, whether they do or don't, just at this moment, doesn't matter. For the fact remains that they WILL, brother, sooner or later; and the best thing that you can do is to take no chances. The Perfection Stallion Guard prevents the habit utterly, and without the least injury.

If your stallions haven't begun the practice yet (and you are the only one who believes that), so much the better. Use the Perfection on them now, and you can be sure that they never will.

SUMMARY.

The exhibition recently given by the O. A. C. was a great success. The "Gentlemen's Night" of the Acme Athletic Club of Oakland, which took place last Tuesday evening, was very interesting and the event of the occasion, a wrestling match between Swain and Shanley, proved to be highly exciting. It is to be regretted that the students of the University are trying to break loose from the P. A. A. U.

THE ATHLETES, WHEELMEN, OARSMEN, CRICKETERS, ETC.

About 800 members of the Olympic Club were present in the gymnasium on Tuesday evening, March 8th, when began the boxing and wrestling tournament. The first night was confined entirely to the knights of the mat, and some splendid wrestling was enjoyed. Eugene S. Van Court and J. M. Brewer especially distinguishing themselves by their really clever work. The matches resulted as follows: C. Kreling threw C. A. Reno in 3:53, and again in 3:05. C. W. Hawks won two straight falls from J. B. McCullough in 1:42 and 22 minutes respectively. Eugene S. Van Court defeated J. M. Brewer in two straight falls in two minutes and 26:45 respectively. H. S. Russ won two falls from C. E. Cutler in 14:02 and 2:15 respectively. G. W. Mertes defeated E. W. Winslow. On the second night of the tournament the crowd was even larger and the members were very liberal in applauding the boxers. The following is a summary of the boxing events: E. Pinkus, S. F. A. C., 116 pounds, defeated F. Kenney, unattached, 117½ pounds, in four rounds. J. J. Egan, Alpine A. A. C., 134½ pounds, defeated J. B. Hill, unattached, 140½ pounds, in three rounds. F. Skuse, S. F. A. C., 115½ pounds, defeated F. Coughlin, unattached, 115 pounds, in eight rounds. L. Wiggins, unattached, 143 pounds, stopped J. McBrearty, unattached, 148 pounds, in three rounds. A. Williams, O. A. C., 128 pounds, defeated E. Valento, unattached, 132 pounds, in four rounds. H. L. Fabry, unattached, 138 pounds, defeated J. H. Kennedy, unattached, 141 pounds, in five rounds. During an intermission Ben Bogner and a member of the juvenile class gave an exhibition of a "fake" knock-out match. It was a splendid imitation, and the act was loudly applauded. The style of wrestling was catch-as-catch can, two out of three falls. The winners of both the boxing and wrestling matches will be presented with handsome prizes. On the last night of the tournament the athletes who won the bouts at the wrestling tournament which was held in the O. A. C. rooms in January last were presented with their medals.

It was "Gentlemen's Night" at the Acme Athletic Club of Oakland on Tuesday evening last, and the gymnasium was packed with members who took great interest in the proceedings. Several of the Olympic Club boys very kindly volunteered to lend their services which were highly appreciated. The programme consisted of boxing by Billy Gallagher and his trainer, Martin Murphy; Andrews and McDonald of the Acme Club; Yates and Espinosa of the O. A. C.; W. Smyth and Walter Smyth of the Acme Club; Fox and Kiley of the Acme Club and Paul and Vincini of the O. A. C. Wrestling by A. P. Swain and James Shanley and C. J. Lutgen and C. W. Andrews, all of the Acme Club. The event of the evening was the match between Swain and Shanley for a valuable gold medal. Both men appeared on the mat in splendid condition and Shanley had about ten pounds the advantage in weight over Swain. Judging from the earnest manner in which the men went about their work the match was not a fake. Shanley got very excited several times during the bouts and was rather free in using such expressions as "I've got you where I want you now," and etc., in a not very mild tone of voice. The first bout was exciting and Shanley, through lack of experience, threw himself; time 29 minutes. Swain also won the second bout in 27 minutes. Although heavily handicapped by his opponent's extra weight, Swain made a fine showing and it was mainly due to his science and good generalship that he won his victory. Shanley appeared to be the stronger of the two but he needs lots of experience before he can handle such a clever man as Swain. It was claimed by several of the members present that Swain actually threw his man four times during the second bout, but the referee, Eugene S. Van Oourt, refused to allow one fall on the ground that Swain choked Shanley. The other suspected falls he failed to see.

The first practice game of cricket for the season was played at the Golden Gate grounds last Sunday. The team, captained by Reynolds, was defeated by the team managed by Weisman. The score was 51 to 36.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Answers for this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Postively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

P. S., City.—Give sire of Roodhouse's St. Lawrence. Answer—January's St. Lawrence.

G. W., Sausalito.—Give pedigree of Brown's Bellfounder. Answer—By Bellfounder Morgan, dam Lady Allport, by Mambrino.

Will some one please give me the breeding of Corsica? He was the property of John Hearlton, of near Stockton. R. L., Modesto, Cal.

A. L. S., San Francisco.—Will you kindly give me through your columns the performance (if any), of Alcona Clay 2756 and also of any of his progeny. Also of Queen, by Nanbuc 504. Answer—Alcona Clay had no record, as far as we can find out, and nothing in the list. Queen made a record of 2:53¼ at Petaluma, Cal., September 29, 1871, in a race against Alice Daniels.

Subscriber.—1. Is Elite, black horse, foaled in 1882, sired by Nephew 1220, dam by Chieftain, second dam by Gen. Taylor, standard? 2. If a horse is advertised for service as standard, and is not, what is the penalty and what should be done with a man who does so? Answer—1. No. 2. There is no law covering this case in California, we are sorry to say. A person who wilfully misrepresents a horse should certainly be punished the same as a man who gets goods under false pretenses.

H. B., Gridley, Cal.—Tell me what you know about the breeding of a stallion named Beverly—his sire, dam and grandsire,—and have either a record? Answer—Beverly is a bay horse, foaled 1886, sired by Benefit 5327 (son of General Benton and Lucetta, by Hambletonian 10), dam Alice, by Almont 33; second dam Norma, 2:33½ (dam of Norval, 2:17½). Alice (by Alexander's Norman 25) is also the dam of Mount Hood, 2:22¾. Benefit has no record, but his sire, General Benton, had a record of 2:34½. Alfred, by General Benton, out of Alice, ired Langton, 2:26½.

In "Answers to Correspondents" in your paper of 12th inst., referring to Duke McClellan 9080 and Kitty Gavin (2:26), by Royal George 83, as to their records, I wish to state that I purchased Duke McClellan 9080 of the late Charles McLaughlin, and received from him bill of sale stating that he made record of 2:30¼ at Eton, Ohio, when four years old, which I have advertised. As to Kitty Gavin, by Royal George 83 (Field's), Mr. George O. Tiffany, of Los Angeles, who imported Kitty Gavin to California from Buffalo, New York, and sold her to Mr. Monroe Salisbury, wrote me that Kitty Gavin trotted a mile in 2:26 and paced a mile in 2:30, and that Mr. McGregor, a well-known trainer at Los Angeles, said Kitty Gavin lapped out a horse in a race at Buffalo, N. Y., in 2:24½. Kitty Gavin is the dam of Lady Tiffany, by Gibraltar 1135 (the dam of Monroe 12,967). There are many true records not officially published and recorded.—W. H. Taylor, San Luis Obispo.

H. W. M., Salem, Or., March 10, 1892.—There has been a mare offered to me for sale, with the following pedigree, viz.: Katie Powers, who was sired in March 1876 at Keithsbury, Mercer County, Ill., and foaled in Oakland, Cal., in February, 1877. She was sired by Gates' Black Hawk Morgan, he by Iowa Smith's old Black Hawk of Kentucky. Katie's dam was Lady Fox. She was sired by Ham. Chase's Hambletonian Honest Jim, and he was by Rysdyk. Hambletonian Honest Jim's dam was sired by Iowa Smith's Old Black Hawk Morgan. Katie Powers was bred and raised by A. A. Gates. Any information you can give me will be greatly appreciated. Answer—In the new Year Book, page 697, we find a horse called Black Hawk Morgan, pedigree not traced, located in Iowa, and sire of Lilly Banks, pacer, 2:22. There were so many Black Hawks that it is hard to keep track of them. If you write to Joseph Battell, of Middlebury, Vt., compiler of a work on the Morgan horse, he will no doubt be able to give you the information you desire. He is editor of the Register. We know nothing of Katie Powers.

Stockton, Cal., March 25, 1892:—Enclosed is an inquiry that I would like to have answered in the Breeder and Sportsman, and, if you are not willing to, would like to know why. This will be the third time that I have sent it in. I would not think much about it if your paper had not ignored a question that I wanted answered in your paper in the fall of 1890. I know what the answer should have been in that question, as well as I know what the answer should be to the enclosed, but I want it in print and in your paper.—Breeder and Sportsman. The parties interested, I think, know just as well as I do, that Pleasanton never got a record of 2:25½, in Stockton last fall 1890. If he got a record of 2:25½ somewhere else, I have nothing to say, but would like to know where and when it was.—"Lodi."

Our letter to Secretary La Rue.—In regard to the record of Pleasanton we would state in our issue of December 12th we publish a list of the horses that made records at Stockton over the kite-shaped track. This list was furnished us by Mr. Armington, our Stockton correspondent, and he stated that he copied it from the books of the Secretary of the Stockton Association. Enclosed herewith we send you the list cut from our issue of the above mentioned date. (List was attached.)

Reply of Secretary La Rue.—In reply to your favor of yesterday's note relative to the record of Pleasanton, the records of this office do not show Pleasanton as a starter on the date you name, November 10th. October 15, 1891 the record shows:

Birdie	1	2	2
Pleasanton	2	1	1

Time, 2:28, 2:31¼, 2:32½.

The horse was started again on the 20th of October, but got no heat or better record. Yours truly, J. M. La Rue, Sec'y.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Reader, Tulare, Cal.—The horse Harry Gear was put in training two years ago, and the trainer drove him a half mile in 1:09 two weeks out of the stud and broke him down, strained a tendon in left front leg. What is best to do for it? He is not lame now, but I am doubtful about his leg standing training. He is nine years old. Answer—By firing and blistering the part affected and giving him three months' rest he ought to be able to stand training.

H. Y. E., Redlands.—Would you kindly advise me in your next issue how to treat my pointer bitch who has badly chapped ears? I have been putting on an ointment consisting of Hadem oil and vaseline. She shakes and flaps them so much that they still continue to chap and peel off in little scales. Your advice will be thankfully received. Answer—Apply daily the following ointment: Iodoform, one part; zinc salve four parts and vaseline four parts. Try and prevent her from shaking her ears by securing a net or soft cloth round her head and ears.

A. H., San Mateo.—I have a buggy horse that has got a discharge from one nostril for about three months past. There is no enlargement of the glands under the jaw, nor any sign of ulcers in the nostril. I showed it to a veterinary surgeon, who said that it was caused by a bad cold, but he has no cough and can eat well, and feels good. When I drive him it runs a great deal and smells bad. What do you think is the cause of it, and what would you recommend to do with it? Answer—It appears to be due to an abscess formed above the root of one of the molar teeth. Get a qualified veterinary surgeon to examine it, and, if necessary, trepan the bone covering it and remove it.

DON MARVIN

Five-Year-Old Record 2:28.

DON MARVIN is a beautiful seal brown, foaled 1887; bred by Senator Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal; is 16 hands high and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by Pallas, 2:23, sire of four in 2:30 list, he by Electioneer. Dam, CORA (dam of Don Marvin, 2:28, and Elected (trial 2:26) by Don Victor, sire of the dams of five in the 2:30 list) by Belmont. Second dam, CLARABEL (dam of Clinton 1503, 2:21¾, and Rebecca, dam of four in 2:30 list) by Alcalah Star. Third dam, FAIRY (dam of Senator B. 3, 2:20¾, and 6 others producing sires and dams) by Ryall's Hambletonian. Fourth dam, EMMA MILES (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star.

DON MARVIN is a horse of great natural speed. His record was made with scarcely any preparation, after making a large season in the stud, and is no measure of his speed. His oldest colts are only five in number, are three years old this season. One of them with very little work trotted quarters last fall in 36 seconds, and could have easily entered the 2:30 list in his two-year-old form had he been given an opportunity.

DON MARVIN will make the season of 1892 at $40, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—Four producing dams.

WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU

That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is glori ously mistaken. However, don't point ou the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing o both heels and the entire wearing surface.

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc., and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

By GEORGE WILKES, Sire of
GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy four others in the 2:30 list, and seventy-five sires of 249 trotters.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of
Seventy-five producing sons and forty-six producing daughters.

By ASHLAND 47, Son of
MAMBRINO CHIEF 11 and sire of HIGHLAND WIN 1226, and others in list and the dams of EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, and others.

By LEAR'S SIR WILLIAM, Son of
HOWARD'S SIR CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES who died when but three years of age was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot 2:27½, sire of Hannis, 2:17½, and others, out of Juliett, by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2½ hands, and weighs 1,080 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well-built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well-shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:40 without boots of any kind. His first colt showed trials last fall in 2:20 in his 3-year-old form, and all of his 2-year-olds that have been handled any show lots of speed and a nice way of going. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

TERMS, $75 WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGE.

I have a good pasture to turn mares in at $5 each per month. The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¾ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, sire of seven with records from 2:17¼ to 2:30, by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Zola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25¼, (sire of seven with records from 2:16 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty Outside Mares at $50 for the Season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27½, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¾; sire of 77 with records from 2:11¾ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11¾ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¼, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track; dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30) the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23½, made in 1886; the fastest and greatest representative of the Clay bay family. This pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great breeding ones. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains, the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and fourteen others from 2:18½ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or 50 per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18½, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2.24¾ and 2:24¼. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. *Balkan.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14¼ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¼. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¼. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2-22, BayWilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½, Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:40 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000,

AND HIS SERVICE IS OFFERED AT $100 FOR THE SEASON.

The services of no other young horse of his conformation, breeding and quality, with such a record, is offered at so low a figure.

Bear in mind that colt stakes will soon be given for the get of stallions with records of 2:15 or better. If yo want to raise colts which will be eligible to enter in all stakes, BREED TO BALKAN, as he is the only hors in this region with a record of 2:15 whose services are offered to the public.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

ANDY R.

(FULL BROTHER TO STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23.)

Sired by CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of STEVE WHIPPLE, four-year-old race record, 2:23, and KATE AGNEW, 2:28½), dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23, and VOTER), by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of 15 trotters in 2:30; of 9 sires of 12 2:30 trotters, and of 12 dams of 16 trotters in the list.)

CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN 10,178, by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of nine sires), dam FLORA (dam of three sires of 2:30 speed) by CHIEFTAIN 721; second dam a thoroughbred mare.

ANDY R. is a bright bay, with small star; foaled 1885; 15 hands 2½ inches high, and weighs 1,025 pounds. He is a beauty, and a perfect horse in every way. Will make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $40 FOR THE SEASON, FEBRUARY 1 TO JUNE 1.

PRINDEX.

Sired by DEXTER PRINCE 11,363, (sire of seven in the list) dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, VOTER and ANDY R.)

PRINDEX is a dark brown horse, white hind feet; foaled 1888; 16 hands high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a good-sized, fine-styled and well-gaited colt, and will certainly make a trotter and sire of speed. He will also make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st.

AT $40 FOR THE SEASON.

The reader will perceive that the four stallions mentioned herein are all from the same mare. Four individually better or nicer-looking stallions can not be found on any stock farm in California. Horsemen are especially invited to inspect the horses, and I wish to call special attention to their feet and legs—better were never put under a horse. Their dam, TWIST, at sixteen years old, is as sound as the day she was foaled. Their second, third and fourth dams were used for all purposes of farm and road work, and all lived to be over thirty years old—their limbs, at the time of death, being as free of blemishes or of any marks of unsoundness as a suckling colt's.

The disposition of these stallions are of the very best, and their produce are all good size, of fine conformation, have perfect feet and legs, and all show speed to a remarkable degree.

I do not favor extremely high service fees, and the prices on these stallions for this year are placed comparatively very low; that of STEVE WHIPPLE in particular being much less than of any other stallion of equal value or merit in this State.

Mares sent to my address, care of WEBER STABLES, STOCKTON, CAL., will be taken to my ranch at BELLOTA free of charge, provided two or three days' notice be given me by letter.

Pasturage on mares to be bred to VOTER, ANDY R., or PRINDEX free for two months, after that $3 per month. All bills payable at time of service or before the mares are removed.

Usual return privileges, provided mare or horse does not change hands, or money refunded at my option. For further particulars, address

Australian Thoroughbred Blood

Loyalist and Chesterfield

Two Sons (from Grandly-Bred Mares) of THE MARQUIS, one of Australia's Greatest Sire,

Will make the season of 1892 at the SOUTHER FARM, San Leandro, Cal.

These horses can hardly fail to produce speed and staying qualities from the strains of thoroughbred blood in this State.

THE MARQUIS was equally great as a race-horse and as a sire. In England he won the St. Leger, the Two Thousand Guineas, and was only beaten a head for the Derby, thus winning two of the three greatest English three-year-old races, and losing the third by ever so little.

He was one of the best bred horses ever taken to Australia, and in that great racing country he founded a wonderful family of race-horses and producers of race-horses. His son Newminister was sire of the very highest rank, and, since Musket's death, is the premier stallion of Australia; one of his yearlings sold in March for $12,500 at Melbourne.

This is the most unusual opportunity to procure this valuable blood. The service fees are given below, and are certainly very reasonable, especially when it is considered that all mares bred to these horses will be kept free of charge until July 1st, 1892. Especial care and attention given mares with foal, which may be sent to the Souther Farm at any time, where they will receive the best of care at foaling time without extra charge.

Mares that prove not to be with foal may be returned without service fee in 1893, provided the horse bred to is alive and at the Souther Farm.

LOYALIST - - - - $100, INCLUDING KEEP OF MARE TILL JULY 1st, 1892.

Bay horse, foaled 1884. Winner of the Brunswick Stakes, worth about $7,000, one and one-quarter mile in 1:08¼.

By THE MARQUIS,

Son of STOCKWELL and CINIZELLI by Touchstone.

First dam LOYAL PEERLESS, ... by THE PEER

A first-class race mare herself and a producer of racers. She is comparatively young. Loyalist was her first foal, and her second, Loyalstone, won the Spring Maiden stakes, for three-year-olds, one and one-half miles, in 2:55. As a four-year-old Loyalstone was only beaten a head in the Caulfield Cup, one and one-half miles in 2:55, the best time ever made at that distance in Australia; and this after Loyalstone had made the running for his stable companion, Plenty, who was knocked down, leaving Loyalstone to finish after setting the pace from the start.

A great race-horse and sire, producing among others, Darebin, imported to California by Mr. J. B. Haggin for the famous Rancho del Paso stud. At four years of age, Darebin took up 134 pounds and won the Gold Cup at Sidney, two miles in 3:33½.

Second dam LOYAL DEVOIR by Trumpeter. Third dam LETTY WEST by West Australian. Fourth dam BAY LETTY by Bay Middleton. Fifth dam MISS LETTY Weatherbit's dam, winner of the Oaks in 1887, etc. See English Stud Book.

LOYALIST'S mile and a quarter in 2:08¾, was the best on record in Australia when made, and has only been surpassed by Abercorn and the great Carbine. His sire was a race-horse and a sire of race-horses; his dam was a winner and has produced winners. Loyalist has proven himself a race-horse, and he will produce race-horses.

CHESTERFIELD - $75, INCLUDING FREE KEEP OF MARES UNTIL JULY 1st, 1892.

Bay horse, no white, foaled 1876. Bred by Mr. C. B. Fisher, Victoria. (See Australian Stud Book, Vol. 2, page 201).

By THE MARQUIS,

Son of STOCKWELL and CINIZELLI by Touchstone.

First dam LAMORMA ..... by Fireworks

Winner of many Races from good horses. Sold as a broodmare for $5,250.

In the Australian racing season of 1867-8, the Derby was made a double event. Fireworks won on both occasions, beating great horses. He also won the Champion Stakes, three miles, and other good races.

Second dam NIGHTLIGHT ..... by ARCHY

Dam of Wavlight, one of the best two-year-olds of Australia, winning six races without a defeat at that age from the best of company.

Son of Camel, sire of Touchstone

Third dam RUSHLIGHT ..... by BAY MIDDLETON

The greatest race-horse of his age, and sire of two Derby and two St. Leger winners.

Fourth dam TORCH by Lamplighter. Fifth dam DANOISE by Oscar, winner of the Goodwood Cup; a great handicap horse. Sixth to twentieth dams, see English Stud Book.

CHESTERFIELD was a good race-horse and a first-class weight packer. In ten important stakes he was first in four, second in four and third in two. He will produce great two-year-olds from our California mares; in his own two-year-old form he took up 128 pounds and won the Flying Handicap at Wollongong.

He is one of the handsomest sons of Guy Wilkes, with the Wilkes substance and trotting instinct and the thoroughbred quality and type of conformation. The sire of Hock Wilkes, Guy Wilkes, stands at a service fee of $1,000, and he is conceded to be the best representative of the great Wilkes and Hambletonian family. The dam of Hock Wilkes is a large mare, 16 hands, of powerful build, a daughter of Hock-Hocking, who produced the speedy and long-distance performers St. David, Beaconsfield, Batchelder, Arthur H., Four Aces, etc., and whose dam was the third dam of Anteeo, 2:16¼, Antevolo, 2:19½, and Coral, 2:25.

DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently-formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better-bred stallion stands for public service in California to-day. He is only six years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON,

Young Fashion		Hurrah (imp.)

Fourth dam Reality; fifth dam, by imp. Medley, sixth dam, by imp. Sentinel; seventh dam, by Mark Anthony; eighth dam, by imp. Janus; ninth dam, by imp. Monkey; tenth dam, by Silvereye eleventh dam, by Spanker. (See Bruce's American Stud Book, Vol. I. page 432.

HURRAH, sire of Three Cheers, produced the great winners Bonnie Lizzie, Chaquita, Ohio Boy, Nellie Peyton, Little Buttercup, Red Fox, Medusa, Brad, Referee, Monk, Hostage, Lady Middleton and many others.

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS.

WILKESDALE, 2:29.

TRIXIE, (trial), 2:25½.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of

By MAMBRINO PATCHEN, Sire of
Eighteen in 2:30 list, and the dams of GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HOURI, 2:17, ASTRAL, 2:18, BARON WILKES, 2:18, and sixty others in 2:30 or better.

By THORNDALE, 2:22¼, Sire of
EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, DAISYDALE, 2:19¾, and five others in 2:30 list, by ALEXANDER'S ABDALLAH, sire of GOLDSMITH MAID, 2:14, ALMONT, etc., out of DOLLY, dam of DIRECTOR, 2:17, ONWARD, 2:25¼, THORNDALE, 2:24¼, and CZARINA, 2:21, by MAMBRINO CHIEF.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of
ELECTIONEER, GEORGE WILKES, and forty-one trotters in the 2:30 list.

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five praducing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12½, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼ (who was shown trials the past season in 2:14); Thornton, 2:26¼, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:22¼, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12½, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, (the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams, Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, soft and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29½. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

The Best Son of Nutwood in California!

Dawn 6407

(Sire of Silky 2:26, Anna Belle 2:27½, Oaknut 2:24¼, Dot 2:29½.)

Will Make the Season of 1892 at the

Agnew Stock Farm,

HILLSDALE, SANTA CLARA COUNTY.

SERVICE FEE $150. LIMITED TO 20 MARES.

DAWN has a record of 2:18¾, and three heats of a race in 2:20 or better. His sire, Nutwood has record of 2:18¼ in a third heat, and is now regarded as the greatest of living sires, having put seventy-seven into the list altogether, of which twenty-six entered the list in 1892. At his present fee Dawn really is the CHEAPEST OF AMERICAN STALLIONS, and, as a recent writer has said, "his form baffles description." Being by the great Nutwood 600, now standing at $1,000, out of Countess (dam of Strathway, 2:20, Placida and Morna, driven as a double team a trial mile in 2:26), Dawn shows that his family is a trotting one on each side of the house. Countess was by Whipple's Hambletonian, sire of Graves, 2:19, and fourteen others in the 2:20 list. The chestnut stallion

BOSWELL, JR.

Will stand at the same place at the low price of $50 the season.

BOSWELL JR., sired by Boswell (a son of Almont 33), dam Nellie B., by Kirtley's Patchen; grandam Sophie (grandam of Nancy Hanks, 2:09), by Alexander's Edwin Forrest; great grandam by Parker's Brown Pilot. This stallion Boswell was purchased by King Kalakaua from Gen. W. T. Withers, Fairlawn Stock Farm, Lexington, Kentucky. Boswell Jr.'s dam, Maude, 2:20, by Bertrand 3262, sire of Frank Fisk, 2:29; second dam by Hamilton Chief, son of Royal George 9; third dam the Dooley Mare. MAUDE started in twenty-one races and won eighteen first moneys, and is well known to all horsemen. BOSWELL JR. showed miles in 2:26 and quarters in 35 seconds on two weeks' work.

Mares stabled or pastured (as owners may desire) on reasonable terms. All bills payable before the animal s removed. No liability for accidents. Best fences in the country. Address,

WILKES PASHA 2618

Will make the Season of 1891 at the Stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Springs Road.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

WILKES PASHA 2618 is a dark bay with white hind feet; 16½ hands high; bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elkhorn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky; sired by Onward 1411, record 2:25¼, trial 2:17; sire of 48 in the list. He is proving one of the greatest sires in America and his sons are proving to be sires of extreme and early speed also. Onward is by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of seventy-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten with records below 2:20; first dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:18¼, trial 2:25½, by American Clay 34, sire of Maggie Briggs, 2:27, Ella Clay, 2:27½, and the dams of Executor, 2:24½, Ranchero, 2:21½, Judge Hawes, 2:24, Ambassador, 2:22¼, Sir Walter, 2:18¼, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:23; third dam by Paddie Burns, thoroughbred.

WILKES PASHA is the only son of Onward in this part of California. He combines the much-prized Clay cross, his dam being a producing daughter of American Clay 34, who traces to the very best of thoroughbred foundations. As an individual, Wilkes Pasha is as handsome a horse as one could wish to see. He has been bred to ordinary mares. Every one of his progeny shows perfect trotting action and fine size; in color they are all deep bays or browns, and in disposition they cannot be excelled.

Fifth dam Mary Howe, by Tiger.
Sixth dam Lady Robin, by Robin Gray, sire of third dam of the great Lexington.
Seventh dam by Quicksilver, son of imp. Medley.
Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¾; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

MOORLAND, $40.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¼.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

The Souther Farm Swimming Tank is in regular operation and horses are given swimming work every week day in good weather. Swimming gives Exercise Without Concussion, and is an invaluable aid in training trotters or runners. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

DIRECTOR JR.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1892 AT THE ASYLUM RANCH, SAN RAFAEL.

DESCRIPTION.

DIRECTOR JR. is a grandly-formed stallion, a handsome black in color; stands 15.3 hands; weighs 1,175 pounds. In appearance and disposition he is more like Director than any other son of that famous sire. He has never been trained for speed, but can easily show a 2:20 gait on the road, and will surely get a mark much below that this fall, as he will be put in training for this season's campaign. Up to the present time he has been in the stud in Oregon and never given an opportunity to show his speed. His colts, like himself, are all grand lookers, show great trotting action, intelligence and gameness. A three-year-old now in training has shown a mile in 2:21, and Directwood, a two-year-old son, won every race in which he was entered last year, and could have gone in the thirty list had his owner so desired. At the Oregon State Fair last year Director Jr. and five of his get were awarded first premiums.

PEDIGREE.

It will be seen that Director Jr. is bred on blood lines almost identically the same as Direct, 2:06, the Greatest Harness Horse in the World.

DIRECTOR JR.

The Fast Trotting Stallion

SILAS SKINNER.

RECORD 2:17. STANDARD, 10,681.

Will make the season of 1891, commencing February 1st and ending July 1st, at De Turk's Breeding Stables on Donahue Street, opposite De Turk's Wine Cellars, Santa Rosa, Cal.

SILAS SKINKER, sired by Alcona Jr., 2:24; first dam Fontana (dam of Flora Belle, 2:21½) by Almont 33, sire of thirty-eight in the 2:30 list; second dam Fannie Williams, dam of Bay Chieftain, 2:28¼, by Alexander's Abdallah 15, sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14; Rosalind, 2:21¾; Thorndale, 2:22¼, etc.; third dam by Gaine's Denmark; fourth dam by Robert Bruce; fifth dam by Virginia Whip.

ALCONA JR. was sired by Alcona 730 (sire of Flora Belle, 2:21½; Clay Duke, 2:30; Prince Warwick, trial 2:18, etc., by Almont 33. First dam Madonna by Cassius M. Clay Jr., sire of Durango, 2:23¼, Harry Clay, 2:23¾; Clay Davis, 2:26½; Cora, 2:30, etc.

The above is a condensed pedigree of Silas Skinner, but enough is given to show him to be as richly bred in the best trotting lines as any horse living, besides being a great individual with remarkable speed and staying qualities, which was shown by his performance on the California Circuit the last two seasons. In 1890 Silas Skinner started in six races, trotting in all twenty-three heats. Of these six races Skinner won four and was second in two, and closed the season of 1890 with a record of 2:19.

The performance of Silas Skinner during the season of 1891 has also been very meritorious, having started in seven races, three of which he won, being second twice and twice third. In his race at Sacramento, September 19, 1891, Silas Skinner trotted so horsemen said—one of the gamest races ever trotted in California. His competitors were Frank M and Wanda, whom he defeated, winning the first, third and fourth heats, the second heat falling to Frank M. Time of each heat 2:17, 2:17½, 2:17½, 2:19.

SILAS SKINNER is a black horse, sixteen hands high, and weighs in stud season about 1,100 pounds. In color, breeding and conformation he approaches very near the ideal stallion, and he descends on both his sire's and dam's side from ancestors who have few equals in the history of the American trotting horse.

TERMS: $100 FOR THE SEASON.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge, provided SILAS SKINNER remains the property of the present owners. Pasturage $5 per month. Every attention and care given to mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, apply to $10,000.

For Foals of 1892, to Trot In 1894.

Colts, Fillies and Geldings (the get of Stallions that may be entered in this purse) to trot as two-year-olds at Terre Haute, Ind., at a meeting to be held in August or September, 1894, under the rules of the Association of which this Society is then a member; mile heats, best two in three, in harness. Distance, 125 yards.

On or before April 4, 1892, the Stallions, all of whose get thus become eligible, must be nominated, and any Stallion, even if dead, that has foals foaled in 1892, is eligible.

All colts, Fillies and Geldings eligible to this purse shall on or before December 1, 1892, be entered and described, and there may be as many starters by one sire as there are different owners; but no person shall be interested in more than one starter, later than ten days before the race.

This purse will be divided as follows: $5,500 to the first horse, $1,500 to the second, $1,000 to the third, $500 to the fourth, and $1,500 to the nominator of the Stallion that is the sire of the winner.

ENTRANCE AS FOLLOWS:

Fifty dollars to nominate the Stallion April 4, 1892; $5 to nominate each foal December 1, 1892; $15 second payment on foals December 1, 1893; $30 third payment on foals May 1, 1894, and $100 for starters, payable on or before August 1, 1894.

THIS PURSE IS FOR $10,000—NO MORE, NO LESS;

Except in case of a walk-over, or of a horse distancing the field; in either of which cases, should the amounts paid in hereto fall short of $10,000, the winner shall only be entitled to receive the whole of the amount paid in; and further provided, that should the original nominations to this purse be such as to make reasonably certain a considerable loss to this Society, then and in that event, we reserve the right to refund said first payments and to declare the purse off.

The above purse will be trotted for at the same meeting in 1894, whereat the $11,000 Guaranteed Purse for foals of 1890, and the $11,500 Guaranteed Purse for foals of 1891 will be contested, thus making this meeting in 1894 the greatest race meeting ever held in Indiana, if not in the United States, as other magnificent purses and stakes have been outlined and contemplated for this meeting, and will at the proper time be placed before the public, thus making the Terre Haute Fair for 1894 the Banner Race Meeting and Horse Fair of that year.

Stallions to be nominated on or before April 4, 1892, and addressed to

CHAS. C. OAKEY, Secretary,
Terre Hante, Ind.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50.

SALVATOR'S SAUNTERINGS.

The Eastern Cracks in the Thoroughbred Division—Good, Bad and Indifferent Horses at the Big Tracks Around Gotham.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

NOW THAT the season has so well advanced, I deem it time my California friends were knowing something about the various stables of thoroughbreds hereabouts. A trip to Morris Park being first in order, I will describe the many stables there. The first stable you come to after crossing the track from the club house is that of the young New York brewer, Mr. Ehret. The stable is under the able charge of Matt Allen, so well known to all Californians. Matt has a beautifully-fitted-up stable and a host of as fine-looking horses as one sees in a day's travel. Walking about the sawdust ring I saw Rey del Rey, Judge Post and San Juan, the latter as fine a looker as one could well wish to see. Behind them, walking on her hind legs, clawing at the air one minute, the next lunging about in the exuberance of her high spirits, came the great Yorkville Belle. She has grown some and filled out, too, and will, barring accidents, be the king-pin of the stable. Matt has thirteen youngsters under his ever-watchful eye, and a fine lot they are. Here is a list of them:

Ch f by Long Taw—Brademante.
B c by Duke of Magenta—imp. Picture.
Ch c by Mr. Pickwick—Miss Dance.
B c by Long Taw—Round Dance.
Br c by Longfellow—Fairest.
B c by Muscovy—Rebound.
Ch c by Panique—Sweetheart.
Ch c by Mr. Pickwick—Thora.
B c by Miser—Glencairn.
B c by Luke Blackburn—Tuscarora.
B f by Mr. Pickwick—Jury.
Br f by Mr. Pickwick—Etiquette.
Ch f by Mr. Pickwick—Sarong.

The Brademante filly, being a half-sister to The Bard, would naturally come in for the greatest share of praise. She is a fair-looking filly, and impresses one with the belief that she can go part of the route "a-whoopin'." The filly out of Jury is a grand-looker, as is also the Etiquette filly. Of the two I like the latter; in fact, think her the best looking of the fillies. The Sarong filly is one of those quick, wiry-looking animals, and she will surely go the route (up to about five furlongs) at a scorching gait. The Picture colt is altogether too small and punched up. The Miss Dance colt is a direct opposite. He is a race horse sure, but the next gentleman is the "nigger in de fence." Here is what I call a "crackerjack." He is a big one, and you might travel for many a mile before you come across a racier-looking one. He has speed and stamina in his every outline and move. Look then at his breeding—by Long Taw, out of Round Dance. Fit for a king, surely. The Fairest colt does not look much like a Longfellow, and as few of them not on the old horse's type ever amounted to much, we can pass him. The Rebound colt is too coarse. The Sweetheart colt is a good-looking, toppy sort of colt, and will come early. The half-brother to Yorkville Belle I am afraid will never startle the world. He does not look like a good race horse. The Tuscarora colt is a typical Luke Blackburn, and will stand a lot of hardship. The Glencairn colt is not worth much consideration. He is too small, and is not a good doer. If Matt don't win a share of the big stakes with the Round Dance colt, then I don't know anything about a race horse.

Walcott & Campbell have the next stable. Osric, by Cheviot, is here. He is a grand-looking horse, and will make the three-year-olds hustle this spring. He is about as forward as any of them, and has a marvelous turn of speed. Look out for him! There are eleven two-year-olds in the string, of which the best are Robin Hood, a chestnut colt by Forester, out of Maritana; Cervantes, a bay colt by Hidalgo out of Bonnie Kate, and a bay colt by Cheviot out of Mary Anderson. Robin Hood will do to have an eagle eye on, and the Cheviot colt will be along somewhere close to him at the finish. The Hidalgo colt is light-made, but he is all horse, and would fool a man at first glance. Mazerin, a brown colt by Miser out of Bonnie Wood, is another good-looking colt in the same stable. The next stable we come to bears the sign in big white letters over the door of the kitchen annex. "Tenny Villa." Here the genial "Snip" Donovan holds forth. I saw a big-legged, sway-backed, homely-looking horse with a diminutive little coon perched well within the "sway," and was told it was Tenny. Lord deliver me from ever picking him out as a race horse. He is the raggedest, most disappointing specimen of a thoroughbred I ever saw, until you look at him close—then you see the quality—the great hips and legs, the loins and chest, and all that went to make him almost second to none in America in his year. I wonder is his day over, you may ask? I think not; and you are liable to hear from Mr. Tenny when you least expect it. He will be around the winning post when the money is divided in the big handicaps sure. Donovan has a black colt by imp. Dutch Skater out of a Hermit mare that is a smooth-looker. He has been ailing though, I think, and may not come early. A long-haired bay colt by Blue Eyes out of Felicia, by Phaeton, is my fancy of the few he has. This fellow will make some one's horses know they went to the races, and he will be around early, too, I am thinking. There is just such another with even longer hair by imp. Rapture out of a Pat Malloy mare that I fancy for a good wear-and-tear horse. The others in the Pulsifer stable are but mediocre.

K. K. Alkock is near at hand with a few. He has a colt that Easton brought over from England last fall. He is a king as to breeding, being by Bend Or, the sire of Ormonde, out of Agnostic, by Rosicrucian; second dam Bonnie Agnes, out of Little Agnes, out of Miss Agnes—the Ormonde family clear through. He is not made right behind for a good race horse, and it will surprise me if he ever makes one. His two-year-olds will not startle the world, so I will say nothing of them.

Messrs. Rogers and Duffy have a nice assortment of real nice horses, among them are a

Br c by Troubadour—Sunbeam.
B g by Warwick—Lady Middleton.
Ch g by Sir Modred—Bessie Peyton.
Ch g by Glenelg—Moyna.
B f by Richmond—Katie A.
Ch f by Richmond—Mayfield.

The Sir Modred—Bessie Peyton colt is a good-looker, and will be a handy horse along about June. The Katy A. filly is a nicely-turned little thing and fast as a bullet. The Troubadour—Sunbeam colt will bear watching, as he is now a good looker, and is one of the improving kind. Next to the Rogers stable is that of Mr. Spiers, a new-comer on the turf. He has:

B f by Lisbon—Novena.
Blk f by Joe Daniels—Vital.
Ch f by Onondaga—Lady Caroline.
Ch f by Panique—dam by Buckden.
Ch f by Falsetto—India.
B f by Himyar—Rookee.
B f by Sir Modred—Napa.
Ch f by Panique—dam by Mortemer.

They are all fillies, as you can see, but they are a rare lot. The Panique filly out of the Buckden mare is a nice-looker, but the Napa filly "outlooks" them all. She will race sure. The Vital filly is a little lacking in substance, as is the Falsetto—India filly. The Napa filly is the pick of the lot for looks. Dr. S. W. Street has a filly by Miser, out of Seaweed that will be a hard one to beat this Spring. She is a very racy-looking youngster, and has shown very well.

The last stable I was to was "up on the hill," where the Burridge Bros. have their string. They have under the care of Matt Feakes:

Honeymoon, by Algerine—Lime D'Or.
Trouble, by Rayon d'Or—Three Cheers.
Tom Watson, by Darebin—Glendair.
Simmons, by Sir Modred—Trade Dollar.
Anyway, by Panique—By-the-Way.
Eph, by Mr. Pickwick—Nettie's Last.
Pasta, by Panique—Ida B.
Ramsey, by Knight of Ellerslie—Lucretia.
Banjo, by Powhattan—Guitar.

The pick of the lot is the chestnut colt Simmons. "If you could only see him! The grandest-looking race horse that ever stood on iron! Grand head and neck, shoulders sloping, just as a good one should, and as good ones only can, a heart as deep as I ever saw on a horse of any age; loins and quarters that speak a world of things! And legs, did you say? Why, his legs are just like bars of iron.

They carried him down that celebrated chute at Morris Park when he was scarcely broken three-eighths of a mile in 35 seconds, and they say he was not running at that, "only keeping the Darebin colt company," Feakes says. The Darebin colt looks to me to be about seventeen hands high. But he is made in proportion, and will come round late in the season. But I must go back to my only love—Simmons. They may all talk as they will about the Sir Modreds, but if this fellow don't make some people sing another tune ere long, then I am not "in it." Simmons is a big fellow, too, but he is so grandly and evenly turned that one does not notice his size. Eph is the next best thing to Simmons and Tom Watson. Pasta will make a handy mare this season. There is another they call The Doctor, by Panique—the king pin of the stable some think—but I am like the 'possum—"give me my 'Simmons every time." This is about all the horses of any note at Morris Park except perhaps Ludwig, the big three-year-old son of Darebin and Bavaria, who I believe is there, though I did not see him. They tell me, though, that he is the coming horse, and that from all appearances he will take up the penalty and go the route. He ought to be a good one. Bavaria never got anything but a racehorse. A story is going the rounds of a crackerjack owned by "Bill" Daly—a filly by Macaroon out of Chamois. She is said to have worked a half last December in 49½ seconds—pretty good for a youngster.

Walter Rollins they say has a John Happy youngster that can step down the line. They do not say what he is out of.

At North Bergen, J. Dwyer has two good Hi Ban fillies, one out of Refraction, therefore a full sister to Sonora (Dashing Belle), who was sold to J. Ruppert at a long price. The young miss is said to be a fast one.

J. H. McCormack's Algerine—Money Bags filly, a sure-enough race mare, has already shown her mettle, as has Bunker Hill, by John Happy out of Jongleuse, by Alarm, and the Maud P. filly. The latter is small, but there are few better-looking race mares in training to-day than this filly. She is just my fancy for a good one, and will do to look well to.

Eugene Leigh has a nice little string, which includes:

Woodruff, by Bramble—Valerian.
Whitehead, by Joe Daniels—Guila.
Wheeler, by Sir Modred—Carissima.
Aeronaut, by Aretino—Ascension.
Republic, by Aretino—Unika.
Gamester, by Bramble—Daisy Hoey.
Cultivator, by imp. The Rake—Lilly Lee.
Somnambulist, by Bramble—Toilet.
Bay colt by Luke Blackburn—Miss Harding.
Isabelle, by Aretino—Pauline.
Caledonia, by Burgomaster—Fandango.
Elinore, by Ecuador—Myrtle.
Bay filly, by Enquirer—Vanilla.
Chestnut filly, by Joe Daniels—Delight.

Wheeler is about as light and trim a Sir Modred as I have seen, and will win his way out, as will Whitehead, whose general contour stamps him a race horse. Both will take time. Woodruff is rather on the punched-up type. The Aretinos are all good-lookers, Republic being, I think, the best of them. Gamester, own brother to Rambler and Gambler, will do. He will uphold his family's reputation certain. Caledonia is a beautiful-looking filly, well grown, and will surely win her way out and more too. Cultivator has shown his ability on several occasions. The Delight filly is rather low-sized, but very rugged-looking withal. There are many others here, but they are not worth mentioning hardly this time.

Over at Brighton Alf Lakeland has five, viz.:

Br f by Longfellow—Miss Primrose.
B f by St. Blaise—Favonia.
Ch f by Forester—Athlene.
Ch f by St. Blaise—Woodviolet.
B f by Mr. Pickwick—Empress.

The brown filly is a "corker." She has hustled along quite a bit, according to Lakeland, and can "do it some more" if called on. She is a grand-made filly, and skims along over the ground like a veritable ghost. The Favonia filly is good, but too big for much to be expected of early. The others have not a great deal to commend them.

A roan colt by Hyder Ali out of Garnet is well thought of, as is also the Macaroon—Juliet colt. Both are in Ben Franklin's stable.

At Gravesend are Ruppert's horses. The king of the lot, the $30,000 St Blaise—Lady Primrose colt—has gone wrong, and the Dandy Dinmont—Moonlight colt they think is a "counterfeit," leaving little or nothing in the stable. Garrison, the jockey, has a couple of "skates" here, the best of which is the Kantanka—Lucy Wallace colt, and he is not of much account.

There is a Sir Modred colt here at Gravesend, and it is a case of blind man's buff with a fellow to pick out which is the best-looking—this one or Simmons mentioned above. This colt is out of Ethel, she by King Ban out of Maud Hampton. Great quarters, beautiful, sloping shoulders, and a grand set of legs place this fellow well up in the estimation of the best there is about. Darebin, out of Hatienne, of which I wrote you some time since, has gone wrong. There is also in the same stable (Dahlman's) a grand-looking filly by Duke of Magenta out of Silver Dean that will make a good and a handy mare. I will get the Jerome Park outfit for you, and in my next I will let you know how the aged division stand. As these colts or fillies continue to show up I will write to you—at least, I will try and have letters oftener from now on.

What the Whippletons Are.

Eureka, Humboldt County, March 15, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Whenever a person believes that in a business transaction he gets full value for his money, and the more so when he buys a horse and the longer he drives him the more he is pleased with him, he always feels as if he would like to help or encourage the man who bred such an animal. In looking through the advertising columns of your highly esteemed and indispensable journal, I was astonished to see that Mr. Fred W. Loeber is about to sell every mare, colt and filly he has, and for one I am very sorry, as I believed he has almost arrived at the summit of his ambitions for which he has been striving for at least ten years. He has not, I know, been blessed with too much of this world's goods, and has not been able to train every one of the young Whippletons. Some of our large breeders have demonstrated that this is the secret of their success, for outside of their stock farms their colts have not done a great deal. Handicapped as he was in this way, he yet persevered, and in every undertaking to build up the trotting horse interests he has always been foremost; but with these well-known facts I do not wish to take up your valuable space. I want to call the attention of breeders all over this State to the class of mares that this breeder has singled out as "seed" from which he intended to raise horses that would reflect credit upon his judgment and call attention to the fact that the most valuable horses for all public purposes are those that not only trot exceedingly fast, but have other qualities as well which make them highly-prized. It did not take a prophet's eye for him to see that in the struggle to get extreme speed the trotting horse people were sacrificing many other qualities to accomplish this end. This gentleman's theory has been to breed a family of horses that would be of good size—not leggy—deep through the heart, with flint-like legs, fine, heavy quarters, stifles, gaskins, strong, straight, and well-formed joints, hard, bell-shaped feet, and all these guided by a level head and with that other great attribute, a kindly disposition. The animals must all be solid in color, either bays, blacks or browns, no white markings and be stylish, pure-gaited and endowed with courage and speed of a high order. That he will bring to the sale representatives of all these qualities I know, and b sides they are sired by the greatest "poor man's horse" in California, from mares that were noted as great individuals on the road, on the farm and in the harem. Breeders will do well to attend this sale and to select such mares as they deem will be a benefit to their respective stallions. I know they will find it a difficult matter for they will surely want them all. Crossed with sons and grandsons of Hambletonian 10, they will form a family of their own. Bloomfield Maid (the most phenomenal broodmare in this State) is a full sister to Whippleton, and many mares in this collection are endowed with the same qualities that have made her famous. My four mares by Whippleton, out of ordinary roadmares I would hesitate to trade for a like number on any stock farm in this State. The road never was too long for them and as much as a splint or a puff I have never seen on them yet. They are the kind of mares to make broodmares of and especially as they all seem possessed with plenty of nerve force. This quality is admitted to be essential by all who have ever raised fast horses.

The stallions Alcona, Alconeer and Grandissimo I have not seen, but I know from their breeding they are another grand cross selected by this breeder to gain his long-wished-for desire. The Naubucs are also a good family and have mated well with the Whippletons. I will try and be on hand at the sale, for another like opportunity may not occur again in a lifetime.

Hoping that I have not taken up too much time, and that the Vineland Stock Farm mares will find their way to the leading stock farms in this State where they belong, since they must leave their owner's care, I am yours,

J. H. Armstrong.

Chieftain's Pedigree.

I did not notice Jas. Buckingham's letter, published in your paper of the 4th inst, at the time. He gives Chieftain's pedigree as I did, but he also gives the pedigree of his sire, Old Togue, which I did not, and if I had not stated that if Chieftain had any of the blood of Rice's Hiatoga no one knew it, I should not think it necessary to write this. Mr. Buckingham seems to prove clearly that Old Togue, Chieftain's sire, was by Rice's Hiatoga. This makes it necessary for me to explain why I thought, as I then did, that he was probably by Brown's Bellfounder. During the last half of the '50's and the first half of the '60's I was very often in the town of Lancaster, being one of three commissioners who purchased grounds there and built and put in operation the Ohio Reform School for boys. I am not positive as to exact dates, but soon after Alvah Perry sold Chieftain to Sam Crim he, Perry, invited me to go to his stable to see, as he stated it, the sire of Hanley's Hiatoga and of Chieftain. I went and he showed me Old Togue, and also in the same barn the dam of Chieftain, and then and there told me the whole story in regard to the pedigree and history of the old horse, just as I wrote to your paper, and as you published it in your 2:30 sire list, and at that time not only he but all the most prominent horsemen of Lancaster said that Old Togue was of unknown pedigree, and Perry ridiculed the report that either he or Hanley's Hiatoga were by the Rice horse. In fact they seemed prejudiced against him; said his stock were only saddle horses and not superior in any way, and I presume that was the reason, mainly, why no one could at that time get any conclusive evidence of the pedigree of Hanley's Hiatoga.

At Moses Hanley's request I interviewed Darius Talmadge, his reputed breeder, and was astonished to find that he felt uncertain as to whether he was a colt of Silvertail's or another one of his mares. He had a large number of them on his farm, two miles from Lancaster, and that year he did not see them from before foaling time in the spring until after the colts were taken from them in the fall, and had discovered that his manager at the farm had deceived him about many things and had no confidence in any statement he made about colt. I heard afterward that Mr. Talmadge thought he sold Silvertail's colt and put another in place of it that he thought not so valuable.

If James Buckingham had published Chieftain's pedigree as he got it from Mr. Brown, his breeder, in 1873, it would have been of more general interest then, and I have no doubt would have been accepted as more conclusive by others, as it certainly would have been by me. But it is well known to horsemen in this State that Chieftain's pedigree was in doubt years after Mr. Buckingham says he had it direct from Perry & Brown. As late as 1878 to '80, I had letters from his owner and owners of his stock at Stockton asking me for his pedigree as I was given it by his breeder, Alvah Perry, and in order to reconcile the apparently contradictory statements of James Buckingham and I, it is only necessary to remember that one was made in 1859 and the other in 1872 or '73. In '59 Perry stated all he then knew, and added what he thought very probable, and in the thirteen or fourteen intervening years, no doubt found he was bred by Mr. Brown.—Jas. D. Ladd in Dunton's Spirit of the Turf.

Big Winners of the Running Turf.

For the twenty-two racing seasons last past it is surprising to note that with but three exceptions the biggest winner each season on the turf has been a 3-year-old, and in no case during the period above named has a performer over this age led his thousands of competitors home. As a class these big winners rank high, and it is safe to say these that have not as yet had a chance will become as invincible in the stud as they were on the turf. Dissecting the table as it were, and it is ascertained that the only performer that succeeded in two years in proving the champion winner of the season is the Mortemer mare Wanda, now in the stud at McGrathiana Farm. The geldings that earned this, the highest distinction that can come to a performer in a single season on the turf, are two in number, while the fillies are four, leaving stud colts to compose the balance. In cases of Hindoo and Luke Blackburn, both in Hanover and Proctor Knott respectively reproduced themselves, while Woodburn Stud has bred the greatest number of these stars, Kingfisher, Harry Bassett, Duke of Magenta and Spendthrift all hailing from the famous Kentucky establishment. The stud which shows up next best is the Belle Meade, where Vandalite, Luke Blackburn and Proctor Knott first saw the light of day. Fifteen strong is Kentucky's contribution to the list, proving as in other recent compilations that the Blue Grass Region is truly king in the production of phenomenal performers, though a few more such farms as Belle Meade and Tennessee would give the "dark and bloody ground" a fair sort of a race. As the sires of these champions Lexington leads with Kingfisher, Harry Bassett, Tom Bowling and Duke of Magenta, imp. Australian and Virgil being next each with a pair, the former furnishing Spendthrift and Joe Daniels, and the latter Virgil and Hindoo. Native sires have twelve representatives, thus by a slight margin leading stallions of unadulterated English strains of blood. Although His Highness has already topped the $100,000 line in a single season's winnings, in this respect England is still in front, Achievement, Gladiateur, Lord Lyon, Donovan and several other performers in that country having beat America's best record in the winnings of a single twelve months; estimating, however, the increase of the amount taken by the biggest winner in 1891 over the champion of twenty-two years previous, and it is safe to hazard the opinion that in another two decades the biggest winning horse will have captured over $200,000 in stakes and purses in a single year. The table follows:

Old Pacing Pilot.

The origin of old pacing Pilot has always been a mystery. I think I can put you on the right track of him, and it might interest some of the breeders, as his blood is infused in some of the best trotters, like Maud S., 2:08¾, Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, Viking, 2:19¼, and many others. In the first place I will describe the horse I have reference to, and if he answers to the description, I can go farther.

He was a black horse, about 15.1 or 15.2, weighed somewhere between 900 and 1,000, with a white stripe down his face, extending across his left nostril. He had a good-shaped, brainy head, fair-shaped neck, put on a good-formed body. He was heavy-made forward, and tapered rather small toward his hindquarters. At the same time his hips were smooth and well-finished, with powerful stifles and a short back, well ribbed.

He was one of those hard-meated follows with lots of courage, with good bone, good feet, and white hind legs extending almost to the hocks, rather crooked. He could pace a perfect storm. When at his fastest gait he went with his head almost level with his body. He could beat any horse I ever saw.

I have seen him start on the ice, and go against a runner a half-mile. I never saw him headed. I think he paced a two-minute gait, and his colts could also go fast. I remember his stud fee was $1 to insure a foal. I have made inquiries, and was told he was sold to some parties going West, somewhere in the years of 1844 or 1846. I was then thirteen years old, but I remembered dim well. Yours truly,

Sherbrooke, P. Q. John Harkness.

[Mr. Harkness, from whom we are always glad to hear, has our thanks for the above. The origin of pacing Pilot has, as he says, always been a mystery. If report is correct, however, old Pilot was down to New Orleans as early as 1832. He got Tom Crowder in Kentucky 1835. This is pretty strong proof that the speedy, black, stripe-faced pacer which Mr. Harkness saw could not have been old Pacing Pilot, sire of Pilot Jr. Such a horse as Mr. Harkness describes ought to have got some fast stock in the West or wherever he was taken. Perhaps some of our Western subscribers will remember the horse which Mr. Harkness describes.—Ed.]

The above taken from the American Horse Breeder may prove of some benefit to some of our great pacing fanciers, and help to establish some family that now seems obscure.

"Abe."

H. G. Crickmore relates a touching incident in the life of Abe, the colored jockey who rode Bayswater, the winner of the first race at the opening of Jerome Park, in 1866. Abe was never known to have a surname. The world knew him as Abe; he rode at New Orleans, Saratoga and Jerome Park as Abe, and the turf reporters wrote of him as Abe. He was a clever jockey, his methods in the saddle being described as a combination of the methods of Garrison, Hamilton and Murphy. He was neither beautiful nor graceful, but had a knack of "getting there." In slavery days Abe was a chattel of Duncan F. Kenner, of New Orleans, the man after whom the Kenner Stakes at Saratoga was named. When the war began Mr. Kenner went to Europe, where he remainded until after the days of reconstruction. Abe became a freed man, and in 1866 journeyed to the North to pursue his calling as a jockey, riding wherever and whenever he could get a mount. His savings in a year or two amounted to some $4,000, which he deposited in a bank in New York. Already an old man when he left Dixie, he could not resist a longing to return; so one day, without saying a word to anybody, he set out for New Orleans. Going to the bank he presented his book and asked for $100. "I'se gwine away fer good," he informed the teller; "gwine back to de plantashun." "Going away for good, eh?" said the teller, counting out the $100 and entering the draft on Abe's book. "What are you going to do with the rest of your money?" "Leave that hyer for my ole marster. He mout need it w'en 'e gits back." When Abe died Mr. Kenner buried him at the head of the homestretch on his private training-ground near New Orleans.

Some Old-Time Michigan Horses.

The historian of Branch county (Mich.) pays a warm tribute to E. C. Walker (Veritas) and Co. for the importation of Mambrino Chief Jr. "It marked an epoch in horse-breeding in the county." Mambrino Chief Jr. was got by Clay's Mambrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorne. He stood in Coldwater, the county seat of Branch county, in 1866.

Marshall Chief, or the Goodrich horse, was owned in this county in his latter years. He was by Vermont Hero, and was a dark chestnut horse, a type of the old-time Morgan. He was a nine-months colt, and was foaled hairless. He was called the Michigan Giant. Marshall Chief died in 1879 near Union City.

Royal Fearnaught was brought to Branch county in 1875 by E. C. Walker & Co. and located at Coldwater. He is a horse of remarkably fine appearance, stands sixteen hands high, weighs 1,100 pounds. His sire was the chestnut horse old Fearnaught, which won the first $10,000 purse at Buffalo. The dam of Royal Fearnaught was Lady Smithers, by Columbus.

Moscow or Defiance came to Michigan and located in Branch county in 1855. His sire was called Defiance. Moscow was bred in Canada from English thoroughbred stock. His dam was also the dam of old Lady Moscow, record 2:32. Moscow was remarkable for his wonderful long life. He was humanely killed at forty-two years of age.

Vermont Hero was foaled in 1850, and was taken to Coldwater in 1855. He was a black horse, sired by Sherman Black Hawk. He was the sire of General Knox 15, and Lady M., record 2:30, and the dams of Badger Boy, 2:29; Brown Dick, 2:19½, and Gene Smith, 2:15½.

Magna Charta was foaled in 1855, and lived thirty-five years. He was a son of Morgan Eagle, by Morgan Eagle, a son of Woodbury Morgan, by Justin Morgan. Magna Charter sired fifteen dams, which produced sixteen trotters, among them Belle F., 2:15½; Emma E., 2:19½; Jack, 2:12½; Maggie G. Middleton, 2:20½. Five of Magna Charta's sons have records of 2:30 or better.

Tom Hunter stood in Coldwater nearly all his life. He was a gray horse by Secor's Black Hawk. He sired Albermarle, 2:19, and two other and four dams of 2:30 trotters. Tom Hunter had a record himself of 2:38.

Masterlode, one of the great sons of Hambletonian 10, was foaled in 1868. He was bred in Orange county, N. Y., and went to Coldwater, Mich., where he is located at the present time. His dam was Lady Irwin, by American Star. Masterlode has proved himself one of the greatest stock horses ever introduced into the State of Michigan, Five of his produce went into the list last year, swelling his roll to twenty-four.

Don't Overtrain.

James Rowe, a young man, who as a boy was a jockey, and who, by reason of having a little different shape of head from the average youth who rides race horses, was able, when he reached man's estate, to branch out as a trainer of thoroughbreds, in which field he has achieved marked success, recently contributed to an Eastern turf journal a very interesting paper on the training and management of race horses.

From a perusal of what Mr. Rowe has to say on the subject, it appears that, like trotters, a good many of the fastest and most reliable thoroughbreds need but little training outside of their races. On this point, Mr. Rowe says: "I do not think it is well to ask too much of a horse in the way of trials before his races. He does not need much strong work, and a trainer frequently makes the mistake of having a horse run his race in his trials. Unless a horse is gross and sluggish, when he is raced twice a week he won't need much exercise beyond trotting and cantering."

These words can be read and pondered over with profit now that the season for training trotters is close at hand by a great many men, who, during the next six months, will have in their charge valuable horses for the purpose of developing the speed of such animals to the greatest possible extent. "Don't overtrain" should be painted in large letters on the front entrance to every driver's intellect, and if these two words were heeded by at least eight trainers out of every ten in the country there would be more fast records made by trotters than is now the case, and a far less number of animals would be made cripples from injudicious work and speeding. Anyone who was familiar with the methods of training employed only fifteen or twenty years ago can see that at the present time a man who would go back to the ideas in vogue when Dan Mace, for instance, was in his prime, and Flora Temple, Dexter and Goldsmith Maid successively lowered the trotting record, would not have much chance of success. Of course there are some drivers who are way behind the tail-end of the procession in this matter of training, but they have never amounted to anything, and never will. The day of constantly using the sweat hood, "working out" at least twice a week, jogging around the track from ten to fifteen miles every day and a long walk in the latter part of the afternoon has departed for good, and in its place we see rational treatment of the trotter—a system of moderate exercise calculated to bring out the highest flights of speed, the natural courage and ambition of the horse produced by breeding being relied upon to carry him through a succession of mile dashes called heats when the race day arrives. The most successful trainers of the present day are those who, as a rule, do not give their horses anything like the amount of work that would have, a dozen years ago, been deemed necessary, and even in the olden times it was noticeable that in many instances trotters made their best performances when, according to the old-fashioned ideas of how they should be prepared, they were "short of work." Instances innumerable showing where horses have gone the fastest miles of their lives when their drivers thought that on account of lack of training they could not possibly be at their best could be given, and it is safe to say that at the present time the average trotter does not receive over half the "training" that would have been given him had he been on earth fifteen or twenty years ago. It is seldom indeed that a horse suffers from too little training, whereas it is within the personal knowledge of everyone who has to do with the trotting turf that overtraining is an ever-present evil.

New Catalogues.

The Prospect Hill Stock Farm catalogue of Miller & Sibley, Franklin, Pa., reached us last Monday. It is a volume of 259 pages, splendidly printed, and the most complete affair in every detail that we have seen in many a day. Every pedigree is tabulated, and every stallion and broodmare is given two pages. There are excellent cuts of the dead St. Bel, 2:24½, of the race track and barns, but it is of the stock that one is certain to enthuse over. At the head of this now famous stud stands Electric Bell 10,529, full brother to Bell Bird, Belleflower, Bell Boy, Hinda Rose, Palo Alto Bell and St. Bel, by Electioneer, dam Beautiful Bells, by The Moor. Then there is Ah There, 2:27½ at three years, by Electioneer, dam Lizzie, by Wildidle; Ivo, by Electioneer, dam Victoria, by Don Victor; Outcross, by Electioneer, dam Sarah, by Shannon; Cecilian, 2:22 at two years, by Electioneer, dam Cecil, by Gen. Benton; second dam Cuba by imp. Australian, and Del Paso, 2:24½, by Dexter Prince, dam Daisy D., by Electioneer. The broodmares are by Director, Baron Wilkes, Alcantara, Guy Wilkes, St. Bel, Almont, Mambrino Patchen, Sultan, Abdallah West 2583, Mambrino King, Erin, Nephew, Electioneer, Hambrino, Gen. George H. Thomas, Princeps, Bigaroon (thoroughbred), Ansel, Gen. Benton, Irvington, Piedmont, Gen. McClellan 143, Nutwood, Kentucky Prince, Greenlander, Lord Russell, Patron, Volunteer, Louis Napoleon, Eros, Alfred, Robt. McGregor, Belmont 64, Harold, Victor Bismarck, Administrator, Happy Medium, Messenger Chief Wood's Hambletonian, Odin Bell, Will Crocker, Congressman (thoroughbred) and Hull. The number of Mambrino Patchen, Electioneer and Nephew mares on this farm show that Miller & Sibley have great faith in these strains, but altogether the Prospect Hill collection is a beautiful one. Indeed it is doubtful if a more gilt-edged lot is to be found on any farm in America. With such a master of the art of training and conditioning at the helm as Charles Marvin, the Prospect Hill Farm is sure to become famous as the home of hosts of fast trotters ere long.

I Know That Old Fellow, But He Don't Know Me.

Two old California horse racers met on the McDonough County Fair Ground at Macomb, Ill., after a separation of thirty-five years. A few years ago at one of the fairs at Macomb, I was standing on the track talking with Batchelor, and a short distance off Brase was rubbing out a running horse. Batchelor says: "I know that old fellow over there, but he don't know me." I said to him: "Where did you ever know him?" "I knew him in California in 1850. He and some others took a little gray mare that had beat everything that could be brought against her in running, and no one would match her, she became so noted. She was owned in Ione Valley, and her owner dyed her and took her up near Haugtown and matched her against the fastest horse in that section. Of course I did not know the mare, she was so nicely disguised, and I bet a large amount of money against her with Brase, and of course I lost my money, as she won the race with perfect ease. This is the first time I have seen him since the race."

Batchelor soon left me and went to the stable to look after John H., his trotting horse. Brase came along and said to me: "I know that old fellow that was talking with you, but he don't know me; that was Batchelor; I knew him in California thirty-five years ago." I said to him: "Are you sure he does not know you?" "Yes, I am quite sure, for it was thirty-five years ago, and I don't believe he knows me." I said to him: "You are mistaken, he does know you, and he says you had a hand in dyeing a little gray running mare, and he bet largely with you against the mare and lost his money." Brase said: "He is mistaken; I did not have a hand in dyeing the mare, but the parties that did dye her gave me a tip, and I won more money on her than I ever won on a race before or since." Probably many of the old Californians will remember this race. I was in California at the time, and heard all about it, but did not see it.—"An Old Californian" in Dunton's Spirit of the Turf.

With a record like Simmons Liver Regulator all should use it for the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Dan McCarty will have a string of twenty-six horses at Bay District track in time to go to the races.

Navidad, 2:22¼, will be given another year's rest. He has already been laid up for a season with a splint.

Volunteer seems to be showing up well. He has 406 descendants in the 2:30 list and 64 in 2:20 or better.

A new driver for Nelson, 2:10, springs up every week, but up to date his owner is his most likely driver.

Everyone is need of first-class broodmares should attend the great broodmare sale at Napa next Wednesday.

Short, sharp brushes, and not too many on one trip, is what our colts need to develop their trotting powers.

The Elmwood Stable will send five horses to compete for stakes and purses at the coming Blood Horse meeting.

A great horse is like a great man. He will make opportunities, and in spite of adverse circumstances make himself famous.

William Crawford, of Vancouver, has purchased for $4,000 P. C. McFarlane's interest in Scarlet Letter, says the Oregonian.

Walter Maben, the well-known Los Angeles reinsman, will be seen on this circuit with a good string during the coming season.

Breed a mare that suits you to a horse that suits you, and you will stand a good chance of getting a colt that will prove satisfactory.

It never pays to bid a horse in at a sale, as a decline in his value sets in from that hour and keeps getting lower and lower as the weeks roll by.

Lottie Thorne, 2:22½, has been leased to the Hermitage Stud, Nashville, Tenn., and will be bred to Bow Bells, the brother to Bell Boy, 2:19¼.

Romair is showing up well in his work, and young McCarty thinks the big fellow can about wallop any three-year-old in training on the Coast.

Horsemen should not forget to keep a sharp lookout for the closing of entries. On an editorial page they will always find the dates prominently given.

S. H. Sheplar, of Santa Rosa, in the colt St. Eric, by St. Just, dam by Volunteer, has a horse that is greatly admired and much talked of in Sonoma County.

The Board of Directors of the Yolo County Agricultural Association has decided to hold a spring meeting at Woodland in May. Entries will close April 16th.

Watsonville is to have a race-track two miles from town. A corporation, capitalized at $10,000 in 500 shares of $20 each, has been formed, and nearly all the stock taken.

Can any one guess what that brown colt by Palo Alto out of Beautiful Bells, that made its first appearance last week in this world, will bring if it lives to be a three-year-old?

The brown horse Elliston, by Electioneer, dam Lady Ellen, by Carr's Mambrino, has been purchased by a syndicate at Sedalia, Mo., from the estate of R. S. Strader, Lexington, Ky.

They are not all dead. The latest one has discovered that the proper way to breed pure, unadulterated speed is to mate a fast mare to a slow stallion. Will some one hand us our gun?

Richard Lord, of Gravesend, has bought the filly Two Bits for $5,000, and a filly by Onondaga out of Gillyflower for $1,500, from Milton Young, that it is said will be early winners.

Du Bois Bros., Denver, Col., have purchased the five-year-old pacing gelding W. W. P., 2:18½, and the gelding Harvey, 2:20½, by Kentucky Volunteer, dam by Kentucky Prince.

Beauty (by The Drummer out of Indiana), dam of the good colt Dr. Ross, died at San Simeon ranch recently. She foaled a filly by Jim Brown, and the youngster is being raised by hand.

George Covington, the famous jockey, grown too heavy to ride, will manage the stable of Green B. Morris this season. This insures a bright future for the lad, who is a thorough horseman.

E. E. Chrisman has resigned his position as Secretary of the Columbia Driving Park Association, and will make his quarters henceforth at the office of J. W. Russwurm, at Nashville, Tenn.

Beaury Mac, 2:19¾, is showing no trace of the lameness that kept him from our tracks last year. At the Bay District track this light bay gelding is running out in the enclosure with a band of broodmares.

The get of Surinam at San Simeon ranch are spoken of very highly, and as far as looks are concerned are said to be superior to the progeny of Jim Brown or Trade Wind. This is Surinam's first crop of youngsters.

Any bidder on the stock offered by A. L. Whitney at auction next month will have the satisfaction of knowing that he is bidding on the "selects" left after ten years' careful culling. In other words, it will be a sale of "selects," and not of "culls."

Mr. J. Malcolm Forbes, famous as the owner of Nancy Hanks, Arion, etc., is the latest man to notify the National Association of Trotting-Horse Breeders that he declines to remain connected with that organization, now that it has a stud book in opposition to that of the American Register Association.

L. A. Richards, of Grayson, Stanislaus county, was in town the other day looking exceedingly well. His great horse, Elector 2170, is getting a large number of gilt-edged mares this season, he reports.

The choicest collection of fine broodmares ever gathered will be sold at Napa next Wednesday. No better opportunity to get sound, young, handsome, well-bred, perfect individuals will be presented for years.

Prince Charlie at eighteen got the famous Salvator, and, most important of all, Diomed at twenty-three got Ball's Florizel, and at the ripe age of twenty-seven got Sir Archy, the Godolphin Arabian of America.

From San Jose comes news of some very fast trials by the young thoroughbreds quartered at that place. Dan McCarty's Adolph is said to have broken several watches in his trial quarters, while Castro is said to have done the best halves.

The owner of the three-year-old filly Annorean, A. J. Hook, challenges Ralph Wilkes and Chimes Girl for a match of mile heats, three in five, to be trotted at the Lexington Breeders' meeting this fall for $1,000 or $1,500 a corner.

One of the fascinations of the breeding of the trotter is the surprises that are constantly arising. Quite often the stone rejected by the builder becomes the corner-stone. Many of the surprises, however, savor strongly of disappointment.

Subscriptions are coming in rapidly from all parts of the United States, Canada and Australia. This week we received some subscriptions from Africa. We have subscribers in almost every land where the English language is spoken.

Last Saturday Mr. Campbell, of Santa Rosa, bought from Arthur Wilson a three-year-old filly by Tom Benton, dam by Dave Hill, Jr., for which he paid $1,000. She can go a quarter at a 2:40 gait at any time and without an hour's work.

Jane McLane (by Budd Doble, dam Lady Clinton), in the Great Broodmare Table, produced just two in the list—Jim Mulvenna, 2:27¾, sire of two in the list; Peacock, 2:23¼, sire of one in the list. There are few cases of this kind on record.

Matt Storn will not race his horses at the coming Blood Horse meeting, as they have not had sufficient work to fit them for hard racing. Denver will be the place where the California horseman's colors will be first stripped to the breeze this season.

A match race of three-eighths of a mile has been made between the Joe Hooker colt owned by Lil Boggs, of Lakeport, and Bay Dick owned by Jim McCulloch, of Ukiah. The race is for a wager of $250 a side, and it will be run on April 2d.—Ukiah Dispatch.

J. H. Outhwaite's young stallion by Stamboul, 2:11, out of Alta Belle (full sister to Bell Boy, 2:19¼, etc.), is one of the sweetest-gaited and speediest youngsters in the State. Mr. Outhwaite knew what he was about when he purchased him from Mr. Hobart.

As regards color, gray horses live longest, roan horses nearly as long. Cream-colored horses are deficient in staying power, especially in summer weather. Bays, on an average, are the best. Horses with black hoofs are stronger and tougher than others.

The two fastest trotting mares, the fastest trotting stallion and the fastest trotting gelding are bred on a strictly thoroughbred foundation. The next fastest trotting mare and the next two fastest trotting stallions have a foundation of nearly thoroughbred extraction.

H. W. Crabb, of Oakville, has a colt by Eros, 2:29½, out of Whisp, by Whippleton, that he believes is one of the best he ever raised. He calls him Eyraud, and as the youngster knows nothing but trot, it is thought that Mr. Crabb is raising a great money-winner.

Richard Havey was up to Senator Fair's stock farm, Knight's Landing, and says that all the mares and colts are looking splendid. When the Senator completes the building of his mile track near Lakeville there will be a number of young Vascos to trot there.

Bobby Beach, the sprinter of sprinters, seems to have wintered well. Mr. J. M. Brown, Bobby's owner, expresses a desire to match him against the alleged invincible Oregon sprinter, Oregon Eclipse. Mr. Brown is willing to back his horse to the extent of $5000.

Egbert has more 2:30 performere to his credit now than any other living son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. He is credited with forty-four with records from 2:12½ to 2:30. Strathmore is sire of forty-one from 2:30 to 2:13¾, and Harold has thirty-eight from 2:30 to 2:08¾.

In breeding, all things else being equal, patronize the horse whose owner makes the greatest efforts to get the merits of his produce before the public, thereby making a market for your colts as well. Every advertisement and notice of the sire adds a new value to his colts.

The Pierce Bros. offer the sum of $250 to the owner of the first of the progeny of Bay Rose, 2:20½, to enter the list. If offers like this were made by all owners of stallions that have none in the list it would not be long before a better class of mares would be booked to the horses.

John Mackey, Jr., now in New York City, last week tried to buy Fair Lady, the dam of Bermuda and Dagonet, from William Barnes, of Lexington, but did not secure her, says an exchange. He offered the highest price ever offered for a broodmare at private sale in this country.

Leland Stanford has purchased of the estate of R. S. Strader, Lexington, Ky., the black mare Valdosta, foaled 1886, by Nutwood, 2:18¾, dam Emma Arteburn (dam of St. Gothard, 2:29), by Mambrino Patchen 58, her dam Jennie Johnson, by Sweet Owen; in foal to Stamboul.

Among the notables which have caused a little flutter at Agricultural Park during the week is Matt Storn's string, says the Sacramento Evening News. He brought from Sonoma seven runners and two trotters. They will be worked here until the Blood Horse meeting, which takes place the 7th of April, when they will be taken to San Francisco. After the meeting there they will come back here for the spring meeting on May 9th. Then they will take in the Eastern circuit, beginning with Denver.

The Grass Valley Jockey Club has decided to hold its spring meeting May 13th and 14th. A new grand stand will be built at Watt Park and fair-sized purses will be hung up. The fast stallions now training there may be induced to go, not so much possibly for the money as for the record.

Judge Kyle, by Red Wilkes, owned by Jacob Hayes, of Poplar, Tulare county, has just been sent across to Independence, Inyo county, to make a season in the stud The breeders over there are enthusiastic over the horse, who could not be sent earlier owing to the bad condition of the roads.

The fastest two-year-olds on the Santa Rosa Stock Farm are by Memo, full brother to the champion Frou-Frou. This verifies the statement made by all owners of youngsters by this horse that they are phenomenally fast. Not only this, they are both pure-gaited trotters and exceedingly handsome.

Le Grand is the proper way to spell the name of this stallion, and we are pleased to see that this is how it appears in the Year Book of 1892. Le Grande is a grammatical impossibility, according to the French. If it was a filly she could be called La Grande, but the name Le Grande is an absurdity.

H. S. Henry, of Penn Valley Stud, Morrisville, Pa., has declined to take May Day (dam of Margaret S. and Incas), knocked down to his bid of $4,000 at the Woodard & Shanklin sale. He says the mare is several years older than she was represented to be in the catalogue. There probably will be a lawsuit over the transaction.

The first foal for 1892, at Gretna Farm (F. S. Gorton, proprietor), came March 12th—a chestnut filly by Saccharine (son of Director 2:17, and Sweetness, 2:21), the dam of Sidney, 2:19¾), dam Hattie Howes, by Pilot Medium; second dam by Bay Middleton. Hattie is bred the same as Tyroleon, 2:20¼, and three others better than 2:30.

Foxhall Keene's Suburban candidate, the $33,500 Tournament, has arrived at Sheepshead Bay to be prepared for the big Coney Island event. Last year the big son of Sir Modred was ailing, but he looks to be as sound as a dollar, and with an impost of only 112 pounds, Mr. Keene thinks Tournament stands a good chance of winning.

Everyone who has any idea of getting a first-class, sound young mare to either breed or use as a roadster should attend the Vineland Stock Farm sale next Wednesday. Bargains will surely be secured. Any one who gets one of the animals offered at any fair price can rest assured that he has something in the horse line he need never be ashamed of.

John Hahn, now in charge of W. L. Ashe's stallion, El Capitan, by Nutwood, at Porterville, Cal., is training one of El Capitan's colts, the pacer, Asheton, who gained a record of 2:24½ at Fresno last year. Asheton is a peculiar-looking bay horse, with a blaze face and lots of white about his eyes, but is going fast enough to suit the most fastidious.

When Blue Bull was a yearling he was to be altered, but as one testicle could not be found (and never did appear), he was allowed to remain a stallion. At first he was called Bull Baby. After Green Wilson bought an interest in him he called him Young Lexington, and when he became full owner he called him Blue Bull. Wilson says Blue Bull paced a half in 1:01.

The match between Chimes Girl and Monbars, that was talked of a little while ago after Mr. Hamlin had said he would match Chimes Girl against any three-year-old in the country that was not by Electioneer, will not come off. The owners of Monbars snapped up the challenge as soon as it was issued, but Mr. Hamlin, in his usual diplomatic way, said that it was a little early to make races of that character.

"Knap" McCarty is sticking to the runners. At present he owns a string of five, quartered at Morris Park. They comprise Sorcerer, four, by Uncas–Necromancy; Emperor Otho, three, by imp. Mortemer–Eccola; St. Anthony, three, by imp. Mortemer–Warpaint; bay colt, three, by Uncas–imp. Abundance; bay colt, two, by Uncas–imp. Born Fool. Sorcerer has proved himself a good one; the rest are "unknown quantities."

Pedigrees are first-rate articles to have, but the time for selling them at long prices has passed. Speed is what horsemen are looking for, and when that is accompanied with bulldog courage and wonderful staying powers, such as Little Albert showed last year, will command big money. The better the pedigree such a trotter has, if a stallion or mare, the more money he or she will bring. Merit first should be the motto in selecting.

In looking over the list of animals catalogued for the Whippleton sale next Wednesday, we see that the animals contain the blood of Whippleton, Milton Medium, 2:25½; Alcona, Naubuc, Grandissimo, 2:27¾; Director, 2:17; Secretary, and a number of others, and many of them trace to such game horses as Gen. Taylor, John Nelson, Eugene Casserly, George M. Patchen Jr., Vick's Ethan Allen and the best of thoroughbreds for a foundation.

The Suburban or Brooklyn Handicap has never been won by a mare. The Kentucky Derby, for colts and fillies three years of age, instituted in 1875, and run in the month of May, has never been captured by a filly, and the American Derby, run at Chicago in the latter part of June, instituted in 1882, has been won just once by a filly—Modesty. This demonstrates pretty conclusively that mares do not get "on edge" until along in July or August.

It looks as if Sacramento would have a mighty good spring meeting. It begins immediately after the conclusion of the Blood Horse meet here. There will be six days of racing—three of trotting and pacing, three of running. The officers of the Capital Turf and Driving Club, under whose auspices the meeting will be held, are: President, J. W. Wilson; Vice-President, Daniel Flint; Treasurer, C. A. Luhrs; Secretary, James W. Stafford.

During 1891 imp. Sir Modred had thirty of his get to start, and twenty were returned winners of seventy-six races and $73,770. Sir Matthew heads the list with $26,780, followed by Sir John with $12,000, Dr. Hasbrouck with $7,365, Mary Stone with $4,600, Dr. Wilcox with $3,810, Grand Prix with $2,965 and Marie Lovell with $2,050. The balance of his winners won less than $2,000 each. In the above the winnings of Masterlode, by Sir Modred or Kyrle Daly, amount to $9,550, are not included.

THE committees appointed by President Kent, of the Golden Gate Fair Association, are as follows: Finance, Chas. S. Neal, A. P. Waugh; Speed and Programme, W. E. Greene, H. W. Meek, A. P. Waugh; Park, P. E. Dalton, Eli S. Dennison, Chas. S. Neal; Premium and Stock, H. W. Meek A. P. Waugh, C. S. Crittenden; Advertising and Printing, A. P. Waugh, Eli S. Dennison, P. E. Dalton; Tickets and Gates, Eli S. Dennison, H. W. Meek, B. E. Dalton.

JOSEPH FOSTER, of Boston, owner of Del Sur, 2:24, the great son of The Moor, writes us that the colts by his horse are very promising, and that they will demonstrate their worth in the East within the next two years. Del Sur is already considered a remarkable horse in Massachusetts. George Starr is training a Del Sur that is almost certain to make a low mark during the coming season. At present Mr. Foster's horse is in the hands of Mr. Tourtelotte.

THE added money to the Grand Prix de Paris this year is $40,000, having been doubled by the Jockey Club, although the entries have long since closed. The total amount of money given at Longchamps, Chantilly, and in the provinces will be $500,000, or $12,500 more tnan last year, this amount being apportioned in 258 races, of which ouly 25 are for two-year-olds, while there are 48 for three-year-olds, 157 for three-year-olds and upwards, and 28 for four-year-olds and upwards.

JAMES CRAWFORD, of Bakersfield, Cal., has purchased of Charles Kerr, same place, the bay stallion Riverside, by Norfolk, dam by Joe Hooker; second dam Illusion, by Alarm. The dam of Riverside is full sister to Leh and Raveloe. The latter ran a mile at Monmouth Park in 1:39¼. Riverside is an exceedingly handsome horse, but met with an accident. His progeny are all racy-looking and promising. With the exception of Alta he looks more like his great sire than any other son ever did, it is said.

THE case of Once Again, the six-year-old son of Onondaga, presents curious features. The horse ran seventeen races last year, six of which he won. He won two races at Guttenburg recently, and had another well in hand when he fell near the finish, and, as veterinary surgeons declared, broke and displaced his shoulder, and should have to be destroyed. The horse now eats with an appetite, appears to suffer no pain, and has a chance to recover. An examination showed that the bone was only cracked, and not displaced.

THE Palo Alto people are quite "sweet" on the two-year-old colt Ohiyesa, by Argyle, dam imp. Amalia. This youngster is declared to be faster than greased lightning. Cadmus, a two-year-old bay colt, by Flood out of imp. Cornelia, is said to be a mighty good one also. As far as Charm, the much-touted Cheviot–Fairy Rose filly, is concerned, we are informed that the tipsters have absolutely nothing to go on—that she has done no fast work as yet, and that it is not known whether she is a coming "crackajack" or not. A small string of Palo Alto youngsters will take part in the Blood Horse meeting, we understand.

W. O'B. MACDONOUGH, owner of Menlo Stock Farm, has purchased from W. S. Barnes, of the Melbourne Stud, near Lexington, Ky., the eleven-year-old mare Fair Lady, by Glenelg, dam Fair, by Glen Athol. She is the dam of Dagonet and Bermuda, and is with foal to the latter's sire, Bersan, and will be bred to Hindoo. The price was $12,500, which is $8,500 more than Mr. Barnes paid for her at the Elmendorf closing-out sale last fall. Mr. Macdonough is certainly getting together a lot of broodmares from the royal families, and we believe that inside of four years this gentlemen will be regarded as one of the leading breeders of thoroughbreds in California.

M. P. KETCHUM, of Brighton, Ont., owner of the famous trotting dog Doc, writes to J. E. Ducker, of this city, that he has heard nothing in reply to his acceptance of Dave Eiseman's challenge in behalf of the Sagebrush canine with the Arionic gait. Mr. Ketchum declares that he is ready for a match, but cannot hear from Eiseman regarding this much-talked-of affair. The Canadian makes inquiry regarding the fitness of the Mechanics' Pavilion and Haight-street grounds for racing, and shows his willingness in every sentence to contest against the Nevada whirlwind. If Mr. Eiseman will come up with the coin, there is no doubt about its being covered.

IN TENDERING his resignation as a member of the Executive Committee of President Mali's Society, Mr. J. C. Sibley wrote: "The reasons impelling this resignation are known, doubtless, to you, but may be briefly stated as arising from the fact that the starting of an additional register is opposed to my interests as a breeder, and not to mine alone, but, in my judgment, to the interests of the great mass of breeders." In sending in his resignation as a member of Mr. Mali's Society, Mr. F. S. Gorton wrote that if it was the intention to start a new register he "could not consistently remain a member." If this thing keeps on there will be nothing left of the society except a president, a treasurer and a secretary.—Turf, Field and Farm.

LAST week articles of incorporation of the Gonzales Race Course Association were filed with County Clerk Riordan. The capitalization of the association is $5,000, divided into 100 shares of $50 each. The directors are Alfred Gonzales, Wm. Sales, Alfred Wideman, Peter Chrisman and Geo. S. Faw. The object of the corporation, as set forth in its articles, is "to build and maintain a race-track near the town of Gonzales in Monterey County, California, for running, trotting, training and other purposes for which a track is usually made use of, and to lease sufficient ground upon which to construct said track." A kite-shaped track has been surveyed by County Surveyor Garber, and we may look for some rapid time thereon in the future.

D. G. BRICKER, the well-known mining man of Butte Mont., was in the city this week. In the course of a conversation he declared his intention of selling off his splendid little string of trotting-bred horses. It consists of Irene B., pacer, 2:23½, by Jay Bird (sire of Allerton, 2:09¼); Ellard, four-year-old colt, two-year-old record 2:34, by Charley Wilkes (son of Red Wilkes), dam by Chenery's Grey Eagle; D. G. B., 2:29¼, gelding, by Stilson, and last, not least the great game mare Ida D., whom Mr. Bricker declares can beat 2:18 three times any day without doubt, by Maxim 2711, dam Nutmeg Maid (dam also of Don L., 2:28¾), by Thomas Jefferson, 2:23. Mr. Bricker is a popular young gentleman, and his departure from the trotting turf of Montana will be a severe blow. However, his loss will be some one else's gain, for his horses will doubtless be sold almost regardless of price.

DAN MCCARTY has given up the idea of buying the Lodi track. It seems that they raised the price on the white-hatted nobleman of Erin to $8,000, when McCarty thought he had matters in fair shape to get it for $7,000. The citizens of Lodi were so anxious to have an enterprising horseman like McCarty in their midst that they had declared their willingness to subscribe $3,500 toward the purchase price. However, Mac was fearful that if he said $8,000 they would suddenly raise the limit to $10,000, so he declared all offers off.

THE raising of the amount of the purses by the Blood Horse Association from $400 to $500, with no entrance fee, is a move in the right direction, as is also the over-weight purse system. The fossilized way of entering horses two and three months ahead in an ordinary purse race should have been done away with years ago. Now we will see closer finishes and better odds all the way through. All that remains to make the coming meeting the most successful in the history of the Blood Horse Association is to advertise liberally and sensibly.

GEORGE W. LOGGIE, of Empire City, Or., is getting together a choice lot of trotting horses. He owns fifteen now, and they are all exceedingly promising. Mr. Loggie writes us that a half-mile track is being built at Marshfield, Or., six miles from his home, but for some reason the racing organization at that place does not want to join the National Trotting Horse Association. Mr. Loggie owns the first and only standard and registered trotting stallion that has ever been in Coos County, showing that the business of breeding high-class animals with the diagonal gait is in its infancy in that part of Oregon. As yet Mr. Loggie has not made up his mind whether he will send a string to compete for the stakes on the Oregon circuit or not.

SAID a reporter of a local paper to long-headed Tom McLaughlin, of Lowell, Mass., the other day: "Mr. McLaughlin, you have seen as much of the ins and outs of the trotting horse business as any man in New England; now don't you think that performance is the best pedigree after all?" "No, sir," was Tom's emphatic answer. "Performance is great stuff, my boy, but it won't sell your undeveloped colts. Two-thirds of the stock farms in the country would go to the wall if their owners had to wait for individual performance to sell their stock. No, sir; pedigree is the foundation-stone of the trotting horse breeding business. If your pedigree is right there will be no trouble about the performers. Breed right, and performers are sure to come. See?"

ALTHOUGH D. J. McCarty failed to secure the Lodi track, he made a few purchases while negotiations for the course were in progress. Of C. F. Elliot he bought a three-year-old mare by Dexter Prince, dam Pet, by Mambrino Wilkes; of J. B. Harelson he purchased the bay mare Dexterena, by Dexter Prince, dam by Chieftain, second dam by Corsica; of L. Wolf, Princess Royal, a bay mare four years old, by Dexter Prince, dam Lena R., by Joe Daniels; of same owner Lena Richards, by Richards' Elector 2170, dam Lena R., by Joe Daniels, and Princess Patchen, by Dexter Prince, dam by Sargent's Patchen; of L. M. Morse Cherokee Princess, brown mare, four years old, full sister to Cherokee Prince. McCarty apparently has no end of confidence in the Dexter Princes.

THE following story is, we believe, credited to Chauncey M. Depew, but whatever its source, it is worth repeating: A wealthy gentleman had made up his mind he must own a fast horse, so he went to a prominent dealer in a large city, who took him into his stable and showed him a number of horses with records from 2:30 to 2:40, and graphically told the wonderful races they had won. The gentleman did not enthuse on these, so he led the way to another stable and showed him some colts that were sired by gilt-edged stallions of distinguished families, and, after commenting on their good qualities, which was attentively listened to, the would-be purchaser turned to the proprietor and said: "Well, I have seen all of your 'have beens' and all of your 'will be's,' but what I want is an 'is 'er.'"

REPORTS have been sent out that the noted filly Yo Tambien, who was the best two-year-old in the West last year, is very lame at Nashville, with chances that she will not be able to run this season. Her owner, Mr. Smith of Minneapolis, contradicts the statement. He says: "I think that in one of her races at Garfield Park, maybe the last one, Yo Tambien hurt her foot in some way. The effects did not show themselves right away, but last month she became lame. He cut through the hoof until the diseased part was reached, when a lot of ugly matter was extracted. That relieved the filly at once, and since then she has been doing finely and is over her lameness. She is already walking around, and in a few weeks will be in active training. I am quite sanguine she will be able to fill at least some of her spring engagements."

GROUPED together were mother, brother and sister awaiting the report their husband and father would bring; anxiety was pictured on every face; this strain had been going on for many hours; how could mortal being endure it? They did not notice the approaching storm nor the flash of lightning that set fire to their neighbor's barn, and no wonder. Was not the object of their anxiety, nearest to their hearts, their dearest wish about to be realized? Nor did they care whether the Supreme Court decided in favor of Boyd or the other fellow as long as this great question turned out as they wished. "O! I hope it is," said Mary, and mother and son chimed in, "So do I!" but alas for hopes; they saw him coming from the barn and all ran to meet him. "What is it, father?" they all asked in chorus. He mournfully shook his head, and mournfully said: "It is a horse colt."—Ex.

THE Tulare County Agricultural Society filed articles of incorporation in the County Clerk's office Monday. The objects of the incorporation are for the purpose of promoting and encouraging agriculture, horticulture, mechanics, manufacturing, stock-raising and general domestic industry; for holding exhibitions of horses, cattle and other stock, and of agricultural, horticultural, viticultural, mineral, mechanical and manufacturing products, and maintaining a race course and holding trials of speed of horses. The principal place of business shall be Tulare, and the corporation is to exist fifty years. Following are the directors: S. A. Clythe, W. H. Wallace, James H. Carlisle, B. F. Bishop, G. W. Zartman, W. B. Cartmill, A. Borders, Tulare; J. W. Martin, Woodville. The capital stock is $20,000, divided into 800 shares of the par value of $25 each, of which $10,000 has been actually subscribed. Work has been commenced on a race-course, which is to be kite-shaped.—Visalia Delta.

FRED T. COUNTER, who has charge of Noah Armstrong's stock ranch and stud of fast horses at Twin Bridges, is in town. Mr. Counter takes great interest in the coming race meeting and will probably enter several horses. He informed a Tribune man that Spokane, the Montana horse that astonished the world a year or two ago, is recuperating on the succulent blue grass of Mr. Armstrong's Kentucky stock farm, and that in all probability he would be put on the track again in the course of a year or two. Spokane, it will be remembered, broke down after his first brilliantly successful racing season. The cause of his sudden collapse is not generally known. While cleaning his stall a brutal jockey struck the valuable horse with a rake. Spokane jumped and fell, the fall wrenching his spinal column, and for a long time it was thought he would never recover. The best veterinary surgeons, however, have changed their minds lately. He is improving rapidly and his complete recovery is not out of the question.—Dillon (Mont.) Tribune.

IT IS to be regretted that B. C. Holly was not reinstated. D. M. Burns cast the only ballot that kept the Vallejo turfman out. There was a full board present, and the balance of the members were united in favor of Holly's reinstatement. As there was no law covering the case at the time Mr. H. was suspended, it is hard to understand how he could be punished at all as he has been. Since that time the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association has passed a law covering just such a case—where a jockey is ordered to lay up a heat. If the case were carried to the courts we doubt not what the result would be. However, where betting is allowed on the result of heats there should be some protection for the betting public, and it is unfortunate for Mr. Holly that the local racing association did not enact a law covering the case in point before the meeting began. With such a law in force, Holly would surely not have violated it. He made "no bones" of declaring that he had ordered his jockey to "lay up" a heat, stating that it was a time-honored custom and he had a perfect right to do so where it did not conflict with the rules.

SPEAKING of Cato, the colored jockey owned by John Campbell, who also owned Wagner, the great racehorse of the '40's, a writer signing himself McDonough says in Dunton's Spirit of the Turf: "Your correspondent from Louisville, Ky., writing under the head of 'Fides,' has given quite a vivid description of the great race between Grey Eagle and Wagner, when the Kentuckians lost their money, horses, farms, and their all on Grey Eagle. I wonder if Fides ever knew what became of the rider of Wagner, that won this great race half a century ago? He is living in Hancock County, Ill., and owns two good farms, well stocked, has a large bank account, and has served four years in the Illinois State Senate. He is one of the sharpest politicians in the State, and knows no such word as fail. When he goes into a political race he ends it by coming out ahead, as he did in the great Wagner race. He has the respect of the whole community, and is well known throughout the State. Start him in the Eleventh Congressional District race and he will defeat the rider from Paris, and give those Kentuckians a chance to win back their farms that they lost fifty years ago."

OF LOANTAKA, last year's sensational winner of the Suburban, the New York Herald says: "A somewhat late arrival on the track was last year's Suburban winner, Loantaka. Always a beautiful little horse, teeming with quality, he was certainly the gentleman of the party. He has been given good, healthy work on the boulevard; in fact, his owner commenced cantering him earlier this year than heretofore. He, with Longford, who I saw on the boulevard, are certainly the most forward of the Brooklyn candidates located around Gravesend. The last named has taken healthy canters daily along the boulevard, and if he only stands the preparation will be as fit as any of his opponents," and of Nomad, the three-year-old Californian, it says: "The latter has certainly fulfilled the promise he gave last year. Then he was a grand-looking colt, and the twelve months have shown no deterioration. On the contrary, he is most pleasing to the eye, his beautiful, clean, sloping shoulders and lengthy, but well-proportioned body, thoroughly preparing one for his grand stride and free action. If the Suburban is to fall to the share of a three-year-old, this slashing youngster is the most likely to accomplish the record."

MR. CHARLES REED, well known to all racing men, and famous throughout the country as the owner of the great St. Blaise, has returned to town from Fairview in the best of health and spirits, and reports St. Blaise and his other grand stallions in fine fettle, says the New York Spirit of the Times. En route to the East Mr. Reed encountered an inquisitive stranger from the West, who furnished him with considerable amusement. After a desultory conversation of a few minutes the stranger got down to business and said: "Well, where be you from?" "Sumner County, Tennessee," answered Mr. Reed. "Ain't that the county where the durned fool that paid $100,000 for a horse lives?" "Yes," smilingly replied Mr. Reed. The stranger was allowed by Mr. Reed to remain in blissful ignorance of the identity of his new-found acquaintance, who appealed to him for advice upon the plan of action he should pursue upon entering New York for the first time. The loquacious gentleman from the West was full of suggestions for Mr. Reed's safety, advising him first of all to "ride in a cowpe to the Metropolitan Hotel, afterwards stick closely to Broadway, and have nothing to do with any strangers." Mr. Reed and his mentor parted with mutual expressions of good will.

TACOMA NOTES.—The Tacoma Speeding Association is already making preparations for a meeting in June, which is expected to be one of the largest and best ever held on the coast. Work will be begun this week to put the track in first-class shape. Horsemen in the city and along the coast are watching the arrangements with interest. Some of the finest horseflesh on the coast will be seen at the meet. All the horses referred to below will be entered. Grant W. Beach has a fine stable of horses, which he expects are bread-winners. He is working General, a fast pacer; Mollie K., a trotter, with a record of 2:29; Albert Sutton's Black Prince and Palmer's Young Pacer. Ed S. Barlow's Mink is doing road work. Mink has a record of 2:22. C. P. Chamberlin shipped his horses to California. Mike Costillo will prepare them for the spring races. Brockaway will put Bishop Hero, who has a mark of 2:26, in training. Jim Hickey will handle him. John Stone's Mollie Cooper is expected at the track this week. John N. Fuller has some fine colts at his ranch. A. E. Cromwell's Little Fred is working fine. It is expected that he will get a mark of 2:20 or better this season. W. D. Lammon gave one of his pet fillies two heats recently, and she went so fast in places that he has concluded to put her in training.

THE GUN.

The San Francisco Gun Club.

On Saturday last at Oakland Track occurred the second match for the season of the San Francisco Gun Club.

The morning weather threatened to be all too showery to be comfortable, if indeed it should not preclude the enjoyment of the sport altogether. The twelve o'clock boat found a few of the faithful ready for the sport and as a result six of the membership succeeded in shooting off their scores before the main body of the club, which took the one o'clock boat, arrived at the grounds.

This system of dividing the shooters into squads has several commendable features. It is an important feature in that it enhances the pleasure of the match by bringing the individual shooter to the score much more frequently, as to time, than where so many shoot together.

Many gentlemen desire to get back to the city for the early dinner hour and by taking the 12 M. boat, they are enabled to shoot up their score and be at liberty early in the afternoon.

The weather proved very fine for the sport and the match proved very interesting.

Mr. J. S. Thompson, of New York, a member of the Westminister Gun Club, was present as a guest of the club and proved himself an expert at the sport. He invariably used his second barrel on every bird, although it was seldom necessary. He used it very quickly, almost instantaneously but, like the majority of such shots, it was put in, evidently, as the saying goes, in "playing to the gallery," and its accuracy was quite faulty. It was noticed that on the two or three occasions that it was used from necessity that its use was perceptibly deferred and the birds fell the usual distance from the trap. Mr. Thompson uses the first barrel very quick, dropping his birds very near the trap. He succeeded in killing all save his ninth bird, a rapidly rising right quarter out-going bird, which escaped perceptible punishment. Mr. Thompson holds his gun well to his shoulder, and after calling "No bird" on first bird fired at he was permitted to go on in violatian of the rule requiring gun to be below shoulder before calling for bird.

Mr. John K. Orr was in good form and killed all of his birds save the eleventh, which being a swift rising right quarterer, escaped. All are acquainted with his splendid position at the trap and well-nigh perfect manner of handling his gun.

Mr. R. B. Woodward, the "steady and reliable" shot of the club, grassed all of his birds save the twelfth in fine form. This was a swift lightning mover to the right quarter, outward rising and got away slightly punished. The faithful transfer to canvass of the look of surprise, mingled with blank amazement, which his face presented as that lost bird sped away, would have made the fortune of any artist. On his second bird Mr. Woodward was doubtlessly saved a "goose egg" by reason of the unthougthed action of the Field Captain in shooting the bird, which was apparently but slightly injured by either of Mr. Woodward's shots, while it was yet within bounds. Mr. Woodward was given another bird which he succeeded in killing.

Mr. J. O. Cadman fell into line with the above named gentlemen, by allowing to escape the same kind of a bird, same direction of flight. On his eighth bird, which was an exceedingly swift driver, which he killed in fine style, he was penalized, owing to position of gun, but he killed handsomely his filling bird, thus securing eleven credits. Mr. Cadman has improved wonderfully over his last year's form, both in position and execution.

Mr. A. C. Tubbs came next in order and secured ten of his twelve birds in excellent form. His sixth and eighth birds were of the same nature as to speed and flight to the escaping birds above noticed. The fact that none of these birds, so far noted, were dead out of bounds goes far in showing their speed and the very difficult matter of hitting a rapid rising right-quartering bird. Evidently it is a hard matter to calculate the proper angle of birds of first quality of speed, taking this direction.

Mr. T. H. Swett also secured ten out of his twelve birds, missing his sixth and twelfth birds, same flight. Mr. Sweet shoots very effectively and evenly, and we think shoots a shade quicker than he did last year.

From the appended summary it will be seen that a large number of the first shots of the club killed nine out of their twelve birds. Out of the whole number of birds missed by the gentlemen killing nine birds, all save five were rapidly rising right-quartering birds. This is the more peculiar when it is remembered that the grounds are level as well as the immediate surroundings, and that there was no wind to speak of and no other apparent cause for making birds taking this line of flight, particularly elusive.

The lunches furnished by that excellent caterer, Mr. James Vancé, of Oakland, are a feature of all this season's regular matches on the club grounds, and on this occasion was fully up to the requirements of the assembled sportsmen. The interest in trap events this season is much more marked than ever before.

The California Wing Shooting Club.

On the first of the week this pioneer organization in the line of sport at the trap in California, met at Oakland track for the purpose of engaging in their monthly season of recreation. The day was beautiful and the scene presented from the grounds was very fascinating indeed. The hills in distant eastward were resplendent in their vesture of brilliant emerald. Alternately cloud-veiled and sun-kissed, they presented a most interesting subject of study. The beautiful changes of this kaleidescopic scene would have proven interesting to a far less impressionable organization than that of the average sportsman, and to all who viewed it from the standpoint of a lover of Nature, there was an abundance of beauty presented which called forth unbounded admiration. The broken, low-lying forms of ragged clouds, nestling in the cañons and gorges, sombre and gray, now lifted, here and there, by a frolicsome breeze over some bright background, were shot through with the arrows of light and set a-tremble with flashings of silver, as every mist-thread became electrified with kisses from the sun. The velvet emerald of grasses bespangled with Queen Flora's choicest gems; the moving shadows of the clouds and broken glimpses of the purple, airy sea, with the tall, waving eucalyptus trees terminating the green sward of the shooting park in the distance formed an enchanting scene.

It must have been the beauty of the scene, or some other potent cause that touched the sportsmen and interfered with their shooting, for never before has this club presented such a broken record. Dr. "Slade" made the only perfect score, and for so doing he is entitled to full credit, as he grassed, in fine form, all of his birds.

SUMMARY.

Oakland Shooting Park, Oakland, Cal., Nebruary 20, 1892.—The California Wing Shooting Club's second monthly meeting of the season for the club's annual prizes and trophies. Dr. S. E. Knowles, President; Mr. Crittenden Robinson, Secretary. C. W. Kyle, Referee. The score:

Then followed pool shooting for the balance of the day. The fact that Mr. Robinson changed guns accounts for his admirable scores during the balance of the day. The first pool resulted as follows:

Robinson	1	1	1	1	1	1—6
"Slade"	1	2	1	2	2	1—6
Fay	2	1	1	2	2	1—6
Smith	1	*	1	1	1	1—5
"Randall"	2	1	1	*	1	2—5
Schroeder	2	0	1	*	*	1—4
"Lake"	1	0	1	*	0	w—2

The perfect scores divided the money.

Five more pools were shot off in which some excellent work was done.

One of the features of the day's shooting was Mr. Ned Fay's shooting. This gentleman uses his gun in well nigh perfect form and when it comes to the quick use of his second barrel he is without an equal at the trap. Elsewhere we have commented on Mr. Thompson's shooting, a gentleman, who, by the way, illustrates by the well nigh instantaneous use of his first barrel, the idea which, it will be remembered, we have sought to impress upon sportsmen at the traps, in order to have them arrive at the highest degree of skill possible.

For a first-class score one must kill the birds before they become "hard birds," as the designation applies to those swift of flight.

In the use of his first barrel Mr. Thompson has given our sportsmen who witnessed his shooting a valuable lesson.

Not only does Mr. Fay use his first barrel very quick, but he uses his second quicker and more effectively than any man whom we have ever seen shoot at the traps. In shooting a very close patterned first barrel and shooting it instantly it requires well nigh marvelous skill to evenly and accurately cover the birds, but when a miss is scored with first and the second is used effectively on a swift bird which drops it within five yards of the trap we consider such an event worthy of special mention.

Mr. Fay did this, not only once but several times on this occasion—so often that all possibility, not to say probability, of chance entering into a solution of the question was absolutely eliminated.

Mr. Thompson used his second very quick, but it was noticed that when not killing with his first it became necessary and he invariably did use much deliberation with his second. Mr. Fay uses his second instantly and as we have before said, the most effectively, time being considered, of any man we have ever seen at the traps. He scarcely shoots enough, these days, to keep in practice, but for perfect use of his second barrel we think him rarely equalled and never excelled.

It is one thing to know how a problem may be solved, but it is quite another thing to place one's ideas into execution. The most beautiful pictures ever conceived, in the mind of the artist, have there remained and died with the individual, resisting and defying all attempts of the skill of brush to portray. The most beautiful imagery, the sweetest songs, the most beautiful impressions of the poet and the descriptive writer, defy all efforts of the pen at portraval. It is one thing to know; it is another and far more difficult feat to perform and place the conception in tangible form. In the skilled arts, the education of the hand to accurately do the bidding of the will, in an attempt to execute the conceptions of the mind, requires a life long study and devotion and even then, at best, the effort produced is never entirely satisfactory to the writer or artist. So it is with handling the gun. One may know how it should be done, by practice may attain a degree of skill but unless the education of hand and body be constantly kept up the individual will find himself, after the lapse of effort, in the position of a mere novice in practice work.

To be a successful shot at the trap requires quick work; one must shoot instantly or lose much of the chance of grassing their birds. In this matter we reiterate the oft repeated instruction "Do not do as I do, but do as I say." Shoot quick.

An effort is being made to enlarge and render more popular on this coast the sport of shooting at inanimate targets. We trust this may be successful. Many men will take delight in the sport who do not shoot at live birds. We trust that the clubs devoted to the practice of inanimate target shooting may be eminently successful this year.

The Devils of the Southwest.

In June 1863, I was at Fort Craig. The Indians were very troublesome. Their audacity and temerity were unprecedented. Several times, in the early evening, they made descents upon the grazing grounds of the river bottom near the fort, and drove off the government herds of beef cattle. On one occasion several hundred large steers, that had just arrived from Atcheson with a train bringing government supplies for the army, were turned out to graze on the reserved lands near the fort. They were guarded night and day, by a guard composed of Mexicans. Though it was well known that Mexicans were not brave soldiers, it was thought that they would suffice to guard stock from the depredations of Indian raiders. Would they? The result will show. One bright moonlight evening, a small band of Navajos—the Apaches were not so venturesome—attacked the guard, killed three of them and drove the herd of steers off to the mountains. The surviving guards, about twenty in number, fled to the fort and gave the alarm. Though well armed they had not fired a shot, nor had they made the slightest resistance. It so happened that there were no cavalry at the fort at the time, and Col. Rigg ordered Capt. Roberts with his company—"E" 1st California Infantry—to pursue and capture the stock. This was thought feasible from the fact that the steers were worn out with their long journey across the plains, and the further fact that the night was a brilliant moonlight, almost equal to the light of day, making it easy to follow the broad trail which so many cattle would make; besides Capt. Roberts' company had the reputation of being the best marching company on the Rio Grande, and were called the "foot calvary." Capt. Roberts was not more than an hour behind the Indians. He first went to the grazing grounds to strike the trail. He there found the bodies of the three dead Mexican guards, all killed by arrows; also the carcasses of several steers that had been killed by the same kind of missiles, the arrows having passed clean through their bodies, showing the great force of an arrow sped from bended bow in the hands of a stalwart Indian.

All night long the soldiers tramped at their highest marching speed, but no sight of steer or Indian greeted their vision. At sunrise they found the face of the country broken by rolling hills, intercepting the view except for short distances, but the trail was so fresh that they persevered.

About noonday there opened up before them a broad plain, and on its face could be seen the trail, narrowing and dimming in the distance, and stretching straight to the mountains beyond, but not a vestige, except the trail, of Indian or steer. Further pursuit was useless.

Raids upon the small villages, the haciends and ranchos of the valley, had become disagreeably frequent, and very depleting of the wealth and resources of the inhabitants. The settlers were nearly all Mexicans, with a few Americans and a sprinkling of the ubiquitous Irishman. Their wealth consisted of live stock, principally sheep. Their flocks of sheep were numbered by thousands and tens of thousands, their fleeces being the chief source of income, though at that time beef and mutton commanded a fair price owing to the presence of the troops, who must be fed.

This live stock excited the cupidity of the Indians and was the object of their raids. They were exceedingly fond of good living but prefered the luxury of living by the sweat of some other man's brow. There were two of these marauding tribes, the Apaches and the Navajos; they were both strong in numbers, and merciless and uncompromising in their hostility to the white settlers. These two tribes were the only ones that depredated the valley. There were several smaller tribes—Pueblos they were called, because of living in villages. The Pueblos were peaceful, and friendly to the whites; they had made considerable progress in the arts of civilization; had learned the law of meum and tuum; were pastoral, agricultural and horticultural, but were comparatively weak, and of few numbers.

They were as subject to the despoliations of the Apaches and Navajos as their white neighbors, and hated them with a more intense hatred.

Sometimes, when the aggressions of their enemies became unendurable, they would band together, and, with their combined forces inflict condign punishment upon them, which served to stay their hands until they had forgotten the castigation.

There was one of the Pueblo tribes, the Zunis, that they seldom molested, for they knew, by bitter, past experience, that the stealing of their cattle or the killing of a Zuni would be surely avenged, with a swift and terrible vengence.

Between the territories of the Apaches and the Navajos was a broad neutral ground, unoccupied except by the Zunis who were subject to raids from either side but were seldom molested because of the wholesale fear of their vengeance. The Apaches and Navajos seemed always to hold friendly relations, and never warred with each other. They were kindred spirits but never acted in concert; each tribe stole and robbed and murdered "on its own hook," unsupported and unmolested by the other. They had established a modus vivendi by which each could march through the territory of the other when on a raid, going, and returning with their plunder, without let or hindrance.

Because of these friendly relations the Apaches could strike the settlement as far north as Taos, and, "at one fell swoop" clean out the valley as far south as Albuquerque; or, the Navajos, crossing the Apache country to the south as far as Paraje sweep north as far as Albuquerque and escape with their plunder to their mountain retreats in Cordilleras.

In these raids the Indians took everything that wore horn or hoof, except hogs. In this respect they resemble the Jews; they abhor pork.

Some ethnologists think the-so-called-aborigines of North America are descended from the ten lost tribes of Israel, but, except in their abhorence of pork they differ radically from their putative progenitors.

The meat-food most relished by them is broiled jackass steak, then mule, horse, beef, mutton, in the order mentioned; but it was only when out of other kinds of meat that they would tackle horse, and then they ate the inferior ones only, reserving the best for use in future raids.

These raids were solely for plunder; the people were comparatively safe so long as they confined themselves to their houses and allowed the Indians full swing in the corrals and stock yards; but, if they showed any disposition to defend their property they were almost sure to be killed. Sometimes the Indians would carry children away with them and adopt them into their tribes, or make slaves of them. Some of these children became chiefs of distinction, and warriors of renown, or a greater honor than either, most expert thieves and robbers. If girls, they were taken to wife by some chief, as they were more comely, as well as better skilled workers, than their own squaws. It was through them also that they learned Spanish.

All the Indians on the Mexican frontier posses a smattering of the Spanish language.

The reason for sparing the unresisting was, that they were considered by the Indians as so many slaves, useful for raising new flocks and herds for their future raids.

So great was the fear and dread of the Apache, that Mexican mothers used the word "Apache" as a bogy with which to frighten fretful children into quietude. "Apa-a-ache, Apa-a-a-che!" spoken in blood-curdling whispers by the wearied and worried mother was sure to hush the noisy, petulent child into awe-struck silence and passive obedience.

About thirty miles south from Fort Craig, and five or six east from the Rio Grande, and just at the edge of that stretch of waterless mesa called El Jornada del Muerto (the journey of death), was a spring, at which the Indians camped when passing to and fro on their raids. To stop this, and to have a convenient point for observation, a small fort was built near the spring and garrisoned by a company of mounted infantry, Capt. French's of the 5th Californians. The fort was named Fort McRea in honor of gallant Capt. McRea, who fell, fighting the rebels, at the battle of Valverde near Fort Craig.

Capt. French invited me to spend a few days with him, which invitation was gladly accepted. From the little fort scouting parties were sent out every morning to search for "Indian signs." I always, while at the fort, accompanied one of these parties, scouring the surrounding country. One morning we rode down the left bank of the Rio Grande for several miles; failing to find any signs indicating the presence of Indians, we crossed over to the right bank. A spur of the Cordilleras shot down from the main range to within a couple of miles of the river. This spur was forbidding of aspect; scarred and seamed and worn by Nature's convulsions and elemental action, but picturesque, and beautiful from its emerald garb of pinions. The intervening space between mountain spur and river flow was covered with chapparal of moderate growth, interspersed with cottonwood and live-oak, from whose branches, in lavish profusion, hung festoons of mistletoe that swayed gracefully in the gentle breeze, presenting a charming picture. The mistletoe, as everyone knows, is a parasite, and, in popular belief, lives only on the oak, but in the valley of the Rio Grande it flourishes on the cottonwood as luxuriously as on the oak.

In a deep channel which lead from mountain to river, and was once the bed of a mountain torrent, but now an arroyo seco (dry river-bed), we scared up a score of Indians, who probably thought they were securely hidden. They were taken by surprise and fled incontinently. They broke for the mountains and all escaped, though we sent volley upon volley after them. To attempt to follow them through the thick woods into the mountains was futile. They all escaped except one, who was between us and the river, and his escape to the mountains cut off, and we turned our undivided attention to him. He made direct for the river, and when we reached the bank was half way across. At this point the river was broad, shallow and easily fordable. One of the soldiers, who was a little in advance, sprang from his horse when he reached the river's brink, jumped down to the bench formed on the margin of the river by the caving down of the bank, took deliberate aim and shot the Indian plumb through the body. The redskin neither fell nor winced, but stopped running, turned slowly round and answered the soldier's shot as coolly as any veteran, also sending his bullet to the mark and shooting the soldier through the breast. This was all done so quickly that, though we saw it while tearing through the chapparal, we had no chance to act until after the fatal shot was fired.

Immediately on delivering his fire the Indian gave a shrill whoop of defiance, threw his rifle into the river and dashed through the water for the further shore. The balance of the party, on arriving at the river's bank, unlimbered and pumped lead into the fleeing Indian as fast as they could load and fire, but the red devil never slackened speed, nor showed signs of having been hit. He gained the opposite shore and was flying over the plain with the fleetness and steady gait of an antelope, when suddenly he stopped, staggered and fell—to rise no more.

His days were numbered; his career was done; nevermore would the excitement of the raid and the pleasure of theft delight his blood-thirsty soul; nevermore would juicy jackass steaks delectate his palate and appease his insatiate maw. He had gone to the happy hunting and stealing grounds, where, according to his creed the shadow, if not the substance, of the things his soul delighted in awaited his coming.

With tender hearts and gentle hands, the soldiers bore their wounded comrade to the fort, where, after lingering two days he died, and was buried with a soldier's honors.

A few of us crossed the river to interview the fallen brave. He had been struck by nine bullets, five of them passing through a vital part, any of which would have been fatal. It was amazing that he could carry so much lead so far; his vitality was wonderful; but, an Indian is like a deer; he will run as long as a spark of vitality is left in him.

He was a magnificent specimen of physical beauty and strength; six feet and two inches tall, with a head like the head of a buffalo, and hair as thick and long and strong as Sampson's unshorn. One of the soldier's scalped him, "lifting all the hair" which grew from eyebrow to nape of neck. I remonstrated against this act of barbarity, but with no avail. The hatred of the soldiers for an Indian had become a mania. They knew of too many of their comrades, as well as other captives, being tortured by the bronze demons in human guise to entertain any feeling of tenderness for them, and they had no more compunction in scalping an Indian than in skinning a wolf or beheading a rattlesnake.

To give the Devil his due, the Indians were less given to scalping than the whites. During all the months and years spent on the Southern border, I never knew, positively, of an Indian taking a scalp; but for a soldier to scalp an Indian was not an uncommon occurrence. But then, what is scalping the dead in comparison to the horror of torturing the living.

The scalp of the Navajo brave—he was of the Navajo tribe—was of monstrous size, and with its long, thick, black locks, made an interesting curio. It eventually found its way to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, through an agent who was hunting Indian relics, where it can be seen to this day, together with many bogus relics made by the soldiers, and in a spirit of mischief palmed off on the agent as genuine.

While I was at Fort McRea reports came in that a large body of Indians were raiding the valley to the north, coming southward and sweeping the whole valley of its stock. They had captured forty thousand sheep, twenty-five hundred cattle and a thousand horses and mules. They were thought to be Navajos. Their operations were mostly confined to the east side of the valley and river, and the stock secured was driven into a range of mountains that run parallel with the river from twenty to thirty miles eastward.

It was certain that the Indians would make an attempt to cross the valley and escape with their booty to their mountain strongholds in the Cordilleras, and it was equally certain that they would make the attempt in the night, and mounted patrols nightly scoured the country in the vicinity of the river to intercept them, or to discover evidence of their having crossed. The patrols were constantly on the elert. Early one morning the Fort McRea patrol reported that a great band of sheep and cattle and horses had crossed the river during the night a few miles below the fort. Many of the sheep had been drowned and their bodies lodged along the banks of the river.

It was thought that the band could not be far away, for before reaching the river they had to traverse, from their hiding place in the mountains to the east, an open plain of thirty miles in extent, on which any moving object, like a large band of stock and mounted Indians, could be seen in the daytime with the naked eye, and that they would not have started before sunset, and consequently could not have crossed the river earlier than three or four o'clock in the morning.

Twenty minutes after receiving the report, a score of well-mounted soldiers, accompanied by an expert guide and traveler, an old Mexican who had been a captive among the Indians in his boyhood and knew all their ins and outs, were in hot pursuit. I went with them.

We rode directly south until we struck the trail, which we followed to the crossing. On the bank of the river a bow and several arrows were picked up which the guide said were Navajo. The bows of the Navajo are six to eight inches longer than those of the Apaches and not so powerfully reinforced by sinews fastened along the curviture of the back and the shafts. Their arrows are correspondingly thicker and longer.

We crossed the river without delay and took up the trail. It was cut broad and deep in the aluvial soil. Many bands of stolen stock had passed over it before; it was the "Old Navajo Trail."

We pushed forward at a swinging trot; expecting to overtake the Indians, with their plunder before nightfall. It was not believed that either sheep or cattle could be driven with much speed or made to travel far without rest after traveling forty miles and crossing a broad river during the preceding night. The guide, who was better posted than any of us, shrugged his shoulders and said, "Quien Sabe"; and that was all the opinion that could be got out of him.

We soon learned that we had greatly underestimated the ability of a wild Indian to make a wearied and jaded brute travel. The old guide knew, doubtless, all about it, but chose to say nothing except, "Quien Sabe," which phrase is the universal refuge of Mexicans when they are ignorant, or don't choose to talk.

Two days previously, one of the terrific thunder-storms, common in that section, had swept the land and purified the atmosphere. The morning was bright; the air sweet with the delicate odors of wild forest and meadow, and all the landscape lovely as poet's dream.

In silent admiration of the scene we drank our fill from the bud of Nature's beauty. One might think that men whose business it was to kill, would not be moved to poetic sentiment by the beauty of his surroundings, nor give a second look at a magnificent landscape, or grand mountain scenery, but, one would be mistaken, for, though the soldier might be a very devil to fight when his blood is hot, he is a most ardent lover of Nature and a natural poet at heart; a tender sentiment will move him as a gentle zephyr, the flowers; a heroic deed, as the tempest the arms of the forest giant.

The trail ran along the northern foot of a spur of the Cordilleras, pine covered and rugged; on the right was wooded and grass-covered plain. For hours we rode briskly through this charming scene, but its beauty didn't distract us from the main question, which was to overtake and recapture the stolen stock and kill as many of the Indians who stole it as possible.

Every moment we looked to catch a glimpse of them, but not till long after noonday did we see any sign of them.

Here and there, scattered along the trail, was a dead sheep with an arrow sticking in him. The sheep had commenced to give out and drop by the wayside, and the Indians had killed them. Why they killed the poor, exhausted sheep rather than let them live and recuperate, is one of the unsolvable mysteries in the workings of the savage mind.

We rode till nearly sundown, never halting, but saw nothing of the fleeing Indians and the herds, when we came to a spring that bubbled up through rocks at the foot of the mountain and formed quite a rivulet. It was evident that the Indians had halted here long enough to water the stock.

We camped by this spring long enough to give the horses a chance to feed and take a rest while we partook of coffee, bread and bacon. About midnight we took up the trail again, which was easy to follow, as in the daytime. The night was more lovely than day, but a sultriness brooded in the air that portended storm; about daylight it burst, heralded by whirlwind, lightning and thunder. These thunder-storms are of short duration, but while they last the water pours in a deluge and obliterates all footprints. When the storm cleared, to the inexperienced eye there was no vestige of the trail, which, since leaving the spring, had deflected to the north, leaving the mountains and crossing a hard, gravelly plain of a semi-desert character, on the surface of which the feet of cattle left but slight marks. And here the value of an expert trailer was shown. The old guide took the lead and rode right along with his eyes bent on the ground, never once stopping nor seeming at fault; never speaking, except when asked where the trail was, and then his laconic reply was, "Aqui, señors," but not lifting his eyes, which seemed to bore into the ground and see tracks invisible to others.

These sudden storms do not cover a wide space, and in an hour we had passed beyond its track, and the trail opened out broad and distinct. Many dead sheep we passed by the wayside, showing that they were giving out rapidly. The sun had passed meridian; the soldiers were very fatigued, and their exasperation and determination to inflict dire punishment on the thieves grew stronger with each mile travelled. Before us lay a series of rolling hills; beyond loomed the lofty mountains, cleft by gorge and cañon, and traversed by intricate paths that only the initiated could follow. To permit the Indians to reach the mountains with their plunder would be to lose them altogether. They could hide the stock, and from such vantage ground as the mountain fastnesses furnished, could withstand the attacks of a much larger body of assailants than we numbered.

We urged our jaded horses to brisker pace, the old trailer, on his little, hardy mustang that never flagged nor seemed to tire, still holding the lead. Every face was hard set with a fierce resolution to pay out the devilish thieves for the long and tedious chase; every eye was keenly bent in the direction of the trail for a glimpse of the fugitives.

About three o'clock the trail became hot and we felt sure that we were close upon their heels; we pushed on with greater speed and energy and within half an hour, from the top of the last ridge that lay between the plain and the foot of the mountain, we saw the herd, with the Indians urging them on by every device of cruel, devlish ingenuity at their command, and they were masters in the art; with shrill whoop and demoniac yell; with whip, and scourge, and proding spear; but the poor beasts were too much exhausted to permit their pace being more than slightly accelerated. They were three or four miles away but their whoops and yells were distinctly audible. They were nearing the main range of the Cordilleras and were making most desperate efforts to reach it before being overtaken. Of course they knew they were being pursued, and their scouts had, doubtless, observed every move that we made and reported to the chief, though this was the first we had seen of them.

Their purpose, evidently, was to find refuge in the gorges and cañons and they were straining every nerve to accomplish it, but their progress was slow; the stock was too worn out with the enforced journey without rest, and without food except the few mouthfuls snatched from the wayside. With a shout of eagerness, not unmixed with anger and bitter hatred, we dashed forward to a swift gallop, the horses responding to the demand made on them with an alacrity that, under the circumstances, was remarkable, for they had carried us since the morning of the day before, with but little rest or food, nearly one hundred and fifty miles. They seemed to partake of the spirit of their riders and were eager for the fray. When the Indians saw that they would be surely overhauled, they threw about two-thirds of their force, forty in number, between us and the herd with a view to stopping the onslaught and holding us in check long enough to enable the other third to flee with their booty into the recesses of the mountains. They were already at the foot of the mountains and were dividing the stock into small bands of a few hundred each and rushing them up the cañons and gorges. They must in this manner, have gotten away with one-third of it when we charged into them. We were greeted with a shower of arrows and a few rifle shots but no resistance they could offer had power to check us. There was a hand-to-hand fight, short, sharp, and decisive. One of the soldiers, whose name I wish I could remember that I might do him honor, after emptying rifle and revolver, killed a great brawny Indian with the butt of his rifle, and he was just in time too, for the Indian had just set an arrow and was in the act of bending his bow when his skull was crushed by the soldier. In less than it takes to tell the story, nine good Indians lay stretched on the ground. The others seeing the fate of their companions and not desiring to be converted into good Indians in that manner, with a yell of terror, fled to the mountains, and some of them carried lead with them that they never carried before. They left their dead and about two-thirds of the stock in our possession. No attempt was made to pursue them further because men and horses were too nearly exhausted and also because we had as much stock as we could well take care of. It was the last thieving raid of the Navajos. Before winter set in that hardy mountaineer and brave warrior, Kit Carson, who piloted the "Pathfinder" across the plains, had every dirty Navajo, buck, squaw and pappoose, corraled and on the way to the reservation at Fort Sumner on the Pecos River.

Between seven and eight thousand sheep, about a hundred head of cattle and fifty horses and mules with a few burros were recovered. The stock was gathered together and a guard placed over it. As the neighborhood afforded water and passably good feed, it was decided to give the stock a chance to rest and recuperate before starting on the return journey. On the second morning the line of march, with the worn out stock, was taken up for Fort Craig, which was nearer than Fort McRea.

By the manner in which the "crack shots" manipulate their guns at the traps, nothing is more noticable than that they possess guns which fit them perfectly. There can be but few articles selected in which a perfect fit counts so much as a gun for quick shooting. It must be of the proper weight, balance, drop and evenness of pattern in shooting, in order to fill the requirements. It would be hard to find any two men who could shoot the same gun with equal effectiveness. It therefore becomes of the first importance to the beginner to secure a gun which fits him, or in other words, one that will follow the direction of the eye on being thrown to the shoulder. An expert has all the advantage on his side over a novice, he having passed through the school of experience and adopted his gun to his wants.

Mr. Fred Kimball, of Peoria, Ill., the original manufacturer of the celebrated "Peoria Black Birds," was in town last week and gave this office a pleasant call. Mr. Kimball was looking over the ground with a view of establishing a branch manufactury for inanimate targets in this city. There are, no doubt, strong and cogent reasons for taking such a step. The cost of shipping across the country renders impossible the sale of targets here at anything like the prices at which they are retailed for in the East. The preceptable increase of the use of the gun at the trap depends very much on the increased use of inanimate targets. To furnish them as cheaply as possible would go far to solving the enlargement of the sport of trap shooting.

It was a pleasant afternoon's sport which was witnessed at the Oakland Shooting Park on Thursday of last week, when several gentlemen from the Country Club met for practice at the traps. Mr. R. H. Sprague did some really excellent work for an amatuer shot, killing neatly forty out of his first fifty birds fired at. Mr. J. M. Adams fell but one bird below him, while a number of other good scores were made.

Physical Culture.

"Always Strong and Happy" is the title of a new work by that veteran teacher in this all important branch—Prof. J. R Judd, of New York.

This gentleman is the acknowledged master of physical treatment and his methods commend themselves to every rational person. Pure air, proper exercise and reasonable diet are the saviors of mankind from the thousand and one curses arising from sedentary habits of life. His methods are set forth in a 12 mo. volume of 240 pages illustrating and explaining his various methods of treatment with apparatus provided therefor. Prof. J. R. Judd, 1364 Broadway, N. Y.

Interstate Coursing Meeting.

The Interstate Coursing Meeting formerly held at Merced was transferred this spring to Madeira. The meeting opened on Tuesday morning, March 22d and closed Wednesday afternoon.

Though not as successful as many former meetings, yet it may be termed a successful meeting.

Mr. John Grace, our most popular judge, unfortunately could not attend. Mr. Fahey, of Fresno, was elected the night before the running to fill his position, but for some unknown reason he failed to put in an appearance. Mr. Frank Cooney of San Jose, was elected by the nominators of the dogs running—an unfortunate selection. The meeting was held on a a perfectly level plain, eight miles from town.

The drive out to the grounds was very pleasant and much enjoyed by all. Mr. Brophy acted as slipper and gave excellent fatisfaction. The Madera people turned out to the number of at least 500, including a large sprinkling of the fair sex. The Madera people were out for sport and if they did not enjoy it, it was their own fault, as the entire attendance followed the dogs from start to finish of each course, seriously interfering with the sport, but luckily only accidents of minor importance occurred.

On account of the small attendance the club was obliged to cut down the prizes to meet expenses. The prizes awarded were $240 to first, $140 to second, $70 to third and $20 each to six winners of two courses only.

The first dogs put in the slips were Dashaway and Zulu. Dashaway led to the hare, a long run up, and took first turn, Zulu assisting. The bare took refuge in his hole after a short run. Dashaway won.

Mary C.-Joe McAuliffe.-Mary C. led to the hare and cut out most of the work, winning handily. Another short run.

Lady Gay-Sam Nash.-Sam Nash led the run up and took several turns; then Lady Gay took possession and worked her hare nicely to a finish. Sam Nash won. It was a close race, but Lady Gay was certainly entitled to the honor.

Queen Bess-El Rey.-Queen Bess led a long way to the hare and throughout the course, El Rey apparently being badly out of form, though looking in the pink of condition.

Peter Jackson-Nellie Bly.—Again we must differ from the judge. Peter Jackson led the run up and to our notion did nearly all the work. Nellie Bly won.

Kathleen-Dan C.—This was one of the prettiest races of the meeting. Dan C. led to the hare and did some excellent work, Kathleen pushing him hard from start to finish. The race was very long, but Dan C. finally caught and killed his hare and won fairly.

Banshee Boy-John C.—John C. led to the hare and made an excellent effort, Banshee Boy made a good "go by" and did much the greater part of the work, winning with many points to spare.

Little Banshee-Daisy.—Little Banshee led the run up Daisy took the hare away from her and worked it away from her opponent.

Tom Fitz-Short Stop.—Short Stop led to the hare and worked it for several points, but Tom Fitz got in later and had it all his own way.

Wait-A-While-Nattie—Nattie won after a long run, out of view of the spectators.

Mountain Hare Dazzle—Dazzle had a walk over.

Firenzi-Johnny Rex—A great deal of interest centered in this race, but it proved unfortunate from start to finish. They were slipped in a bad spot, the dogs leaped a ditch immediately after starting. Firenzi struck Johnny Rex in mid air, Johnny fell against the bank and started off on three legs, Firenzi in the meantime, had made the run up and made the first turn. Johnny then sighted and came in for a turn and wrench, Firenzi falling badly. She soon came in again and worked the hare well, winning.

Twilight-Whip—Twilight led the run up and did very nearly, if not quite all the work. The hare favoring Whip the only point he made. Whip won, but why, is a question that the judge is still trying to answer, but cannot.

Cork Rebel Headlight—Headlight led the run up and did all of the first of the work, Cork Rebel coming in at the last. Cork Rebel won, and we will not question the decision, as it was too distant for our range of vision. Headlight was taken sick soon after and died in a short time.

John Mitchell Jr.-Catherine Hayes—Catherine led to the hare and won easily a very long course before they could be caught. They sighted another and coursed it to a finish, both running into a wire fence and getting badly cut up.

White Cloud-Merced Chief—White Cloud led to the hare. Merced Chief then worked for several turns and a go by. White cloud then got in and had it all his own way, winning.

Blackstone-Skyrocket—Skyrocket led to the hare and did all the work for full eight turns. Then Blackstone came in and worked the hare for four turns and a kill. Skyrocket won.

FIRST TIES.

Dashaway-Mary C.-Dashaway made a go-by on the run up and won a three mile course out of sight of the spectators.

Sam Nash-Queen Bess-Sam Nash led to the hare Queen, then made a go-by and did the balance of the work.

Nellie Bly-Dan C.-Dan C. did not let the bitch in from start to finish.

Banshee Boy-Daisy-Banshee Boy led the run up and took several turns. Daisy then took possession but killed too quick for her own good.

Tom Fitz-Nattie-Nattie had it all his own way.

Dazzle-Firenzi-Dazzle started unsighted. Firenzi ran to the hare alone and worked the hare for a couple of turns and then took a slight tumble. Dazzle ran did and by the balance of the work. An undecided heat.

Whip-Cork Rebel—Whip had it all his own way. Cork Rebel not in it.

Dazzle Firenzi.—An instant after the dogs were slipped the hare turned behind a small mound and both dogs lost sight of their quarry. Before they could be caught up Dazzle sighted the hare in the distance and ran it through a long course alone. Another undecided heat.

Catherine Hayes White Cloud.—Catherine Hayes though very badly cut up about the shoulders and back showed her grit and stamina by leading to the hare and throughout the race, winning easily.

Dazzle-Firenzi.—When slipped the third time Firenzi had it all her own way, Dazzle being undoubtedly tired from his previous lone run.

Skyrocket a bye.

WEDNESDAY.

The owners of the competing dogs held a meeting on arrival at the grounds, and declined to run another dog under Mr. Cooney's judgment. Mr. Jas. Cullerton was elected to take Mr. Cooney's place. He certainly made one error in judgment, but we are inclined to think that he did the best he knew how.

SECOND TIES.

Dashaway-Dan C.-Dan C. led to the hare, but Dashaway made a clean go-by and took a turn. Dan C. came in again immediately after and did the most of the work, winning with points to spare.

Queen Bess-Banshee Boy.-The latter led to the hare, but Queen Bess passed him and worked the hare for a couple of turns and a wrench. Killed and won.

Nattie-Firenzi.-Firenzi led to the hare and took two turns, working her hare well. The hare favored Nattie, and he took possession for a couple of points and a kill. The race should have been Firenzi's, but it was given to Nattie.

Whip-Skyrocket.-The latter led the run-up and held his lead for several turns before Whip got in at all. Whip did some good work toward the last, but Skyrocket took the last turn, killed and won.

THIRD TIES.

Dan C.-Banshee Boy.-The slipper made a grave error in this course by slipping the dogs to a very poor hare at not over twenty yards. Dan C. led and turned the hare within another twenty yards, killed immediately and won.

Nattie, Skyrocket and Dan C. each ran a bye.

FOURTH TIES.

Skyrocket-Nattie—Both dogs started unsighted, Skyrocket won, a short race.

FINAL.

Dan C. Skyrocket—Skyrocket began to favor a foot that he cut badly in the morning. Skyrocket led to the hare and worked his hare for at least ten points, Dan C. only getting in for a couple of turns at the finish. Skyrocket won the heat and first money

The California Kennel Club.

This organization is getting into good shape for the carrying out of its coming show. Mr. Thomas Higgs, than whom a more capable man could not have been selected for the important position, has been elected as superintendent of the show. Under his wise management there will, no doubt, be arranged methods for the conduct of the show that will insure smooth workings in its every department. If we may be permitted to suggest a few important factors of detail, we will do so with the hope that, if followed, much annoyance and miscalculation may be avoided.

It is all important that the secretary of the show have in the building an active assistant to aid him in the work of recording the awards as fast as made, and furnishing, up to the moment, to the press, the work of the judges.

Such entertainments are under great obligations to the press, and it is of especial importance to the welfare of the show that the evening papers be furnished promptly every item of the progress of the show up to the latest moment possible. The press of this city have been very kind to the kennel interests, and the club cannot afford to fail to render them full and prompt assistance in their efforts to get the news up to the hour of going to press.

A floor committee which shall have charge of the reception and entertainment of the public by way of rendering themselves useful in giving all information of an interesting and instructive nature on the various exhibits, would be the means of increasing materially the attendance of the public at the show.

The ring steward should also have an assistant. A committee to have charge and see to it that the various classes of dogs are promptly placed in the ring is invaluable.

Some form of announcement by means of black-board or otherwise, so that the awards may be publicly and promptly posted so that all might see them, would add to the interest of the occasion.

The outlook for a grand show is very flattering, and we trust it may be successful in the highest degree.

Mr. Robert K. Gardner, of this city, has just received from the Eau Claire Kennels, Wisconsin, Ad. J. Klofanda, proprietor, a splendid English setter bitch, whelped October 6, 1891, by Champion Monk of Furness E. 20,298, out of Minnie Noble 22,709. This bitch represents some of the best blood in America, as her sire stands at the head of the champion class and her dam is unexcelled in blood lines. Mr. Gardiner has also a first class dog in Direct, whose pedigree is given below:

DIRECT

Major P. ..... Litter brother to Bob Gates.	Count Rapier.	Ch. Direct 95
		Magnolia
	Belle of Hatchie. ..... (3568)	Scout 1777
		Lady S.
Lucy.	Moore's Dave.	Tate T.
		Lady May, Dam of Hope's Mark
	Kate	Jo. Baugh
		Lucy Dean, Litter sis. to Daisy F.

Of Jo Baugh Mr. H. E. Jones, proprietor of Nashville Kennel says "he is the best dog I ever owned." Mr. Gardiner has placed the above named dogs in the hands of Mr. D. M. Walters, of Galt, with the view of entering them in the field trials of next year.

The following is the pedigree of a beautiful Chesapeake Bay dog just received by Mr. Thomas Higgs, of this city, from the Osceola Kennels, Osceola Mills, Wisconsin, G. Hansen, proprietor.

TROUT. ..... Whelped Sept. 20, 1890	Drake. ..... A. K. S. B. 4674	Rake 141
		Rose 142
	Dundee. ..... A. K. S. B. 5441	Joe
		S. P. Duck Club's Pattie

Drake won first prize at St. Paul in 1888, and first at Chicago in 1890. He is a grand dog, full sedge in color and has a fine coat, arriving in splendid condition. Mr. Higgs has now the finest specimens of these valuable dogs west of the Rockies.

Visits.

Echo Cocker Kennels' (Stockton, Cal.) Woodstock Ada, blk Cocker Spaniel bitch, by Ch Obo II, ex-broodstock Dinah, to same owners. Solid blk stud dog Bronta 17,064. Ch Brant, ex-Mollier. Mollier by imp. Obo Jr. 1,481, ex-Devon Beauty. February 21, 1892.

Mr. L. L. Campbell of Berkeley, visited our office on the fore part of the week bringing with him a fine brace of Irish setter puppies out of same owner's Josie by Dan II. They are full of promise and we doubt not will make their mark as fielders as their dam is one of the finest field workers we have noticed in the West, while their sire will be remembered as the dog that made a splendid record in the field trials a year ago.

That thorough blackguard and Munchausen guttersnipe who fills some columns of an Eastern paper with filth over the appropriate title of "Can Can" comes back weakly in the current issue in reply to the notice we gave him last week. Better matter crowds out any further notice of this mangy scavenger at this time.

Mr. George T. Allender, the genial and gentlemanly trainer, of Watsonville, was in the city for a day last week and was kept busy with his many patrons here. The field trials of 1893 bid fair to go beyond all previous ones in the number and quality of dogs entered, of which Mr. Allender has his share.

The Blood Horse Association's Programme.

The Programme Committee of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, Col. H. I. Thornton, chairman, Thursday night last submitted the programme prepared for the meeting beginning April 9th and ending May 7th, at Bay District course. There were present Messrs. Burns, Thornton, Finigan, Quinlan, Williams and Milroy, and few changes were made in the conditions of the races as set forth by the committee.

The rules were changed so as to give the Presiding Judge full power to decide the winner of every race, and wherever the rules read "judges" it was changed to Presiding Judge. President Burns instanced a number of cases where decisions were unnecessarily delayed and where the Presiding Judge had been voted down by his associates, who were ignorant of the law, and told how admirably the Presiding Judges in the East settled matters of racing law. Treasurer Finigan spoke of the difficulty in getting competent associate judges to act, and the members were a unit when the change giving full power to the Presiding Judge was put to a vote.

The question of securing a competent starter came up, and letters were read from two gentleman applying for the post. Thomas H. Williams read a telegram from Ed. Corrigan relative to securing J. B. Ferguson, the famous flag-wielder. Mr. C. was asked to recommend a good man in case Fergusou could not be engaged, and named Mr. Gilman, who has done all the starting at Hawthorne for Mr. Corrigan. The members all declared for the best starter obtainable, but decided to telegraph Ferguson, and, failing to get him, to take Gilman. The terms offered were $50 per day and railroad expenses to and from the starter's home. Mr. Williams said Gilman was a good man, and as Ferguson is likely to start at the Memphis meeting, Gilman will be the official starter at the coming meeting here in all likelihood.

It was decided to get out small programme books containing the date and conditions of races and advertisements.

While a new scale of weights was recently adopted by the association, horses entered in stakes prior to the passage of the new scale, will be governed by the old conditions and carry the weights allotted them at that time. This makes quite a difference in two-year-old stake races.

The committee then went into executive session, the members of the press walked forth, and in a few minutes the meeting adjourned.

Entries Close at San Jose.

The reputation the great valley of Santa Clara as a horse-raising center has achieved is built upon the strongest foundation—good blood lines, great individuality and marvelous speed. The Annual Fair that is held at San Jose is one of the best and largest attended in this State, and it is only right that it should be so, for the Agricultural Association which embraces the counties of San Mateo and Santa Clara is composed of breeders who are liberal in their views, just in their decisions and self-sacrificing in their endeavors to please the public as well as all horsemen who come within the gates of their lovely park. Entries for the Colt Stakes, Free-for-all and Running Stakes will close next Friday, and all our horsemen should remember that this is the last notification that will appear, and they must act immediately. Do not let this opportunity pass. You know how well you have heretofore been treated in the Garden City; you cannot afford to stay away this fall.

Ho! For Petaluma!

That lively wide-awake association known as the Sonoma and Marin Agricultural Society No. 4 is going to eclipse all former efforts this year, if one is to judge by the programme published in another column. No horseman can afford to neglect reading it, and down at the bottom as well as on top are these words—entries close April 1, 1892. Every horseman knows what that means, but we doubt if the new ones in the field have any idea of how much they will miss if they fail to attend to this matter of making their entries before next Friday.

Sacramento's Spring Meeting.

Everyone gets a chance at the money at the Sacramento spring meeting—owners of trotters, pacers and runners. There will be six days of good, solid sport, commencing May 9th and ending May 14th, 1892, and the members of the Capital Turf and Driving Club, under whose auspices the meeting is held, are working like beavers to make everything a success. Do not forget, horsemen, to enter liberally, and have your nominations in before April 1st. The interesting programme and conditions will be found in another column of this paper.

Your Last Opportunity.

For some time the advertisement of the Nebraska Futurity Stakes has appeared in this journal. Its brevity and merit is such that any one can understand it. The entries will close next Friday, April 1st, and as many of our horsemen have declared their intention to start East soon, they should avail themselves of this opportunity to make entries and visit Syracuse, Nebraska. The track and appointments are most excellent, and a cordial welcome is extended to all who will visit this beautiful city. Do not forget the date.

The Pierce Sale.

During this "auction era," that seems to be dawning on the Pacific Coast at present, Messrs. Henry and Ira Pierce of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm are bound to catch the first warm rays and are going to offer a list of mares, colts and fillies at their sale on the thirteenth that will eclipse anything ever heretofore offered by them. In another issue of this journal we will give a review of what class of animals they will offer, and we believe our readers will be astonished

Saratoga Racing Association.

By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that entries for the stakes published will close next Friday, April 1st. Horsemen who intend to go East with their strings of thoroughbreds cannot do better than to make their entries now. It is needless to say a word about Saratoga, the equine Paradise of New York.

CATALOGUES for the Vineland Stock Farm sale are now ready and can be had upon application to Messrs. Killip & Co., 22 Montgomery street.

The foregoing programme may be changed in any respect (but not as to the fixed events, except as to the day on which they may be run), when it seems advisable to the Board of Directors.

In all the races of the meeting, except the four fixed events, entrance will be free.

When it is not in the conditions of the race how the purse shall be divided the second shall receive $75 and the third $50.

In heat races the second shall receive $100 when not otherwise provided in the terms of the race.

Entries to purse races (except handicaps) shall be made at 5 o'clock P. M. on the day preceding the race.

In handicap races (except owners' handicaps) entries shall be made at 5 o'clock P. M. on the third day preceding the race. Weights shall be announced at 5 P. M. on the second day preceding the race, and declarations shall be due at 5 P. M. on the day preceding the race, unless otherwise provided in the conditions of the race.

The fixed events will be run under the rules of the Association existing when entries were made in them.

Racing will begin each day promptly at 2 o'clock. The first bell will be rung fifteen minutes before the starting time; the second bell ten minutes later; the third bell will be the signal for the starter to take his position at the post. Trainers will be required to parade their horses in front of the stand with their colors up, and be at the post when the starting bell rings.

The Association reserves the right to postpone races on account of unfavorable weather or other sufficient cause.

In the event of postponement, handicaps stand; all other declarations are off.

A clerk will be in attendance at the scales on and after 12 o'clock noon of each racing day. Jockeys will make their weight and be in readiness to pass the scales without delay when races are called.

All declarations, either of starters in races, non-acceptance in handicaps or otherwise, must be in writing. Blanks will be furnished by the Secretary.

Humane Rules Prevail Now.

In reading the various works on conditioning and training the trotter of to-day, how strongly does the reader become impressed with the difference in the methods used in comparison with those of fifteen years ago. There seems to pervade the ideas of the breeders and trainers a stronger spirit of humanity, a warmer love for the brute creation and a more tender regard for the feelings of the horses in their care than was ever dreamed of before.

There are many causes that led up to this change for the better. They were all gradual, and did not come in a week, nor a month, nor a year; it took many years. In the first place, since the rich men engaged in the industry of breeding and improving the trotting-horse, the entering wedge was driven which burst asunder the ranks of certain men who bought horses from every one without regard to breeding, so long as they trotted fast and they could make money with them. The horses had a hard time in the hands of these manipulators, who, as a class, have been almost driven from the field; even a glance at our tracks during the trotting-horse races will convince any one of this fact.

Breeders pay more attention to the training of their horses now. The animals are carefully attended to; their physical ailments receive a veterinarian's skill; their teeth, a dentist's watchfulness; their limbs, a bootmaker's protecting inventions; their feed, a careful sifting; their journeys overland are made most comfortable in specially-fitted-up cars; their training is commenced as soon as they are weaned (to break a colt is unheard of—they are all trained now); their feet are attended to by shoers who have made a scientific study of this important part of a horse's anatomy; their sulkies are of the lightest, yet strongest materials, while the harness is so delicate that it might as well be made of silk. All these things contribute to the means by which a large majority of our horses are trotting so fast; but this does not include everything. Their training is a subject of such vast and growing proportions that a most intelligent class of men are now engaged in it, who are possessed of many other good qualities besides that of being able to "lift a horse under the wire and win a heat by an eyelash." The majority of the trainers of to-day are young men who have succeeded the old-time horsemen that have passed in front of the Great Judges' stand after their race of life was over. These young men are devoting the best portions of their lives to merit success in their chosen calling. Ever ready to grasp ideas, prompt to detect any ailments that may affect their horses, thoroughly understanding the ideas of balancing, shoeing and booting, they are indeed progressive, and their progressiveness augurs well for the future success of the trotting-horse industry.

There is another subject that has received much careful thought, which, if even hinted at some fifteen years ago, would have been decried from one side of the United States to the other, and that is the development of colt trotters and pacers. It is only a few years old, yet how mighty has been its strides? The old ideas about letting a colt run out until he was five years old are all exploded by the flash of intelligence that was first ignited by the master minds in California. If one had told Hiram Woodruff that there would be little weanlings trotting as fast as Frou-Frou and Fausta, that old driver would have cast pitying glances on the speaker and quietly told him that he must not think everyone crazy.

The work has but just begun, and it would take a courageous man to state where it will end. That the trotting horse as an individual has also improved in style, action, conformation and intelligence, no one can deny. That there are still greater possibilities in store for him, and that the beginning of a successful era in the fascinating study of breeding fast horses is also about to dawn is also true. The whole civilized world is assuming a higher and loftier pride in treating the human and equine race with greater kindness, and this is one of the greatest evidences of progression that can be spoken of.

The Awakening.

"To be successful in any enterprise, employ a messenger who is deaf, dumb and blind; such a messenger is money," truly said a philosopher many years ago. We are glad to see that the Blood Horse Association has at last awakened from a long dream to a realization that money makes both the mares and horses go. They have sensibly raised the amounts hung up in purse races to $500 and abolished entrance fees in such events. No narrow-guage association ever made as much money as a broad-guage institution. The history of the turf teaches us that. The racing organizations that have made famous names and money for their members in America, are the ones that unloosened their purse-strings, secured the magnets and drew the crowds in vast flocks to their grand stands and grounds.

But money will not do all this every time. Sometimes other methods have to be resorted to. Look at the splendid tactics of the Garfield Park Club last year. Colonel M. Lewis Clark, one of the fairest and most fearless racing judges in America, contributed largely toward making the Garfield Park meeting the financial success it was. The Chicago managers realized what a drawing-card he would be, and, further, they saw that the race-going public would have confidence in the fairness of the racing when such a man as Colonel Clark was at the helm. Without the confidence of the public no racing association can hope to succeed. People must be made to feel that they are having a "run for their money" all the time. When they come to understand that chicanery in any form will not be tolerated by those in charge of the racing and that the presiding judge is quick to see the perpetration of fraud and punish the wrong-doers, then will the people turn out to see the races. Seven persons out of ten, at the least calculation, love "the sport of kings" and are willing to pay for their pleasure under the circumstances we have outlined. We have been fighting hard for the paid presiding judge, and are very happy to see that a vast majority of the people share our views.

We also wish to impress upon the members of all jockey clubs the value of judicious advertising. A radical reform is necessary. Do not put so much matter in your advertisements that they will lose their attractiveness, and do not have a measly little single-column "ad" stuck away in some obscure corner of the paper where not one person's eyes will rest upon it among a thousand readers of the journal. Have your advertisement reach clear across the page, if possible, and weigh well the words you put therein. If racing associations out this way will give a little thought to what we are trying to teach them—and we aim at nothing but their success in every way—we can, with the liberal purses and stakes now offered, paid judges and a firm hold on the confidence of the public, hope to have as good racing, if not a little better, than can be had in any part of the world.

The finishes in the purse races are almost certain to be closer at the Blood Horse meeting this spring than ever before, and the fields will be larger under the overnight entry system. To a person who has seen the workings of both systems it does not take very long to decide which is best. The idea of entering a horse in an ordinary purse race two and three months ahead of the meeting strikes one who has traveled around a bit as a ludicrous if not a foolish idea. Many a horse that was in such a shape three months ago that his owner was anxious over his future has now been got into fair racing form, and may land a race or two. Why, it will increase the entrance in purse races almost thirty per cent., and the larger fields will draw about fifty per cent. more people than formerly attended.

The Year Book for 1891.

The new Year Book arrived last Saturday, and a bulky volume it is. It tells a pleasant tale, though, to lovers of trotters, showing as it does the long strides that are being made in the industry of breeding fast horses with the diagonal gait. We like the way it is gotten up, and believe it an improvement on the volume of 1891 in that it puts the trotters and pacers together under the names of their sires, the former in Roman type, the latter in italics. Of course there are scores of errors, but we are aware that it is difficult to find a work without these. Among the mistakes of Moses (the Registrar), we find Flaxtail put down as of unknown breeding, when conclusive proof has been furnished that he was by Bull Pup, son of Canadian Pilot; in fact, Wallace years ago registered this horse as being by Bull Pup. Singleton is put down in the "untraced pedigree" list. He is by Willie Schepper 17,359, dam Lightfoot, by Flaxtail 8132. Lightfoot is the dam of Pride, 2:32½ at two years, and sister to Fernleaf, dam of three in the list; second dam Fanny Fern, by Irwin's Tuckahoe; third dam by Leffler's Consul. Singleton sired two in the list. In the table of great broodmares is Revere, put down as being of unknown breeding, when the fact is that she is registered in the third volume of Bruce's American Stud Book, page 289, as by imported Glencoe, dam by imported Harkforward, etc., and owned by Steve B. Whipple, of California. Edward Everett 81 is given the following pedigree: "By Hambletonian 10, dam said to be by imp. Margrave." There can be no doubt about the horse's dam, for in Volume 1 of Bruce, page 416, appears Fanny, the dam of Edward Everett. She was bred by Mr. Mansfield, of Virginia, and owned by Hon. A. B. Conger, of New York, while the certificate of her breeding was given by Col. P. C. Bush. All these men were reputable citizens, and there is no doubt about the breeding. Edward Everett's name appears under that of his dam, and his sire is given as Rysdyk's Hambletonian. We hope that the present Registrar will not print thoroughbred pedigrees as his predecessor did in many cases—"running-bred, pedigree untraced," and "said to be" so and so, when there is no doubt about the breeding; in other words, we trust that Mr. Steiner will not recoil in horror at sight of thorough blood in a pedigree. The new Year Book shows in its 997 pages that 5,908 trotters had records of 2:30 or better on the 31st of December, 1891, 1,294 of which "went in" last year. As all the side-wheelers with records worse than 2:25 were excluded from the work, only 894 pacers appear in the table against 1,251 in the Year Book for the previous twelve months. The compiler of the work gives Electioneer credit for 100 trotters and one pacer—one more than the Palo Alto people have claimed. California's showing in the Great Broodmare Table is something to be proud of, as she furnished no less than 100 out of a total of 832 for the United States, comprising 44 States and several Territories. The Year Book is a mighty handy thing for a horseman to have around the premises, and with all its faults it is a most welcome visitor.

The Judges' Stand.

Last October this journal launched its first article against the wrongs that have been committed in the judges' stand. It affords us pleasure to announce that since then every journal in the United States has endorsed our criticisms on the actions of the judges generally found presiding at meetings. Nearly all of the leading associations of the Eastern, Middle and Western States have adopted the plan we proposed then—that is, of having paid judges and starters who are qualified to act as such. The following strong and truthful article on the subject of judges, taken from the American Trotter, is worthy of the careful perusal of every horseman in the land:

There is a steady demand for turf reforms, some calling for reform in the rules for making records, reform in drivers, by granting them licenses if they are good and competent, and revoking them when they become dishonest or dissolute, and many other reforms, for which it is urged there is crying need. The tendency of the reforms hinted at or boldly advocated leads one to suppose that all drivers are bold, bad men, and as such have no rights that command respect, but should be made the lawful targets of rules so framed that no man, the possessor of an atom of self-respect, would voluntarily submit to. The rules as they now stand are supposed to protect an innocent and guileless public, on the one hand, from those wicked and bloodthirsty villains (the owners and drivers) on the other. These rules, which constitute the written laws of the turf, are supposed to be administered by judges whose characters are above suspicion, and who are beyond the reach of pool-box or other outside influences. These same judges are expected to be perfectly familiar with the unwritten as well as the written laws of the turf, and to be familiar with customs and precedents bearing upon all cases that may come up in the administration of their duties. Were the occupants of the judges' stand always, or even in a majority of cases, qualified as I have indicated, then the arbitrary powers with which they are at present clothed by being justly and intelligently administered, would in few cases be oppressive, and there would be little cause for complaint or demand for a reconstruction of the rules. A long, wide and somewhat varied acquaintance with the average set of judges finds me without an exalted opinion of either their shrewdness, knowledge of turf law and precedent, or, I am sorry to state, of their powers to resist the tempter. As I recollect the majority of them, the judge is a pompous individual, great in avoirdupois and estimation of his own knowledge, puffed just a trifle by the authority temporarily thrust upon him, his immense expanse of abnormal cavity slightly warmed by a little Bourbon or "Old Pepper" or cooled with a little Burgundy, as the case may be, and not entirely averse to making the most of his position to aid a dollar to come in "on the side."

With this knowledge of his average qualifications and character I submit that the most needed reform is an amended set of rules that will deprive him of the arbitrary power now granted to him. Protection against the stand is the demand of the hour. No man or set of men outside of Russia have the power to blast a man's character, ruin his business and rob him of his money without warning or a chance for him to defend himself, except on the race track. Here circumstantial evidence or faint suspicion is accepted as positive proof, and conviction follows without a pretense of a hearing, sentence is imposed, and the hapless and helpless victim, no matter if guilty or innocent, is left possibly bankrupted by the outrage, with only a loophole of escape at the farther end of a season, with no chance for redress from wrongs which to him as an individual are as grievous as those which committed against a community would lead to a revolution. Right to an impartial trial belongs to every human being accused of misdemeanor, whether he rides in a sulky or a tally-ho. Legalized robbery should be stopped. The fact that a man owns a fast horse should not make him liable to be mulcted by a set of men clothed with authority, without responsibility. If only a possibility existed for an innocent party to suffer the extreme penalty without an opportunity to defend himself, at the time when the alleged offence had been committed, and proof could be easily and cheaply obtained, bearing upon the case, and a speedy trial could settle the matter at once, then our code of turf laws would be deemed extremely crude and defective, weighed by the standard of common law. That many cases arise, during every season, where innocent men are made to suffer, and numerous other cases are not only questionable but would be reversed were the expelled parties given, as in the rule in all courts, the benefits of a well-based doubt. Taxation without representation is deemed an oppression warranting a war, but punishment without trial is simply outrageous.

Having been within eavesdropping distance of a set of judges, or one of our great tracks, I was able to hear every word that passed in a consultation that ended in the expulsion of a famous horse, a driver that stands high in the esteem of the community in which he lives, and the owner, a man new to the turf but bearing the ear-marks of a gentleman. The secretary of the track evidently had some money on the horse that was expelled and was bound that he should win; so he kept filling the judges with complaints of a job till they put up a new driver who won the race, not in faster time or by more skillful driving, but in about the same manner and time as I had seen the game horse win at least four other hard-fought races before. In five minutes horse, owner and driver were expelled.

Those judges have never been able to produce a particle of evidence to sustain their action. Suspicion first and obstinacy afterward punished two men for a crime they have never been proven guilty of and robbed the turf of one of its most consistent performers. I could cite many another case that has come under my observation, but this shows sufficiently well the need of a code of trotting rules, somewhat in keeping with the spirit of our other institutions, and that will protect the public, the owners and drivers alike, not only from dishonesty and incompetence in the sulky, but from dishonesty, prejudice and incompetency in the stand. The powers of judges should be limited to fines for improper scoring, to changing drivers, to ruling off a horse, driver or owner during the meeting, to place a horse in such a position as they deem him entitled to, and to prefer charges and suspend any person pending trial. Provisions for a speedy trial should be made, and a long step would be taken toward those regulations which must exist before any man can be guaranteed justice upon the turf.

When a person looks into the trotting horse sky through unprejudiced spectacles, he or she cannot but say, with all candor: "California is undoubtedly the largest and brightest star in sight, and, opportunities considered, when early speed and development are under discussion, other sections of the country, are as candles to electric lights—they are not within hailing distance." We hold almost every trotting and pacing record, and although not many California horses have been sent around the big circuits of the East to try their mettle against the pick of "those parts," that our horses have more than held their own cannot be gainsaid. For a watch-breaker Sunol will do; as a race horse Palo Alto, 2:08¾, fit and well, has never had a superior, and when it comes to all-around business, if our Eastern brethren are not satisfied, we will "sick" a few bulldogs like Direct on them. He showed that he could down all the Pointers pitted against him, although his fighting weight was much less than that of his long-legged adversary from the Mule State. Speaking of youngsters, the Eastern breeders are doubtless Frou—Frou trying to beat us in trotting yearlings. They may try to Faust-a two-year-old on us against a California-bred yearling, but before the schemer gets through with it, we believe his countenance will indeed be A-RI-on(e). We can give them a year, and then not "Ath-a-don thent" odds when it comes to a race. California is the one State where Bell Birds are to be found, and the Freedom of the air of the Golden State from snow, hail and blizzards at all times of the year accounts in a measure for our success.

"We are living in a fast age," said an old gentlemen to a friend the other day. "Yes," rejoined No. 2, "most too fast to suit me. People live, forty years in twenty nowadays." In the horse business the speed is getting more apparent every day. Under the present system of racing—rich stakes for yearlings and two-year-olds—we can expect to see the grab for the almighty dollar result in lowering the average age of the race horse from eighteen years to about eight. Racing yearlings and two-year-olds, vealy young things, will bring forth such a lot of broken-backed, weak-kneed, curby-hocked gang of horses in a short time that we hope to see the racing of yearlings abolished and the two-year-old events of the future few and far between.

P. C. T. H. B. A. Programme.

A meeting of the committee appointed to arrange a programme for the Summer Race Meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association was held last Monday. There were present: J. H. White, Wilber Field Smith, Frank H. Burke, Gilbert Tompkins and President Jos. Cairn Simpson. The committee decided to submit for approval at the next meeting of the Board of Directors the following list of purses:

Trotting, Free-For-All and 2:17, 2:22, 2:25, 2:28, 2:30, 2:40 classes and a purse for horses that have never started in a race for money. Pacing, Free-For-All and 2:25 and 2:30 classes.

The Association will hold a four-days' race meeting commencing Saturday, August 6th, and continuing the next week on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The following arrangement of the programme was suggested:

First Day, Saturday, August 6th—2:17 Class, trotting, 2:30 Class, trotting and 2:25 Class, pacing.

Second Day, Tuesday, August 9th—2:25 Class, trotting, 2:40 Class, trotting. Trotting Purse for Horses that have never trotted in a race for money.

Third Day, Thursday, August 11th—2:22 Class, trotting, 2:40 Class, trotting, and 3:00 Class, pacing.

Fourth Day, Saturday, August 13th—Free-For-All Trotting, Free-For-All Pacing and 2:28 Class, trotting.

The committee will also recommend that the Association offer a trotting purse for two-milers, three in five, and purses for a Double Team Race and a Gentleman's Roadster Race.

The money to be given in the various purses will be settled at a meeting of the Board of Directors called for Monday, April 6th, to receive the report of the Programme Committee.

Representatives from the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association, Oakland, Napa, Petaluma and San Jose Associations were present at a meeting called to consider the question of dates for the circuit, the following dates being selected:

P. C. T. H. B. A. Summer Meeting, August 6th to 13th; Oakland, August 15th to 20th; Napa, August 22d to 27th; Petaluma, August 29th to September 3rd; State Fair, September 5th to September 15; Stockton, September 19th to 24 t San Jose, September 25th to October 1st.

As will be seen by the above, the Central Circuit commences with the summer meeting of the Breeders Association, and it will probably close with the fall meeting of that Association, which will be held in October.

By omitting the 2:20, which is one of the time-honored classes, the Programme Committee made an innovation that will leave out a number of good horses or else force them into the 2:17 class. As the number of races that will be submitted to the Board of Directors (unless every one should fill), will be insufficient for the full four days' programme, it is suggested that the Board of Directors will do well to add the 2:20 class to the list presented, and, in case it does not fill, the members of the Association owning horses eligible to that class and barred out of the 2:22 class, will have no occasion to grumble. The above purses will be given under the old rule of five to fill and three to start. This is a more liberal offer than the Associations have been the practice of making heretofore, and it is to be hoped that all the classes will fill well.

The representatives from other Associations present will advise their respective Associations to adopt the class arrangement of the Breeders Association, as above.

Names Claimed.

I claim the name Prince Silver for bay colt, with four white feet, foaled March 19 1892, by Dexter Prince, dam by Silver Threads; second dam by Young Hunter; third dam by Owen Dale. This colt is full brother to Cleopatra.

Also claim the name Madisonia for bay filly, foaled March 14, 1892, by James Madison, 2:17¾, dam by General Dana.

The new trotting course at Montebello, about ten minutes from Trieste, Italy, will not be completed before the end of March. The track is magnificently situated at the foot of a hill, upon which the grand stand has been erected and where a magnificent view may be obtained. Far off to the left the blue Medditerranean may be discovered, Barcola and the Castle of Marmare, as well as the walls of Castle Duino, belonging to Prince Hohenlohe, that seem to rise out of the dancing waves. To the right may be seen the Barcian Hills, surrounding the magnificent Royal Stock Farm of Lipizza.

Delays are dangerous. Take Simmons Liver Regulator in time for dyspepsia, biliousness, and all diseases of the liver.

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

Nourmahal.—Looking over the advertisement of the Vineland closing out sales of trotters, I saw the name of Grandissimo, a brother to Grandee, and that brought to my recollection, and vividly too, their grandam Nourmahal. Her history was somewhat remarkable and worthy of a place in track records. She was foaled in 1863, by Blackbird 401, her dam the dam of A. W. Richmond, consequently an "own sister." She was a mare of very high form and of a peculiar color. When first "shed" her coat was a dark, glossy chestnut with roan and white hairs interspersed, later she would be roan and spotted, scarcely any mane, rat-tailed, and her hoofs varigated with dark and yellow stripes. The "white of her eye" showed more than in any other horse I ever saw, and with light markings around it gave her a fierce expression. Nervous, exceedingly nervous, her walk even denoting an unusual temperament, and otherwise gave indications of so much "nerve force" that the only horse in my experience which could be compared to her in that respect, in my opinion, was her sire. She had been "spoiled in breaking." It would be better to say ruined by abuse, ill-treatment so brutal that the inflictor should have been subjected to a dose or two of his own medicine. She showed plenty of speed, but was distanced in the first heat of every race she started in up to the time I bought her. I was so well pleased with A. W. Richmond that I wrote to a friend in Iowa (my residence at the time, 1871, was near Chicago) to learn her price. He answered that Prussia had the cheek to ask $600, and that was three times as much as she was worth. I telegraphed back to buy her and bring her to my place. "What in the world caused you to pay such an out-of-the-way price?" he asked, as I handed him the money for the purchase and expenses. "She ain't worth a tinker's —— for a trotter, and she is the meanest-looking Blackbird I ever saw," he continued. "In color only, John," was my reply; "she is a model in form, and when you see Alf step, you will think more of her." The first lessons were under saddle. Billy "poked" about with her, stopping in all sorts of places and gratifying his propensity to talk horse with everyone he met who had leisure to listen to histories of his exploits on Nicholas and other long ago racehorses. Billy and she got along nicely while the saddle work lasted, but with the sulky came remembrances of suffering and stirred up resentments that were hard to overcome. I had to mount the sulky seat with a run and a bound, for if restrained when the false girth was buckled she would throw herself and raise a merry time generally. I trotted her 4th of July, 1872, on Dexter Park, Chicago, winning an $800 purse, in 2:42½, 2:39½, 2:42½—Nelly Ward winning the second heat in 2:48½—two others in the race. That and the following season the chief aim was to overcome her touchiness, restraining and coaxing. She had plenty of speed, and if it could be rendered available that was all that was necessary to insure a great race mare. She trotted quarters in 34 seconds, and if she imagined she was being "jogged" would trot miles in from 2:30 to 2:32 every day in the week. I made up my mind that she would trouble the very best at five miles, and that impression became so firmly established that I challenged, through the papers, any horse for $2,000 a side, the race to be trotted on Dexter Park. The expectation was that Huntress would accept, and Mr. Goldsmith told me afterwards that he intended to do so, but something came in the way. Lady Mac took it up for $1,000 a side The race was to be trotted November 1, 1873, and, on Wednesday, 22d of October, copying from the journal of that year." Beautiful in the forenoon climbing up about 4 p. m. Drove Nourmahal. Jogged her three miles, moved two about a 3:30 gait, then drove her three miles in 7:40, Billy timing, first mile, 2:33; second, 2:32; third, 2:34. Did not show any distress." The next day I was in Chicago and Tom Foley enquired about the mare, and what I thought of her chances in the race, as he had put a few hundred dollars on her, but the friends of Lady Mac were so anxious to go on that he became shaky. I told him what she had done, but as three miles was the furthest I had ever driven her, even at that rate of speed, to come out Saturday without letting anyone know and I would drive her the distance.

When he came he urged me not to drive her five miles, as the race was set for the next Saturday. I answered that the work was just what would suit her, that I did not intend to in any portion of it to go near her top rate, and that about a forty gait would be the guage. "A forty gait! you are crazy. Why, that will be 13:20; a fifty gait is plenty fast enough," said my friend. "All right," I answered, "you have got a split-second watch, take a pencil and piece of paper and keep the record, marking every quarter." Again I copy from the journal: "Saturday, October 25, 1872. Fine day, although a high wind in the afternoon. Drove Craigie in the forenoon. In the afternoon Tom Foley came. He timed Nourmahal five miles in 13:18¾. The miles—2:42½, 2:40, 2:38, 2:35¾, 2:42¾. Quarters—41, 39, 41, 41; —40½, 39¾, 39, 40; —40½, 38½, 39, 40—40, 39¾, 37½, 38¾—40, 40¼, 40, 41¾. She was very little tired, perhaps a trifle leg-weary."

Tom did not say anything at the finish of the first mile, the second time he called "too fast," at the third "altogether too fast," and when the fourth came he fairly yelled, "too fast, too — fast, pull her back." I knew she had been going easily, but when the imperative command came I thought she had been going faster than I was aware, 2:30 or 2:32, perhaps, and coaxed her to go as slow as she would for the last mile. He was as much excited as though his stake was then at issue, and rated me roundly for lack of judgment. Look at her, she does not say that it has been any too fast, was the reply to his scolding, and if the weather keeps good and Dexter Park is in fair order—it was at least two seconds to the mile faster than the private track at Atwood Place—I can easily take that 18¾ off if it is necessary. But the weather was not propitious. Rain came in a day or two after the trial. She could not be driven with any safety on the streets, and Billy led her by the side of a gelding she was attached to, and there never came a day when fast work could be given without great risk. Long walks and jogs by the side of her companion was the best that could be done. Then came frosty nights, and Dexter Park had the top covering frosted to solidity the night before the race came off. The match was made, good day and track, or the first good day and track thereafter.

Wednesday, November 5th, the day was passable, and the Monday before both parties agreed to bring the match to an end. There is a short entry in the journal at that date, Wednesday, October 5th: "Cloudy in the fornoon, the P. M. partially clear. Drove Alf (A. W. Richmond) to Dexter Park in the morning, Billy rode Marion and led Kitty (Nourmahal), trotted her a five-mile race against Lady Mac, which she won in 13:39, track heavy."

She was touchy, very touchy, when put in the shafts that afternoon. The track, too, was decidedly touchy. Coated with a thin stratum of gravel it could not freeze dry like those covered with ordinary soil, and the hoofs sank to half their depth.

I realized that it was a touch-and-go business with the highly-tempered mare, and if her equanimity became at all disturbed I might bid adieu to the stakes. Touchy as she was, it was a self-evident proposition that she should be carefully dealt with, and yet if Lady Mac took the lead restraint would be out ot the question. Fortunately the driver of Lady Mac chose to trail, and the first mile was very slow. A little better from that on, and as every mile was restoring her good humor, as far as she ever had any good humor, and to give me still more confidence when we swung into the homestretch, on the fourth mile, Lady Mac came alongside, but had to drop back before reaching the turn.

"All over but the shouting" were my reflections when the quarter-pole was passed a length in the lead, but soon after the Lady came with a rush, and for the first time in the race Nourmahal broke from being too anxions to get away from her competitor. She "caught" admirably, however, not losing enough to enable Lady to take the track, and my mare keeping up her rate, the other broke. 'Twas apparent at a glance that it was a "tired break," and my whole efforts were directed to keeping her steady. Successful in that, she won by ever so many lengths, but when within fifty yards of home I was startled at a big man jumping and yelling, tossing a new silk hat into the air and kicking it ere it came down. It was a comical sight, and a little more so when I saw who the kicker was.

A number of Scotchmen who lived in Chicago were frequent visitors at Atwood Place. One of them, a big, stalwart countryman of mine, and with a heart as big, in proportion, as his body, made the trip nearly every Sunday walking out, and walking back after dinner. It was a good twenty miles when out an in were traversed, and with shorter pedestrian excursions during the week days he did not lack for exercise. At that he weighed over two hundred pounds, and he asserted that without his allotted quantum of work he would be a hundred pounds heavier and not fit for his business which confined him to his office six hours a day. The Sunday after the trial mentioned he was not as lively as usual, and confessed that he had been up to a very late hour the night before and drank altogether too many "hot and strong" concotions of mountain dew.

Furthermore he said that he had become so aggravated at provoking remarks that he had laid $20 on Nourmahal winning, but that morning inquiries among horse-sharps of his acquaintance showed that Lady Mac was invincible at the distance. To give the balance of the conversation as nearly as I can in his own phrase: "Noo, me mon, I dinna care a bawbee about losing the wheen dollars I had tae dae that or stan conveected of being a fause braggart, and there war mair than twenty dollars o' satisfaction in makin them tak to the whins, and I sae crack and cruse wi my bonnet on one side, but I am sair grieved at the thochts o' you losing sae much, and, what is still mair, that a countryman frae me own shire, bonny Dumfries, shude get the wrang end of the bonspiel." "Never mind fashing," I answered, "I will win, and win handily, and will just bet you one hundred to twenty on that." "Na, na, mon, I canna dae that," he said. "I wadna tak the siller under enny conseederation war you to lose, but would give mair than that to see you linkin doon the stretch further in the front than a curler could send a clean-polished stane an the ice a'broomed clean." "You have got to take it and got to pay if you lose, which you surely will," I answered, "or you need never come this road again. You are on velvet now, and the twenty dollars, and something more I will add, will pay for a dinner at Ibach's for our ain set and some jorums of punch brewed by Geordie —— for a nightcap." That was the cause of the outburst of jubilation when the mare won, and the dinner, etc., may have been also the cause of the brief entry in the journal. I sold Nourmahal to Ira Holmes, who sent her to California. She was sick during the journey, and was far from being in condition when Lady Mac beat her five miles in "even" thirteen minutes the following April on the Oakland track. That Lady Mac was her inferior is, to me, beyond question; that any horse could beat her five miles is also outside the range of my belief. Her action was perfect; boots of any kind, an unnecessary encumbrance, and had she lighter shoes, which are now in vogue, or, better yet, tips in place of "pound shoes," in front, I have reasons to think that she aould have gone five miles close, very close, to a thirty gait.

There are many of her near kin in California, and two of the colt cracks are in the third generation from her brother—Grandee and Grandissimo grandsons, Columbine a niece, and Vic H. a near-enough cousin to be called of the clan.

That advertisement brought up a store of recollections, but in order to place "contemporaneous history" as a portion of the testimony, I append an account of the race, copied from the Turf, Field and Farm of November 14, 1873:

"Chicago, Ill., November 20, 1873.

Editor Turf, Field and Farm:—In my letter of the 3d inst., I stated that the great five-mile trot between J. C. Simpson's roan mare Nourmahal and Mr. Dickey's bay mare Lady Mac would not take place until spring, such being the intention of the owners at the time of my writing. Monday brought such a change in the weather from the previous ten days that the owners met and agreed to have it on the Wednesday following, 5th inst. Mr. Simpson contends, and with some degree of pretension—that he has the best five mile horse in America, and as his challenge, published in the Western Sporting Gazette, will be again repeated in the early part of the spring, we may soon confidently look to find the truth in the staying qualities of the Blackbird stock. The challenge, which was against any horse in America, five mile dash, for $1,000, drew considerable attention, and was first replied to by John Demass, of Detroit, with a counter challenge to make it a ten-mile, but this, at the time, could not be accepted, as the mare was only doing work for a five-mile dash. Had Mr. Goldsmith's mare, Huntress, engagements in the East permitted it, she would have taken up the gauntlet thrown down by Mr. Simpson. As it was, the task devolved upon Mr. Dickey to test the superiority of his mare, Lady Mac, against the rat tailed, homely looking daughter of Blackbird. The track was in anything but good condition to make fast time, owing to mild weather succeeding the heavy and severe frosts we had been having for some days past, while the day itself was raw and cold. Owing to this fact, and it not being generally known that the mares were going to trot, the attendance was exceedingly meagre, not more than fifty—including judges, reporters, stable boys and sporting men—persons being present, while the horses themselves seemed to have suffered from want of work on account of the late cold spell. Under these circumstances all hope of beating former time (13:11) was dispelled, although Mr. Simpson had fondly hoped that he could do with the rat-tail Nourmahal. Simpson'a mare won the pole and led off at a fair gait, making her first mile in 2:49, Lady Mac having done some bad breaking. In the second mile Lady Mac came in leading in 2:47, but was soon overhauled by the rat-tail, who obtained and kept the lead throughout, making the third, fourth and fifth miles in 2:43½, 2:41½ and 2:38; total, 13:39. Lady Mac was in a perfect lather at the finish, and completely pumped out, while Nourmahal showed very little, if any, signs of distress, and could probably have gone five miles more, with the usual allowance of breathing time and beaten her own time.

Such was the last trot of this season at Dexter Park.

Yours truly, West."

Watervliet, Mich., March 15, 1892

Joseph C. Simpson, Esq., Oakland, Cal.

Dear Sir:—I have read with interest your recent article upon "Pacer's Standard," as it exactly agrees with my own opinion.

My reason for writing this letter is for information, as I as I have referred to the question to our leading papers with no satisfaction, I impose this letter on yourself for reference.

I own the "bay filly" from Transylvania by imp. Aral Massoul, foaled in 1873, by Mambrino Patchen 58. She is a beautiful mare, and in foal to a son of Onward.

Can you tell me where "Limestone" won his best race and what were his best winnings?

Considering this a favor. Very respectfully,

R. H. Sherwood.

Answer—Limestone's greatest year was in 1873, in which he ran thirty-seven races winning nineteen. Many of them were won over hurdles. He was a good horse on the flat as well, and carried heavy weights and won "over the flat," and in a Handicap Hurdle Race, carrying 156 pounds, he beat Gallnéy, Moonstone and Impecunious, their weights, in order named, being 125, 145 and 135 pounds. One of his best races was at Boston, as follows:

Limestone, four years, 108, Lizzie Lucas, four years, 112, Eclair, four years, 105, Quits, four years, 93, and B. F. Carnor, four years, 110 pounds. Two miles, 3:37. The large number of races won by Limestone during his career on the turf and over hurdles would require more time than I can find at present to collate the winnings. As by far the best racehorse, however, in my acquaintance, possessing a near Arab cross, I will endeavor to present them hereafter.

Omission in Trotting Programme.—I heartily concur in the classification made by the committee in the programme for the summer meeting of the P. C. T. H. B. A., but it seems that a 2:20 class could be incorporated with beneficial results. As it is there is a wide gap between the 2:17 and 2:22 classes, and that many horses which would go into a 2:20 which will be chary of venturing against there with records of 2:19 and between that and 2:16½. It may have been an omission, and in that case when the meeting of directors is held, Monday, April 4th, the addition can be made. There are seventeen Pacific Coast horses, according to the list published in this paper January last, with records ranging from 2:19½ to 2:20½, all of which would have to go into the 2:17 class if entries were made. Fortunately there is plenty of room for the 2:20, so that there is little risk in predicting that it will find a place. With that amendment I think the programme should please all, saving the few who are never suited.

Jos. Cairn Simpson.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Answers for this department MUST be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Postively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

C. J. B., Reno, Nev.—Give breeding and record of San Diego. Answer—By Alcona Clay 2756, dam Fontana, by Almont 33. No record.

A. W. S., Oakland.—Can any of your readers give me the correct breeding and best time of Madame Newhall, who trotted at Virginia City in 1874 against Long Island in a match race?

W. A. J., Tulare, Cal.—What horse has the world's record of one-quarter of a mile and repeat, running race, and what was the time made? Answer—Sleepy Dick, 0:21½, 0:22¼, made at Kiowa, Kansas, November 24, 1888.

J. F., Merced.—Will you in your next issue give me the breeding of Bismarck. How many has he in the 2:30 list, and is he standard? Answer—By Index 2856, dam Lady Weeks, said to be by Belmont Williamson's. One in the list—Chancellor, 2:30. He is standard.

W. F. L., Tulare, Cal.—I wish to get the breeding of Hubbard. It is to settle a dispute. Answer—By Planet (son of Revenue), dam Minnie Mansfield, by imported Glencoe; second dam Argentille, by Bertrand, etc. Hubbard was a full brother to Katy Pease, the celebrated race mare.

"Knight's Landing."—Can you give me any information in your valuable paper regarding a mare called San Jose Damsel, that was owned down about San Jose or San Mateo about 1877. Answer—She was sired by Easton's David Hill son of Vermont Black Hawk, dam by Red Bill, son of Medoc, thoroughbred, and was quite a winner. Our impression is that San Jose Damsel was trotting long prior to 1877.

O. M. F., San Luis Obispo.—Please publish in your next the record and pedigree of Capt. Fisher and give description of his races since he came to California. Answer—He had a record of 2:45, and sired Simcoe, pacer, 2:26. He beat Morgan Battler, Oddfellow and State of Maine at Stockton in October 23, 1867. This is the only race out here of which we have a record. His mark was made at Newark, O., in 1868. Captain Fisher was by Young Sir Thomas, dam Mother Fisher, by Clay Bank, a Virginia stallion whose pedigree was untraced. Young Sir Thomas was by Woodycarle Sir Thomas, son of Young Diomed, he by imp. Diomed.

J. W. M., Roseburg, Oregon.—1. Please give the pedigree of Kentucky Prince. 2. Pedigree of Kentucky Whip. Answer—1. By Clark Chief 89, dam Kentucky Queen, by Morgan Eagle son of Hale's Green Mountain Morgan); second dam by Blythe's Whip (son of Cannon's Whip); third dam by Martin's Brimmer son of Bess's Brimmer; fourth dam by Quicksilver (son of Dey of Algiers Arabian). 2. "By Vermont 104, dam untraced," is the way one Kentucky Whip's pedigree reads. This horse, sire of Longfellow Whip, 2:20¼, was once known as Bay Horse, and was located in Indiana. Another Kentucky Whip was by imported Whip, dam Speckleback, said to be by Randolph's Cedar.

Subscriber, Plainsburg, Cal.—You will find enclosed one of a number of postal cards circulated throughout the country in regard to Richards' Electric, in which he is called "standard bred," and I enclose his ad., clipped from the Merced Express, and the only difference is that he is a standard-bred in one and a standard trotting stallion by the other. I am under the impression that a horse to be standard bred must of necessity have a dam, but we have no knowledge of Electric's dam. Answer—The horse is not "standard-bred," but the performance of Ella M. makes the dam eligible to registration as standard under Rule 5, and when the dam of Electric is registered he (Electric) is made standard himself and eligible to registration because his sire is already standard.

East Portland, Or.—1. How was Langford bred? 2. Did he sire any in the list? 3. How many mares did he sire with colts in the list? 4. What were the names of the colts and what were their records? 5. How was Signal bred, and what did any of his produce make records of? 6. Who owned Indicator by signal, and did he sire anything in the list? 7. Give breeding of Indicator. Was he standard? Answer—1. By Belmont (Williamson's), dam Liz. Givens, by imported Langford. 2. No. 3. Three. 4. Flora Langford, dam of Lillian Wilkes, 2:17¾, and Joe Arthurton, 2:20½, the dam of Belle Spencer, 2:26¼, and also the dam of Carrie T., 2:20¾, pacing. 5. By Rob Roy, dam untraced. Carrie T., 2:20¾; Prussian Maid, 2:19 and Dan Rice, 2:20¾, all pacers, were by Signal. 6. Do not know who owned him. He has sired nothing in the list. 7. We know nothing of his breeding, therefore cannot say whether he was standard or not.

Blandina, dam of six stallions that have sired 2:30 performers, and whose daughter, Barcena, brought Bayard Wilkes, 2:24½ (trial 2:15½), is not credited with a son or daughter with a record of 2:30.

WEDNESDAY'S GREAT AUCTION SALE.

A Rare Opportunity for Horsemen—Some of the Great Individuals to be Sold.

Some people acquire a knowledge of the structural form of horses by close study, others seem never to be able to comprehend the difference between a good horse and a poor one, while a few are "born horsemen," who take as naturally to the study of equine knowledge as a "duck does to water." To this latter class we can always look for the most successful horsemen, and by the animals they from time to time secure, we can judge as to what has been their ideal. Some men have a taste for the draft horses, others for hackneys, Cobs or Cleveland Bays. A few believe implicitly in the breeding and developing of pacers. A large number have a love for the thoroughbred that completely eliminates all other affections for the various classes enumerated, and their ideas are all wrapped up in the bangtails. The largest and most rapidly-growing class of enthusiasts are those who believe in breeding and developing the trotting horse. This class includes a number of gentlemen who are striving to attain either one of two great objects—to breed a family of horses that are invaluable on the road, indispensable in the harem and useful on the race course, or to breed a horse that will trot a mile closer to two minutes than Sunol, 2:08¼, did.

When a person who has watched some of the last-named class of breeders buying animals with long, fashionable pedigrees and without any claims for individuality, it becomes alarming. Everyone understands the value of a pedigree, but the value of the individual should also be considered. A certain man of wealth in this city commissioned a good judge of horses to go East and buy fifteen fillies and two stallions; he prepared the list from the catalogues sent him, which contained some of the choicest-bred stock in America. The young man received this advice as his last instruction as he stepped on the platform of the cars: "Remember, there is no limit put on those I have selected; look at them carefully, if they are not as good as their printed pedigrees has led me to believe, you select others that are not so well-bred, but they must be choice in individuality. You remember what I told you about spindle-shanked, herring-gutted, curby-hocked, calf-kneed, mushy-legged animals and those that have bad dispositions." The young man visited the various stock farms, and was compelled to acknowledge that many with the best of pedigrees were the poorest of individuals, and so he reported to his employer.

The breeding business will right itself after a few years in this respect when enough first-class horses appear. The second-class will be gelded and the mares not bred, but sold for whatever they will bring in the cities. This climax is approaching fast.

Some people have engaged in the business of breeding and raising a high type of horses that are grand individuals from horses and mares that were noted for their excellent qualities. The reputation these breeders have made is a good and clean one, and no one can deny but that they were working against great disadvantages while they were striving to gain the goal of their ambition. The fame of the Vineland Stock Farm, "Home of Whippleton," is world-wide, for sons and daughters of this great horse are giving satisfaction to their owners, not only in the Eastern States, but in China, Japan, Australia and the Hawaiian Islands. The strong individuality which this horse Whippleton imparted to his progeny stamps him as one of the greatest sires in this respect ever seen in California. For size, color, conformation, good limbs, splendid constitutions, gameness, perfect action and kindly dispositions the Whippletons stand alone by themselves. As an opportunity will be offered all horsemen in this State to look upon a number of his daughters bred from mares of acknowledged speed and excellent blood lines, we have no hesitancy in saying that they will coincide with us in the opinion that so far as appearances go they are not equalled on many stock farms in California. They are all young, and have been selected by that excellent judge of horseflesh, F. W. Loeber. As this gentleman must devote his time to the stallions he owns, he cannot attend to the broodmares too. If he had the wealth of some of our breeders we believe he would not exchange this little band of mares for the best that they have for he knows of the good qualities of each and every one on his place. He must sell and he wants it distinctly understood that there will be no reserve nor by-bid ding; every animal offered will be sold to the highest bidder. In making this declaration he evinces the true spirit, and when the people see that they will be treated fairly they are only too glad to act accordingly.

There are some Naubuc mares here that are also selected on account of their merits individually. The Woodnuts, Directors, Privateers and Admirals are up to the standard of excellence set by this breeder. While many of our large stock farms as well as a large number of our small breeding establishments are anxious to secure the best class of broodmares to grace their places, an opportunity like this one to do so may not occur again for years. Crossed with any of the sons of Electioneer, Wilkes or Nutwood these mares are sure to prove dams of speed. Every Whippleton mare that has been bred to these ultra-fashionable sires has proven that the produce is not only handsome, strong-limbed and stylish but exceedingly fast as well, and inside of three years these mares will become almost priceless. Many of them are standard.

To describe at length of each and every one that will be offered would indeed be a pleasure, but believing the catalogue will reach every reader of this journal and that the pedigrees will therefore be known to all we will confine ourselves to giving a sketch of the principal ones.

Kate Jackson, plain in name but not in appearance, has a head and neck like a thoroughbred with the body and color of a Whippleton. She is also a rare one, fast as a bullet and game as a pebble; as a matron, her filly will be a living witness of her ability in that respect.

Maggie Vann, is another ebony-hued Whippleton out of a Naubuc mare. The auctioneer will not need to describe her high quality as a brood mare; large, clean-limbed, strong and highly finished and as beautifully gaited as her sire. She is one of the finest mares ever driven. Game and perfectly sound.

Everyone knows what the Admirals as a family are, but the mare Queen Ad, in this sale, is the handsomest ever seen. This statement is not made with any fear of contradiction; she is as handsome as a picture and a perfect trotter. She will be an honor to the man who gets her.

Some people are prejudiced against gray as a color, but if they ever rode behind the four-year-old mare Pearline, that opinion would be quickly dismissed. A faster, gamer, purer-gaited or more courageous-going mare would be hard to find anywhere for the amount of work she has had. She should be given a record.

Rosenetta, brown mare out of Flaxy, is the smallest as well as the neatest mare in the lot, but a more blood-like little matron would be difficult to imagine; from the tips of her delicate ears to the heels she is "all there." What a fine mare she would make to cross on the Hambletonians. She is heavy with foal to Alcona 730, the greatest sire by Almont 33 in this State, for he has sons and a grandson in the 2:20 list, and is only fourteen years old. What a bright future there is for him?

Some one will need a typical gentleman's roadster, and to please them the rich golden chestnut Alvena, by Alcona, will be offered. High-headed and stylish, pure-gaited and fast, she is hard to excel for all these requisite qualities.

Evona is a plain-looking mare of the Geo. M. Patchen Jr. type, solid, and of good color, kind disposition and well trained.

Flora (sister to Burton, 2:30½) is a grand broodmare that some one will get cheap, and whoever does, can be certain of one thing, he will read of her produce in the thirty list as soon as they are given an opportunity. She is coal black in color and remarkably gentle. There is no doubt of her being with foal to Alconeer, the handsome son of Alcona and Madonna (dam of Alcona Jr., 2:24, and Del Rey, 2:29), by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22.

Munio is a typical Milton Medium mare, bright bay in color, splendidly proportioned, with a handsome head and neck, legs as hard and clean as a thoroughbred; as a matron she will ere long rank in the great table. The Milton Medium mares are becoming invaluable. She is heavy in foal to Grandissimo, 2:27¾.

Valletta is like an Electioneer in build and action; a racy-looking, level-headed bay mare that will repay anyone to put in training.

Everyone remembers the mare Bloomfield Maid. Her picture was shown in the State Fair edition of this journal. The nearest approach to her (with this exception—there is more substance) is the blue-gray mare Jessie E, by Whippleton. She is a grand-looking matron, and her bay Alconeer suckling at her side is as stylish as a peacock. It would pay the man who purchases this mare to give her some track work this fall; she trotted half-miles in 1:12 and pulled a cart a quarter in thirty-five seconds with two months' work. She shows her excellence in every line.

Queen is a black mare by Whippleton with a good pedigree. As an individual she is more than anyone would look for; in fact, for quality no mares on our largest stock farms can surpass her. She is a credit to the man who bred and cared for her. She is with foal to Grandissimo, 2:27¾ (brother to Grandee, 2:23½), by Le Grand.

Roxy is a chestnut mare, by Naubuc, that is proving of great value as a broodmare, and as she is in foal to San Diego, her purchaser will have something worth raising.

Everyone in Napa Valley for fifteen years remembers the great road mare You Guess; she was the queen of the road in any company. She was of the great Jack Hawkins family, and perhaps that accounted for her speed, endurance and courage. You Guess was never "at ease" unless she was leading everything on the road. Her courage and powers of endurance were remarkable. As her name figures in the pedigrees of several of the mares offered at this sale, and every one of them, if given an opportunity, would have entered the 2:30 list, it would be a good idea for Mr. Loeber to secure her for exhibition purposes at the sale. Although she is beyond a score of years of age, and has outlived her usefulness as a matron, she looks as much like a thoroughbred six-year-old as any mare of that age in the State.

The Woodnut mares in this State that are for sale are not very plenty, and such fine, even-turned ones as Woodline out of Maud by Whippleton, and Venus, out of Lucy, by John Nelson, are not met with in a day's travel. A careful study of their blood lines is enough to recommend them to any horseman. The filly, Venus, should be put in training immediately, for she is speedy, pure-gaited and untiring. One glance at her will awaken enthusiasm at the sale. She is a beauty, and there is no denying it.

Lady Ross is another grand-looking Whippleton mare, heavy in foal to Grandissimo, 2:27¾. She is symmetrically-built, not leggy, although she is 16:2 hands high. She is trained single and double, as well as are all the rest of the Whippletons, and as she gave great promise, was placed in the breeding ranks. Afterwards it was intended to have her trained. She is only six years old, and would attract attention anywhere.

The well-merited fame of Secretary, that great son of Director, 2:17, is not built upon mere speculation, if we are to judge by the brown filly Whisecta in this consignment. She is out of a grand mare, and as an individual, is a "phenom." Trotting is her forte, and the race track will be her playground. Some trainer will play with a bunch of horses when sitting behind her.

The brown filly Directress, by Director, 2:17, is also out of a grand-looker, and is a trotter. Directress is as speedy as the wind, a happy medium between the large, rangy Whippleton and the solid, compact Director breed of horses. Such a mare needs no words of praise; she will show for herself the day of the sale.

The two Privateer mares were bred by E. C. Smith, of Yolo, who has not sent the breeding of their dams in time to be catalogued. The two mares, however, are very useful individuals, and the Privateers are all speedy.

The best son of Almont 33 in California, as a sire, is Alcona 730. This fact is acknowledged by all horsemen. He has a number of very fine-looking representatives in this sale, and as Mr. Loeber will bring him from the stock farm in company with Alconeer and Grandissimo, the people can get an idea of what kind of horses they are. Alconeer and Grandissimo will be taken in hand immediately after the sale, and while the former will make a low record, it is a question whether the latter will not be close up to him when the circuit closes. Their pedigrees appears in our advertising columns, and therefore it is needless to publish them in full here.

Belle Greer (sister to Belle Thorne, 2:36½), by Whippleton, out of Belle by Bismarck, son of Dave Hill 857, is a mare that will prove a dam of fast ones, and as she is heavy in foal to Grandissimo, 2:27¾, the produce will pay for its training before it is two years old. Belle Greer is a trotter, and as she is only four years old, she should be given track work this fall.

Whipola (full sister to Oakville Maid, 2:35) is a handsome yearling, and as she is out of a mare that never did produce anything that was not endowed with speed, this filly will prove no exception to the rule.

One of the best-formed and raciest-looking fillies in the lot is Altissimo by Grandissimo, 2:27¾, out of Eva (sister to Cor C., 2:28¼) by Whippleton, etc. Her breeding is first-class, and she will prove worthy of it in every way.

The bay filly Grandana, by Grandissimo, 2:27¾, out of Kate Jackson, by Whippleton, is as perfect as if made to order. She is large and symmetrically built, nice-gaited, and with a way of going that is captivating.

The bay filly Grandora, by Grandissimo, 2:27¾, out of Flora (sister to Burton, 2:30½) will be heard of if she receives any handling at all. Whoever gets her will have a jewel that he will esteem highly.

Eva (full sister to Cora C., 2:28¼, and Like Like, 2:32, etc.), by Whippleton, will be sought for by some of our breeders who desire to get the best-looking broodmares that are related to fast ones and whose produced will always bring long prices. Eva is all that that the most critical horseman could desire.

Whipponette is a yearling by Whipple, out of Queen Ad, by Admiral, and is a very racy-looking filly, and one that will trot fast. This youngster did not grow as much as she ought to, as she was running out all winter on pasture.

Vineland Maid is a little undersized chestnut mare. She is a producer, being the dam of Lookout, 2:25, and when breeders are looking for the qualities that predominate among our best broodmares, they cannot afford to pass this one by. She is heavy in foal to Alconeer, full brother to Alcona Jr., 2:24 (sire of Silas Skinner, 2:17).

Daisy is another daughter of Whippleton that will sustain the name that her sire had for founding a family of good-lookers. She is fit for a buggy or a coupe and as she is not bred, she is just what a large number of horsemen are seeking—a mare that can be made a "money-earner" immediately. Some one will get a bargain in this mare.

Taking the collection as a whole, there has not been one as good before the auction block in years. Every animal has merit. There is not a crooked-legged, spavined, curbed, wind-broken, blind or affected animal in the lot, excepting Flora, who has been foundered, and if they have any faults or defects in conformation or disposition they will be pointed out the day of the sale. Whippleton and Naubuc never marked a colt with white spots, white legs or white faces, and breeders can rely upon getting colts of solid colors from the sires that these mares have been bred from.

Another important thing about the broodmares, colts and fillies offered, they have not been fed on alfalfa, and are not "rolling with fat." This breeder believes in keeping broodmares from getting too fleshy, especially when heavy with foal. They have not been taken up from the pasture-field over a week, and we venture to say that animals never entered a sale-ring in more perfect condition. Mr. Loeber will guarantee every animal as represented.

Added to the above, Mr. Silas Skinner will sell at this sale the great broodmare Madonna, which, besides being the dam of Del Rey, 2:29; Alcona Jr. 2:24 (sire of Silas Skinner, 2:17), and Alconeer, is pronounced one of the finest individuals ever brought to this State. She is only fourteen years old, and, bred as she is, producer as she is, and as sound as she is, some breeder should get her who wants nothing but the best standard mares that have proved themselves producers. There is a Noonday colt out of her to be sold, standard, and as fine a looker as there is in the State, and a yearling filly by Mountain Boy that is a trotter, and no mistake.

Lilly C., by Alcona Clay, out of Flora Belle, 2:25, by Alcona, is a standard-bred mare and as blood-like as a thoroughbred. She is related to Royalty. Her filly, Dafney, by Secretary (son of Director, 2:17), will need no meed of praise. She is absolutely perfect in every respect, and ought to be fast.

Then there is the fine bay, standard mare, four years old, called Moonlight, by Dawn, 2:18¾, out of Maggie Vann, by Whippleton, that will trot inside of 2:25 this fall. She belongs to Messrs. Vann & Starr, of Napa.

The beautiful colt Monticello, by Alcona Clay, out of Mollie, by Gladiator 8336, second dam by Ethan Allen 2903, represents the blood lines of Almont, George M. Patchen, Ethan Allen, Joe Downing, and such mares as Madonna, Buttermilk Sal and Mollie (a famous road mare). He is the property of Stewart Newcummer.

In conclusion we wish to state that a finer lot of carriage horses, roadsters or track horses (all young, handsome and well-bred) has not been offered in this State before. They must be sold, and whoever attends the sale will secure bargains. See daily papers in regard to excursion rates. The auctioneers will be Messrs. Killip & Co. Trains will stop at the track morning and evening.

"One of the Finest!"

Such stock as will be offered by Mr. Whitney in his sale next month is a credit to our State. A filly like the following is bound to make any man's "mouth water" who is a lover of fine breeding: Bay filly Auntie, four years old, by Dawn, 2:18¾, the purest-gaited son of the greatest living sire; first dam by Anteeo, 2:16¼; second dam Nettie Bennett (champion three-year-old of her time, and full sister to Nellie Patchen, 2:26); third dam Jennie Shepheard (the greatest broodmare of her time, being the dam of four mares, viz., Nellie Patchen, 2:26, Flora Shepheard, 2:30, Gazelle (champion two and three-year-old), and Nettie Bennett (champion three-year-old), by Williamson's Belmont. Auntie is heavy in foal to Sable Wilkes, and, with her blood lines, the produce can indeed be entitled to be called bred in the purple, and should be an equine star of the first magnitude.

THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

An Important Meeting Held at Sacramento—The Work in Detail.

Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

SACRAMENTO, March 21, 1892.

The regular March meeting of the Directors of the State Agricultural Society was held last Monday at the office of the Secretary, at Sacramento, for the purpose of revising the premium list, rules and other preliminary matters for the State Fair of 1892. The following named members were present: Frederick Cox (Pres.), John Boggs, C. M. Chase, W. P. Mathews, Christopher Green, G. W. Hancock, Richard Gird and L. U. Shippee.

The Committee on Premium List presented their report, containing many changes and improvements over the list of 1891.

In the Live Stock Department, horses entered in races were barred from competing for premiums except as a sire, or dam, or junior member of a family, and another new provision prohibiting horses that have heretofore been awarded the first premium in any class for four-years-old and over from competing hereafter. The potency requirement was amended by accepting affidavit that the stallion six years old and over, and jacks five years old and over, had produced colts within two years.

The Standard Trotter and Roadster Classes were not changed. The Draft Horse Classes were rearranged somewhat. Normans and Percherons were classed together, and an additional class given for Suffolk Punch. Clydesdales and English Shire were made one class. The general sweepstakes class was stricken out, inasmuch as in the opinion of the Board it is impracticable, owing to the great many breeds of horses, and the special uses for which each class are desired, they deemed it unfair to declare any one breed of horses superior to all others.

The Board hopes to be able next year to provide a sweepstakes premium in each class. The premiums in each class for mares have heretofore been scheduled for best four-year-old and over with colt, and best four-year-old and over without colt, restriction has been made prohibiting mare that has shown with colt to show again for premium without colt, but the exhibitor may elect which premium to exhibit the mare for, and she cannot be exhibited for both premiums.

The colt, however, can compete for best suckling in its class, as it is believed this is due the sire to permit the colt to compete with the mare and separately.

In the Cattle Department the same exhibition for premium stock in the older class was ordered; that is to say, any animal that has received first premium for best three-year-old and over will not be allowed to compete for the same premium again. This we think a wise provision, as it enables the younger stock to compete against those near their own age, and not be compelled to compete continually against stock that has prestige of former premiums.

The Dairy Prizes for butter test offered by American Short-Horn Breeders' Association, of $100 to first and $50 to second, were again accepted by the Board of Directors for this season.

In the Herd Classes the old herd was designated to consist of stock two years old and over, and the young herd to consist of stock under two years old. This is made plain, so that breeders may know in which herd a two-year-old must go. It is now definitely settled that the two-year-old animal must show with the old herd, and those under with the young herds.

It was also ordered that upon making entry of cattle the date of birth must be given with entry. An old and young herd premium was given for each class of cattle, of $60 to the old herd and $30 to the young herd.

The only additional change made in the Cattle Department was the striking out of Class 9 (Graded Cattle) and Class 11 (Milch Cows).

In the Swine Department, the special premiums offered by the American Berkshire Association, in addition to the regular premiums, were accepted by the Board. They provided 10 volumes of the American Berkshire Records for the best recorded sow and litter, and not less than five recorded pigs under six months of age, owned and exhibited by resident of the State in which the fair is held.

In the Sheep Department, affidavits will be required as to date of lambing and dates upon which sheep were sheared that were exhibited.

In the Poultry Department, premiums for nearly all the standard breeds bred on this coast were ordered to be given.

The Pavilion premium list was amended to a considerable extent. Some of the principal changes are here given:

Inasmuch as the Sugar Beet Industry is assuming considerable importance, and as improved methods are necessary in the planting and harvesting of this crop, the Board have offered a premium of $250 for a sugar beet harvester of California invention and manufacture that will prove a success; a field trial must be had under direction of this Board. For best improved beet seeder, $10. Best improved beet cultivator, $10

The conditions of the Incubator exhibit were changed completely. The Board believe that it is practically impossible to satisfactorily test the different kinds of incubators manufactured and award any premium for "the best incubator," as it is certain to cause well-founded complaints of unfairness. No prize will therefore be given for the best incubators. Awards only will be made for displays about which there can be no question as to injustice. They have offered for the best display of incubators in operation $25. For the incubator hatching the greatest number of chicks during the exhibition, $10. For the best display of brooders, $10. For the best display of poultry houses, $10. For the best display of poultry fixtures, $10

A special premium of $100 is offered for the best exhibit of electrical machinery in operation at the State Fair.

A special gold medal is offered for the best general display of brandies and wines. A premium of $20 is offered for the best barrel of wine vinegar exhibited by manufacturer; also a similar amount for cider vinegar.

Additional premiums were ordered for the following articles: Dried grapes, apple cider, clingstone pitters, free-stone pitters, apricot cutters and many other modern implements.

Mr. J. M. LaRue, the Stockton expert, who was appointed by the Board at the annual meeting last February to examine the books and accounts kept by the Secretary for the years 1890-91, made a report upon the receipts and disbursements and finances of the Society for the two years named, wherein he said:

"I find the books neat, clean, well-kept and correct with two exceptions, wherein the payment of $53 was made for which the Secretary neglected to take credit. The system is excellent, and shows correctly at any time the condition of every summarized account. I had free access to all the books and made full comparison with all the Secretary's vouchers for the two years. I found the two balance sheets on file in the office correct, and have so certified thereon. The manner in which the accounts are kept is a credit to the officer and the Society."

The Speed Programme Committee reported progress and offered the following trotting and pacing portion of the programme for the State Fair of 1892:

The colt stakes closing March 15th were satisfactorily filled (copy of entry sent herewith).

The following classes were recommended and adopted by the Board:

FOR TROTTERS.

Grand Stallion Stake for 2:15 class; of $100 each; payments divided as follows: $50 to accompany nomination, $50 payable August 1st, and the remaining $50 the day before the race. The society to add $500 for three starters; $800 for six starters, and $1,000 for seven or more starters. Stakes and added money to be divided 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent. Entries to close April 16th.

Free for all, Purse $1,500	2:25 Class, Purse $1,000
2:18 Class, Purse $1,000	2:27 Class, Purse $1,000
2:20 Class, Purse $1,000	2:30 Class, Purse $ 800
2:22 Class, Purse $1,000	2:40 Class, Purse $ 800

FOR PACERS.

Free for all, purse $800, and a 2:20 Class, purse $800, were also agreed upon. The running portion of the programme will be formulated later on.

The Board of Directors abolished season tickets, and fixed the rate of admission at 50 cents at the park, and 25 cents at the pavilion during the day, and 25 cents in the evening, with exhibitors tickets for single persons at $5.

The directors have concluded that season tickets are a failure, owing to the great abuse they are subjected to, and in making the change the rates of admission were so fixed as to be within the reach of all.

The races given by this association are of a high class, and in any other State would command an entrance fee of $1

The expenses of the institution are quite large, and the only way the directors have to meet them is from its resources.

Life memberships were increased from $50 to $100.

After consideration of a few other matters of minor importance, the Board adjourned.

San Luis Obispo Notes.

Friday morning was beautiful. The whole world seemed pure and fresh from the recent showers, the high heavens were clear and bright, the retreating clouds hanging low on the horizon. Tall pines on Santa Lucia's summit reared and gently tossed heavenward their cone-shaped crowns and appeared as if growing out of the silvery clouds that clung to the hillsides obscuring them from view.

It was work-out day at the race track, the first one of the season. We accepted an invitation to ride after Cherokee Prince, the swift and vice-versa-gaited son of Dexter Prince, and were soon landed inside the swinging gate where Aloretta, Miss Monroe and Hattie F. were taught to fly without wings.

R. E. Tole, who is in charge, is putting the track in condition and handling some trotters, too. The most important ones are E. W. Steele's Estella C., 2:30, by Director, and her two-year-old filly Blanche L., by Sidney, and a bay colt, two years old, by Monroe Chief. Blanche was intended for a trotter, but has changed her way of going since pacers are admitted to the Register. He also has W. H. Taylor's bay stallion Monroe, 2:38½, by Monroe Chief, and Chas. Lee's Bijou, 2:41¼, made in the sixth heat of a race last year when two years old. She is by Fred Arnold, a horse that will be missed by our breeders since his owner has removed him to Salinas.

Gen. P. W. Murphy has seventeen head of good ones in charge of Frank Trainer, who, by the way, has them looking bright and feeling in the best of spirits. There is not a sorry, despondent-looking one in the lot. The principal ones are the bay stallion Gaviota by Electioneer, Prince Charles by Dexter Prince, Hattie F., 2:19, by Le Grand and Dynamite, 2:32. Margarita, four fine two-year-olds and some older ones all by Gaviota, who if nothing happens to him will get a record himself better than 2:40, and put several colts in the 2:30 list this year. Gaviota seems to get trotters from all classes of mares. The dam of Dynamite is untraced while another candidate for 2:30 honors is a beautiful bay filly from Emma B., a thoroughbred.

It appears that Mr. Murphy is going into the trotting horse business in earnest. He has a fair start in the way of horse stock and a princely estate. There is no place on earth better adapted to horse-raising than our fair land of sunshine and flowers. It is to be regretted that our directors are so occupied with their private affairs that the track must necessarily suffer from partial neglect.

Sam Carson's string consists of his chestnut mare, four years old, by Del Sur; J. H. Orcutt's chestnut mare, dam of Aloretta, 2:26½; Mr. Andrew's black mare, by Quien Sabe; Henry Moreland's Birdie Arnold, by Fred Arnold; H. L. Masterson's Beulah Cossack (pacer), by Harold Cossack, and others. This string is in fine shape for the season's work and for green ones are making some giant strides for the 2:30 list.

It will be observed that most of the horses at present on the track are green ones and as a lot are very good, and will no doubt, reward their owners for the money spent in their development. Since the construction of the race track the horse stock of the country is being rapidly improved, and the result is exceedingly gratifying and satisfactory.

R. S. Brown (with a string of Monroe colts) and A. T. Jackson, are among those who occasionally work their horses on the track. The latter has the chestnut stallion, Cherokee Prince, who is considerably mixed in his mind or in his gait, the outcome of which will be a double record or a very fast pacing one. He has demonstrated his abiltty to pace better than 2:20, and will be worked for a pacing record after the stud season is over.

GEORGE M. FRINK.

San Luis Obispo, Cal.

Dexter Prince, 11,363.

Dexter Prince already has six trotters and one pacer with records of 2:27½ and better. The fastest record is 2:16. Thirteen years ago Dexter Prince was dropped at Stony Ford, and he was the first foal of Lady Dexter by Kentucky Prince. His sister, Feroline, was sold to Village Farm, where she was not trained being used in the stud, and Mr. Hamlin has out of her, by Mambrino King, a four-year-old stallion, Great Expectations, who is entered in stakes and promises to be fast; a full sister, Sweetbriar, reserved for a brood mare; a bay mare, Feminine, by Almont, Jr., also reserved for breeding purposes, and Jewel, a three-year-old sister of Feminine. The only brothers of Dexter Prince, Hewitt, and Prince George, are owned at Stony Ford, where they are making their mark in the stud. Aida, one of the sisters of Lady Dexter, produced at Woodburn, before she died, to the cover of Lord Russell, Aide de Clare, who has a four-year-old record of 2:26½, which she can beat six seconds. Astoria, another sister, is now the property of Mr. David Bonner. She has a record of 2:29½, but was driven a trial in 2:23½. Her oldest foal is by Revenue, 2:22½, and he is pretty certain to take a fast record when trained and started. Astoria, unfortunately, lost her foal by Lord Russell, and her yearling is a brown filly by Kentucky Prince. Alma, another sister of Lady Dexter, has a record of 2:28¾, and she is still in the flesh at Stony Ford. Three of her produce are reasonably certain to enter the 2:30 list this season, and all promise to trot below 2:20. Those who have critical knowledge are sure that Alma will speedily take rank as the greatest producing daughter of Clara. The greatest performing son of Clara was Dexter, who in 1867 was crowned king on reducing the record to 2:17½. Had he been kept in training his mark would probably have been 2:12. Budd Doble thinks he had as much speed as any horse he ever drove. Dictator is the greatest producing son of Clara, and he is in the enjoyment of green old age at Ashland. He was never trained, and he did not have much of an opportunity in the stud until he was seventeen years old. He is the sire of thirty-four in 2:30, the fastest trotters being Jay-Eye-See, 2:10; Phallas, 2:13¼, and Director, 2:17. These three came down the Grand Circuit line one season, and the sensation they produced was marked. Although their sire was then twenty years old he sold for $25,000. Director is the sire of twelve in 2:30, the fastest trotter being Margaret S., 2:12½, and the fastest pacer, Direct, 2:06, who trotted before being put to pacing to a four-year-old record of 2:18½. Nancy Hanks, 2:09; Lockhart, 2:14¾; Brown, 2:18¾; Kellar Thomas, 2:19½; Williams, 2:20½, and Victoria Wilkes, 2:22, are out of daughters of Dictator. Hyacinth, by Volunteer, out of Clara, is the dam of Reina Victoria, who is the dam of four in the list—Muscovite, 2:19½; Princeton, 2:19¾; Euclid, 2:28½, and Russia, 2:29½. Clara was a mare of sharp individuality, foaled in 1848, by Seely's American Star, out of the dam of Shark, 2:27¾ to saddle, and had she been trained instead of hammered over the roads of Orange county by night and by day, would have taken a record herself. She was full of resolution, and she founded a family of great distinction, a family which grows in importance with the returns of each season.—Turf, Field and Farm.

To Breeders and Stallion-Owners.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The sales of the year are about over. The public has put its seal of value from which there is no appeal, upon the stock of the country. The prices brought by the get of the young and untried sires in the main were disappointing to owners and patrons, and already there is a murmuring in certain quarters against present stallion fees, which, unless something is done, will grow into a ground-swell, sweeping all before it. It is therefore high time to gather up the raveled threads of experience and weave them into a rope of stable and improving methods lest depreciation runs riot and values melt as snow before the south wind. It is not disputed that the service fees charged for Nutwood, the late Electioneer and other sires who have proved their worth in such a marked degree that all who run may read are any too high. It is the young sires, those who have yet to win their spurs in the stud and whose worth is as yet a sealed book, that the public hesitates in valuing. It is axiomatic that the science of breeding is nothing if not progressive.

George Wilkes, Electioneer, Nutwood, Belmont, Almont, Woodford Mambrino, Mambrino Patchen, etc., have sons living who will outrank them in the stud, and they in turn will have sons that will dwarf their achievements, great as they will be. The question arises, why then should not the get of well-bred sons of these sires bring the money on the auction block that the immediate descendants do? Why is it that a colt with splendid form and trotting action from well-bred sons of Nutwood, Electioneer, etc., is knocked from the auction block at prices in three figures, while a colt from the old sires with form and action not so good call for a volley of bids that do not stop until up in the thousands? The answer is made that the public is responsible, that it sets the price and that there is neither reason or method in its fancy, that "fashion," the arbitrary jade, rules the hour with a despotic sway. Not so. The public is never far from right. It makes the "fashion" that which is not, that which is to be. The great sires are a fact; the young sires are yet to be. There are many concomitant circumstances and conditions that go to make up a great sire, useless one without the other. First is merit, the basis. Second, opportunity. Third, the owner. Fourth, owners of the produce.

Of merit little need be said, as no one would long keep a stallion if he thought merit was lacking, and it is safe to assume that merit is more or less inherent in all well-bred sires. Opportunity and ownership can be covered under one head. Ownership makes opportunity and the opportunity is great or small in the same degree as the methods of the owner are progressive and enterprising.

George Wilkes was "Bill Simmons' baked pony" until business and live methods in his ownership and that of his colts forced public opinion his way. Nutwood, the despised, was literally kicked out of California, and it needed a McFerran and the Stouts to pull him from oblivion's waves and assist him to mount the path to where fame's proud temple shines afar. Electioneer, whose blood was thought to be contaminated beyond all redemption with that of "the accursed Clay," was dribbling his life and opportunities away at Stony Ford, but the hour and the man came in Governor Stanford to lift him out of the slough of impotent inaction to the proper exercise of his wonderful powers. Mambrino King was stigmatized "The Dude," but a Hamlin has proved to the world that game race horse qualities and beauty of form can go hand in hand, and that when first money is handed out the get of Mambrino King are "very near it, yes, very near it."

The wise man who would be abreast of the times is guided by the experience of others, and it will be interesting and profitable to stallion-owners to inquire into the methods that have made the great sires great. Under the glass of scrutiny it develops that one general method is common to all and has been the prime factor in pushing the great stallions to the front and educating the public to their merits. First, they believed with undying faith in their stallions. Second, they developed their get and left no steps untaken towards seeing that the produce in the hands of outsiders were given every chance possible, that they were developed, and their merits placed before the public as they should be.

The excuse that this or that horse is a great sire, but has had no opportunity, will no longer wash. The public will eagerly pay its dollars in tribute to that which is, but not one cent to that which might have been. It is financial suicide to keep stock within the quiet shadow of home; business sagacity to push them into the blazing glare of publicity. The owner who sits down or loses step in the march for popular favor had best furl his flag, for the procession will soon have past him. The same commercial laws govern stock as other merchandise. Produce a commodity of merit and attempt to put it on the market. The wholesalers and jobbers meet you with the statement, "We will have none of it. Go out among the people and create a demand for your article. Then, and not till then will we handle it." So it is with stock. Create a demand for the get of a stallion, and it is easy sailing thereafter. In the past the creation of a demand for the get of a stallion has been attended with much expense, painstaking care and methods not always available to men of moderate means, and it has been left to the progressive racing associations to provide sure and cheap methods for exploiting stallions and their produce, increasing the earning capacity of the trotter and placing values on each as merited.

Among those associations that have blazed the way to a realization of increased values on trotting stock in general, the Terre Haute Fair Association of Terre Haute, Ind., has taken a leading position. It has thrown off the trammels of fogyism, enlarged its scope of usefulness, and stands to-day unequaled in its field. Not content with the marvelous success of its purses, $11,000 for foals of 1890 and $11,500 for foals of 1891, to be trotted during its meeting of 1894, it is now out with a third purse of $10,000, to complete the trinity of enterprise, whose liberal terms and favorable conditions can not but meet with favor and strong support at the hands of the breeders and horsemen of the country. It is in a manner a stallion produce purse, being for foals of 1892 (the get of stallions entered in the purse), to trot as two-year-olds during its great meeting of 1894. Nominations of stallions must be made on or prior to April 4th, 1892, all of whose get, foals of 1892, becomes eligible. Any stallion, even if dead, that has foals of 1892, is eligible. All colts, fillies and geldings eligible to the purse shall, on or before December 1, 1892, be entered and described, and there may be as many starters as there are different owners. The purse divides $5,500 to first colt; $1,500 to second; $1,000 to third; $500 to fourth and $1,500 to nominator of the stallion that is sire of the winner. The entrance is most liberal, costing but $50 to nominate the stallion April 4th, which is the sum total of charges for stallions. $5 nominates each foal December 1, 1892, $15 is second payment of foals payable December 1, 1893, $30 pays third payment on foals May 1, 1894, and $100 for starters, payable August 1, 1894, brings the foal up to the starter's hands for the word. The purse is especially strong in favorable conditions to stallion-owners and owners of foals. Nominator of sire of winner gets thirty for one. $50 paid on a stallion makes every one of his foals of 1892 eligible. It is the largest first money ever offered a two-year-old. $50 carries the foal to within four months of the race. No paying for a "pig in a poke" in it, that is putting up good money before a line is got on the colt's merits. Every stallion-owner in the country owes it to his patrons to nominate his stallion. It is a good thing to train and develop your stock. A better thing is to have others make fame for your stallion and stock, and it cannot be but a wise policy to offer every inducement possible tending to that end. It has been well said: "The shrewdest breeders now seek the blood that is favored by opportunity. The man who invests in blood that is not given a chance to rise to the top has failed to learn one of the plainest lessons in breeding history." VIGO.

Terre Haute, Ind., March 16, 1892.

East Portland (Or.) Horse Notes.

J. A. Logan has sold his Altamont gelding to Mr. Howe, of the West Side, who will leave him in charge of Trainer Hawk and campaign him.

Mr. Logan has bought of Jay Beach the two sons of Altamont, Silvermont and Kasana. Kasana 17,269 is a bay colt by Altamont, foaled 1890, first dam Timosa, by Almont Rattler 500; grandam by Mambrino Patchen 58; third dam Dora, by Lancaster, son of imp. Glencoe. Silvermont (formerly Vancouver) is a dark, iron-gray gelding, foaled 1889, by Altamont 3600, dam by Rockwood 1467; second dam by Oregon Pathfinder. Mr. Logan will leave Kasana with Beach to be worked, and will use Silvermont for a road horse.

H. D. McGuire, our latest addition to horse-breeders, after an inspection of the horses standing in this vicinity, has sent his mare Daisy (the dam of Rockwood and the promising pacing mare Bonnie Bell) to McMinnville to be bred to Vinmont, by Altamont. Daisy is by Rockwood 1467. She is rather small, but, like Nancy Hanks, can get there, and Mc should get a winner by the union. He has his eye on the three-year-old stakes now with Hamrock this season.

Charley Hawk, who dumped the talent with Democrat, 2:28, is down from Dilley's, where he has been working his horses on the covered track of the Hallack Stock Farm, and reports his stock doing well. Old Democrat will be ready to trot many a good race yet. EAST PORTLAND.

A Great Stake.

The Sturgis (Mich.) Fair Association is greatly encouraged at the number of stallions entered in the National Futurity Stakes, and entries are coming in every day. We received a letter from Secretary F. W. Wait last Tuesday, containing a list of the stallions whose progeny are eligible as starters. Forty-four were entered up to that time, but California was not represented as we would like to see her in such a princely stake race. Eleven thousand, one hundred and eleven dollars and eleven cents is a sum that cannot be captured by trotting horses—in one stake—very often, and as this association has deposited a sum covering every possible contingency in the leading bank of Sturgis, Mich., as an earnest of their good intentions and financial standing, our breeders should nominate their stallions without delay (as the entries of stallions close April 1, 1892), and not only take chances in securing first money, but show a spirit of enterprise and advertise their stallions as well.

DIRECTOR JR.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1892 AT THE ASYLUM RANCH, SAN RAFAEL.

DESCRIPTION.

DIRECTOR JR. is a grandly-formed stallion, a handsome black in color; stands 15.3 hands; weighs 1,175 pounds. In appearance and disposition he is more like Director than any other son of that famous sire. He has never been trained for speed, but can easily show a 2:20 gait on the road, and will surely get a mark much below that this fall, as he will be put in training for this season's campaign. Up to the present time he has been in the stud in Oregon and never given an opportunity to show his speed. His colts, like himself, are all grand lookers, show great trotting action, intelligence and gameness. A three-year-old now in training has shown a mile in 2:21, and Directwood, a two-year-old son, won every race in which he was entered last year, and could have gone in the thirty list had his owner so desired. At the Oregon State Fair last year Director Jr. and five of his get were awarded first premiums.

PEDIGREE.

It will be seen that Director Jr. is bred on blood lines almost identically the same as Direct, 2:06, the Greatest Harness Horse in the World.

MELROSE

DESCRIPTION.

MELROSE is a handsome bay stallion, foaled in 1889; stands 15.3 hands high and weighs 1100 pounds. In conformation he is symmetrical throughout, splendid bone and muscle, stylish and a grand individual in every respect. At twenty months old, with very little work, Tom Murphy drove him a mile in 2:35. As he was growing fast it was decided better to cease working him until this Fall, when he will be prepared for the track and put in the list, barring accidents.

His splendid individuality and fashionable breeding makes him one of the most desirable young stallions on the Coast.

WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU

That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is gloriously mistaken. However, don't point ou the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing o both heels and the entire wearing surface.

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18½, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2.24¾ and 2:24¼. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. *Balkan.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14¼ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¼. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¼. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½, Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:40 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000,

AND HIS SERVICE IS OFFERED AT $100 FOR THE SEASON.

The services of no other young horse of his conformation, breeding and quality, with such a record, is offered at so low a figure.

Bear in mind that colt stakes will soon be given for the get of stallions with records of 2:15 or better. If you want to raise colts which will be eligible to enter in all stakes, BREED TO BALKAN, as he is the only horse in this region with a record of 2:15 whose services are offered to the public.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

VOTER.

Sired by ELECT (sire of ELECT MOORE, four-year-old race record, 2:27), dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, four-year-old record in a race, 2:23), by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN; second dam JENNY LIND, by VERMONT BLACK HAWK; third dam OLD STUB, by YOUNG TELESCOPE; fourth dam by JUSTIN MORGAN.

ELECT was sired by ELECTIONEER, dam INEZ, by NORDALE; second dam LIZZIE, by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT; third dam "THE THRIFT MARE," a thoroughbred brought from Kentucky.

NORDALE, by NORFOLK, dam BLUE DALE, by OWEN DALE; NORFOLK, by LEXINGTON, dam NOVICE, by IMP. GLENCOE; OWEN DALE by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT, dam MARIA DOWNING, by AMERICAN ECLIPSE. YOUNG TELESCOPE by IMP. TELESCOPE, dam by IMP. MESSENGER.

VOTER is a dark bay, solid color, with black points; foaled 1886; 15 hands 3 inches high, and weighs 1,106 pounds. He is a horse of magnificent form, and is in every way a superior individual. In him is combined the HAMBLETONIAN, CLAY, MORGAN and thoroughbred blood. This horse was in Charles Marvin's care for about ten days during the record meeting at Stockton last fall—the only time he was ever on a track—and the first time he was speeded he showed Marvin an eighth of a mile in 19½ seconds. He was taken sick, and notwithstanding he showed such remarkable speed, had to be taken home.

VOTER will make the season from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

ANDY R.

(FULL BROTHER TO STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23.)

Sired by CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of STEVE WHIPPLE, four-year-old race record, 2:23, and KATE AGNEW, 2:28½), dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23, and VOTER), by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of 15 trotters in 2:30; of 9 sires of 12 2:30 trotters, and of 12 dams of 16 trotters in the list.)

CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN 10,178, by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of nine sires), dam FLORA (dam of three sires of 2:30 speed) by CHIEFTAIN 721; second dam a thoroughbred mare.

ANDY R. is a bright bay, with small star; foaled 1885; 15 hands 2½ inches high, and weighs 1,025 pounds. He is a beauty, and a perfect horse in every way. Will make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $40 FOR THE SEASON, FEBRUARY 1 TO JUNE 1.

PRINDEX.

Sired by DEXTER PRINCE 11,363, (sire of seven in the list) dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, VOTER and ANDY R.)

PRINDEX is a dark brown horse, white hind feet; foaled 1888; 16 hands high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a good-sized, fine-styled and well-gaited colt, and will certainly make a trotter and sire of speed. He will also make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st.

AT $40 FOR THE SEASON.

The reader will perceive that the four stallions mentioned herein are all from the same mare. Four individually better or nicer-looking stallions can not be found on any stock farm in California. Horsemen are especially invited to inspect the horses, and I wish to call special attention to their feet and legs—better were never put under a horse. Their dam, TWIST, at sixteen years old, is as sound as the day she was foaled. Their second, third and fourth dams were used for all purposes of farm and road work, and all lived to be over thirty years old—their limbs, at the time of death, being as free of blemishes or of any marks of unsoundness as a suckling colt's.

The disposition of these stallions are of the very best, and their produce are all good size, of fine conformation, have perfect feet and legs, and all show speed to a remarkable degree.

I do not favor extremely high service fees, and the prices on these stallions for this year are placed comparatively very low; that of STEVE WHIPPLE in particular being much less than of any other stallion of equal value or merit in this State.

Mares sent to my address, care of WEBER STABLES, STOCKTON, CAL., will be taken to my ranch at BELLOTA free of charge, provided two or three days' notice be given me by letter.

Pasturage on mares to be bred to VOTER, ANDY R., or PRINDEX free for two months, after that $3 per month. All bills payable at time of service or before the mares are removed.

Usual return privileges, provided mare or horse does not change hands, or money refunded at my option. For further particulars, address

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

No. 8707. BILLY THORNHILL Rec. 2:24 1-2

By BEVERLY WILKES, Brother of
PROSPECT MAID, 2:23½, WALSINGHAM, 2166 (sire of LATITUDE, 2:19¾ at 4 years). GEORGIA WILKES, sire of VALENTINE, 2:18½, BAS BLEN WILKES, 2:24½, BILLY WILKES, 2:29½, BESSIE WILKES, 2:31½.

Dam EMILY, Dam of
FORTUNA, 2:22, BILLY THORNHILL, 2:24½ COL. YOUNG, 2:30.

Second dam SUE STOUT,

Third dam LEAR MARE, Dam of
JIM IRVING, 2:23, and YOUNG JIM, sire of BUTTERFLY, 2:19½, GARNETT, 2:19, and twelve other performers.

By GEORGE WILKES, Sire of
GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-four others in the 2:30 list, and seventy-five sires of 249 trotters.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of
Seventy-five producing sons and forty-six producing daughters.

By ASHLAND 47, Son of
MAMBRINO CHIEF 11 and sire of HIGHLAND WIN 1226, and others in list and the dams of EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, and others.

By LEAR'S SIR WILLIAM, Son of
HOWARD'S SIR CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES (who died when but three years of age) was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot 2:27½ (sire of Hannis, 2:17½, and others), out of Juliett, by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2 hands, and weighs 1,080 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well-built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well-shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:40 without boots of any kind. His first colt showed trials last fall in 2:20 in his 3-year-old form, and all of his 2-year-olds that have been handled any show lots of speed and a nice way of going. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

TERMS, $75 WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGE.

I have a good pasture to turn mares in at $5 each per month. The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

LONG BRANCH.

Limited to Fifteen Outside Mares at $50 for the Season.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¾ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Antevo, 2:16¾), sire of seven with records from 2:17¼ to 2:30, by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Zola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25½ (sire of seven with records from 2:10 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty Outside Mares at $50 for the Season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27½, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¾, sire of 77 with records from 2:11¾ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11½ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track); dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30; the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23¾, made in 1860; the fastest and gamest representative of the Clay family). His pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great broodmares. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains—the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race-horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and nineteen others from 2:18¼ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or ten per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

4-year-old Record, 2:20.

GEORGE WASHINGTON is a handsome bay horse, hind feet white, foaled 1886, bred by Thomas Smith of Vallejo, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1200 pounds.

PEDIGREE:

GEORGE WASHINGTON, by Mambrino Chief Jr. 11,622, record 2:34. GEORGE WASHINGTON has proven himself a great race horse, and would have been given a much lower mark last season had it not been for an accident. As an individual, he is all that can be asked, being perfect in form, intelligent and of kind disposition, and represents the highest type of a trotting sire. As he will be put in training for the campaign of 1892, he will be allowed to serve only a limited number of approved mares.

TERMS: $100 FOR THE SEASON.

Australian Thoroughbred Blood

Loyalist and Chesterfield

Two Sons (from Grandly-Bred Mares) of THE MARQUIS, one of Australia's Greatest Sire,

Will make the season of 1892 at the SOUTHER FARM, San Leandro, Cal.

These horses can hardly fail to produce speed and staying qualities from the strains of thoroughbred blood in this State.

THE MARQUIS was equally great as a race-horse and as a sire. In England he won the St. Leger, the Two Thousand Guineas, and was only beaten a head for the Derby, thus winning two of the three greatest English three-year-old races, and losing the third by ever so little.

He was one of the best bred horses ever taken to Australia, and in that great racing country he founded a wonderful family of race-horses and producers of race-horses. His son Newminister is a sire of the very highest rank, and, since Musket's death, is the premier stallion of Australia; one of his yearlings sold in March for $12,500 at Melbourne.

This is the most unusual opportunity to procure this valuable blood. The service fees are given below, and are certainly very reasonible, especially when it is considered that all mares bred to these horses will be kept free of charge until July 1st, 1892. Especial care and attention given mares with foal, which may be sent to the Souther Farm at any time, where they will receive the best of care at foaling time without extra charge.

Mares that prove not to be with foal may be returned without service fee in 1893, provided the horse bred to is alive and at the Souther Farm.

LOYALIST - - - - $100, INCLUDING KEEP OF MARE TILL JULY 1st, 1892.

Bay horse, foaled 1884. Winner of the Brunswick Stakes, worth about $7,000, one and one-quarter mile in 1:08¼.

By THE MARQUIS,

Son of STOCKWELL and CINIZELLI by Touchstone.

First dam LOYAL PEERLESS.....by THE PEER

A first-class race mare herself, and a producer of racers. She is comparatively young. Loyalist was her first foal, and her second, Loyalstone, won the Spring Maiden Stakes, for three-year-olds, one and one-half miles, in 2:45. As a four-year-old Loyalstone was only beaten a head in the Caulfield Cup, one and one-half miles in 2:35, the best time ever made at that distance in Australia; and this after Loyalstone had made the running for his stable companion, Plenty, who was knocked down, leaving Loyalstone to finish after setting the pace from the start.

A great race-horse and sire, producing among others, Darebin, imported to California by Mr. J. B. Haggin for the famous Rancho del Paso stud. At four years of age, Darebin took up 134 pounds and won the Gold Cup at Sidney, two miles in 3:33½.

Second dam LOYAL DEVOIR by Trumpeter. Third dam LETTY WEST by West Australian. Fourth dam BAY LETTY by Bay Middleton. Fifth dam MISS LETTY (Weatherbit's dam), winner of the Oaks in 1887, etc. See English Stud Book.

LOYALIST'S mile and a quarter in 2:08¼ was the best on record in Australia when made, and has only been surpassed by Abercorn and the great Carbine. His sire was a race-horse and a sire of race-horses; his dam was a winner and has produced winners. Loyalist has proven himself a race-horse, and he will produce race-horses.

CHESTERFIELD - $75, INCLUDING FREE KEEP OF MARES UNTIL JULY 1st, 1892.

Bay horse, no white, foaled 1876. Bred by Mr. C. B. Fisher, Victoria. (See Australian Stud Book, Vol. 2, page 201).

By THE MARQUIS,

Son of STOCKWELL and CINIZELLI by Touchstone.

First dam LAMORMA.....by Fireworks

Winner of many races from good horses. Sold as a broodmare for $5,250.

In the Australian racing season of 1867-8, the Derby was made a double event. Fireworks won on both occasions, beating great horses. He also won the Champion Stakes, three miles, and other good races.

Second dam NIGHTLIGHT.....by ARCHY

Dam of Waxlight, one of the best two-year-olds of Australia, winning six races without a defeat at that age from the best of company.

Son of Camel, sire of Touchstone

Third dam RUSHLIGHT.....by BAY MIDDLETON

The greatest race-horse of his age, and sire of two Derby and two St. Leger winners.

Fourth dam TORCH by Lamplighter. Fifth dam DANOISE by Oscar, winner of the Goodwood Cup; a great handicap horse. Sixth to twentieth dams, see English Stud Book.

CHESTERFIELD was a good race-horse and a first-class weight packer. In ten important stakes he was first in four, second in four and third in two. He will produce great two-year-olds from our California mares; in his own two-year-old form he took up 128 pounds and won the Flying Handicap at Wollongong.

DESCRIPTION—HOCK WILKES, foaled 1888, is a handsome bay with black points, 15½ hands high, of speedy conformation, good bone and powerful muscular development. He is pure in trotting action, very speedy, and, but for difficulty with one fore pastern, he would now have a low record. He is one of the handsomest sons of Guy Wilkes, with the Wilkes substance and trotting instinct and the thoroughbred quality and type of conformation. The sire of Hock Wilkes, Guy Wilkes, stands at a service fee of $1,000, and he is conceded to be the best representative of the great Wilkes and Hambletonian family. The dam of Hock Wilkes is a large mare, 16¾ hands, of powerful build, a daughter of Hock-Hocking, who produced the speedy and long-distance performers St. David, Beaconsfield, Batchelder, Arthur H., Four Aces, etc., and whose dam was the third dam of Anteeo, 2:16¼, Antevolo, 2:19½, and Coral, 2:25.

WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,

THREE CHEERS

Young Fashion — Fashion — Bonnets o' Blue; Trustee (imp.)
Young Fashion — Monarch — Delphine; Priam
Hurrah (imp.) — Jovial — Sister to Grey Momus; Bay Middleton
Hurrah (imp.) — Newminster — Beeswing; Touchstone

Fourth dam Reality; fifth dam, by imp. Medley, sixth dam, by imp. Sentinel; seventh dam, by Mark Anthony; eighth dam, by imp. Janus; ninth dam, by imp. Monkey; tenth dam, by Silvereye eleventh dam, by Spanker. (See Bruce's American Stud Book, Vol. I. page 432.

HURRAH, sire of Three Cheers, produced the great winners Bonnie Lizzie, Chaquita, Ohio Boy, Nellie Peyton, Little Buttercup, Red Fox, Medusa, Brad, Referee, Monk, Hostage, Lady Middleton and many others.

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

By MAMBRINO PATCHEN, Sire of
Eighteen in 2:30 list, and the dams of GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HOURI, 2:17, ASTRAL, 2:18, BARON WILKES, 2:18, and sixty others in 2:30 or better.

By THORNDALE, 2:22¼, Sire of
EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, DAISYDALE, 2:19¾, and five others in 2:30 list, by ALEXANDER'S ABDALLAH, sire of GOLDSMITH MAID, 2:14, ALMONT, etc., out of DOLLY, dam of DIRECTOR, 2:17, ONWARD, 2:25¼, THORNDALE, 2:24¼, and CZARINA, 2:21, by MAMBRINO CHIEF.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of
ELECTIONEER, GEORGE WILKES, and forty-one trotters in the 2:30 list.

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five producing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12½, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼ (who was shown trials the past season in 2:14); Thornton, 2:26¾, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:22¼, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12½, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, (the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams, Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, soft and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29½. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

Agnew Stock Farm,

HILLSDALE, SANTA CLARA COUNTY.

SERVICE FEE $150. LIMITED TO 20 MARES.

DAWN has a record of 2:18¾, and three heats of a race in 2:20 or better. His sire, Nutwood has record of 2:18½, in a third heat, and is now regarded as the greatest of living sires, having put seventy-seven into the list altogether, of which twenty-six entered the list in 1892. At his present fee Dawn really is the CHEAPEST OF AMERICAN STALLIONS, and, as a recent writer has said, "his form baffles description." Being by the great Nutwood 600, now standing at $1,000, out of Countess (dam of Strathway, 2:20, Placida and Morna, driven as a double team a trial mile in 2:26), Dawn shows that his family is a trotting one on each side of the house. Countess was by Whipple's Hambletonian, sire of Graves, 2:19, and fourteen others in the 2:20 list. The chestnut stallion

BOSWELL, JR.

Will stand at the same place at the low price of $50 the season.

BOSWELL JR. showed miles in 2:26 and quarters in 35 seconds on two weeks' work.

Pepper, of South Elkhorn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky; sired by Onward 1411, record 2:25¼, trial 2:17; sire of 48 in the list. He is proving one of the greatest sires in America and his sons are proving to be sires of extreme and early speed also. Onward is by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of seventy-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten with records below 2:20; first dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:18¾, trial 2:25), by American Clay 34, sire of Maggie Briggs, 2:27, Ella Clay, 2:27½, and the dams of Executor, 2:24½, Ranchero, 2:21½, Judge Hawes, 2:24, Ambassador, 2:22½, Sir Walter, 2:18¾, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:23; third dam by Paddle Burns, thoroughbred.

Every one of his progeny shows perfect trotting action and fine size; in color they are all deep bays or browns, and in disposition they cannot be excelled.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¾; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

The Fast Trotting Stallion

SILAS SKINNER.

RECORD 2:17. STANDARD, 10,681,

Will make the season of 1891, commencing February 1st and ending July 1st, at De Turk's Breeding Stables on Donahue Street, opposite De Turk's Wine Cellars, Santa Rosa, Cal.

SILAS SKINNER, sired by Alcona Jr., 2:24; first dam Fontana (dam of Flora Belle, 2:24½) by Almont 33, sire of thirty-eight in the 2:30 list; second dam Fannie Williams, dam of Bay Chieftain, 2:28¼, by Alexander's Abdallah 15, sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14; Rosalind, 2:21¼; Thorndale, 2:22¼, etc.; third dam by Gaine's Denmark; fourth dam by Robert Bruce; fifth dam by Virginia Whip.

ALCONA JR. was sired by Alcona 730 (sire of Flora Belle, 2:24½; Clay Duke, 2:30; Prince Warwick, trial 2:18, etc.) by Almont 33. First dam Madonna by Cassius M. Clay Jr., sire of Durango, 2:23¾ Harry Clay 2:23¾; Clay Davis, 2:26½; Cora, 2:30, etc.

The above is a condensed pedigree of Silas Skinner, but enough is given to show him to be as richly bred in the best trotting lines as any horse living, besides being a great individual with remarkable speed and staying qualities, which was shown by his performance on the California Circuit the last two seasons. In 1890 Silas Skinner started in six races, trotting in all twenty-three heats. Of these six races Skinner won four and was second in two, and closed the season of 1890 with a record of 2:19.

The performance of Silas Skinner during the season of 1891 has also been very meritorious, having started in seven races, three of which he won, being second twice and twice third. In his race at Sacramento, September 19, 1891, Silas Skinner trotted—so horsemen said—one of the gamest races ever trotted in California. His competitors were Frank M and Wanda, whom he defeated, winning the first, third and fourth heats, the second heat falling to Frank M. Time of each heat 2:17, 2:17½, 2:17½, 2:19.

SILAS SKINNER is a black horse, sixteen hands high, and weighs in stud season about 1,100 pounds. In color, breeding and conformation he approaches very near the ideal stallion, and he descends on both his sire's and dam's side from ancestors who have few equals in the history of the American trotting horse.

TERMS: $100 FOR THE SEASON.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge, provided SILAS SKINNER remains the property of the present owners. Pasturage $3 per month. Every attention and care given to mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, apply to

The Antevolo Stallion

SIROCCO

Will make the season of 1892 at Egbert Rancho, near Rio Vista, from February 1st to June 15th at $50 for the season.

PEDIGREE AND DESCRIPTION.

SIROCCO, by Antevolo 7648, 2:19¾, by Electioneer 125, sire of 100 in the 2 30 list, dam by Rifleman (thoroughbred), sire of Col. Lewis, 2:18¾.

SIROCCO is a handsome bay with black points stands 16-1 hands high, 16.2½ over the hip; weigh about 1,150; five years old, and one of the best and speediest sons of Antevolo. He is remarkably intelligent, kind, and a splendid individual. Trial, quarter at three years old .37 to 150-pound cart without regular work. Good pasturage and the best of care taken of mares at $2 per month, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

DON MARVIN

Five-Year-Old Record 2:28.

DON MARVIN is a beautiful seal brown, foaled 1884; bred by Senator Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal is 16 hands high and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by Fallis, 2:23 (sire of four in 2:30 list), he by Electioneer. Dam, CORA (dam of Don Marvin, 2:28, and Elected [trial] 2:26) by Don Victor, (sire of the dams of five in the 2:30 list) by Belmont. Second dam, CLARABEL (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24½, and Rebecca, dam of four in 2:30 list) by Abdallah Star. Third dam, FAIRY (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:29¾, and Sweepstakes, sire of 22 in the 2:30 list, and three other producing sires and dams) by Rydsyk's Hambletonian. Fourth dam, EMMA MILLS (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star.

DON MARVIN is a horse of great natural speed. His record was made with scarcely any preparation, after making a large season in the stud, and is no measure of his speed. His oldest colts (only five in number) are three years old this spring. One of them with very little work trotted quarters last fall in 36 seconds, and could have easily entered the 2:30 list in his two-year-old form had he been given an opportunity.

DON MARVIN will make the season of 1892 at $40, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—Four producing dams.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3,50.

It has a peculiarly warming, comforting and stimulating effect on all weak or stiff muscles and sinews. Quick in its action, cleanly and pleasant in use. Rub it into the muscles every night for a fortnight, and you will be pleased at its supporting and strengthening properties. There is not, nor has been, anything like it till now. It differs from all Oils, Embrocations and Liniments, both in substance and effect. Some Athletes are so fond of it that they rub it all over them.

Stockton's Splendid Race Courses.

Not many years ago California was regarded by the inhabitants of the other side of the Rockies only as a section where gold was to be found in great profusion, but where the seeker after the precious metal faced untold dangers in that search for the wealth hidden in the bowels of Mother Earth. But Time's march has brought about a change of opinion in regard to the Golden State, and while mining is still one of our great industries, it can be said with truth that our other great resources have dwarfed that of gold-digging. Agriculture, horticulture, viticulture and horse culture are now carried on with a success that cannot be attained in any other part of the United States. But of all these industries we have mentioned, nothing is attracting the attention of the whole world to California like her fast horses. To the builders and owners of the Stockton kite-shaped track belong the thanks and applause of every owner and lover of a fast trotter and pacer in California. Over this course, without doubt the fastest and most perfect on earth, were broken all the records worth breaking, and it was the means of opening the eyes of every admirer and owner of a horse, on this hemisphere, at least, to the fact that California horses surpass in every essential point the members of the equine race raised in any part of the world. The demolition of the scythe and hour-glass of Father Time (almost a daily occurrence at Stockton) resulted in an enhancement in the value of trotting horses that was never dreamed of—except by the far-sighted men who erected this monument to their powers of discernment. Scores of horses that might have remained in obscurity for years, if not forever, gained creditable records over the new course. "Fast" as the kite-shaped track was last year, with the rains of the past winter to pack it down thoroughly, we can confidently look for even more phenomenal time to be made over it this season.

To those who object to the kite-shaped course for racing, the "regulation" track at Stockton, as good as any within our borders, is extremely handy and in prime order. As can be seen by the accompanying cut, the people of the Slough City possess what no other place in the country can claim at this time—both a mile kite and regulation course. The grounds and grand stands at Stockton are sources of pride to the people there also, and it is due that the enterprise and liberality of the members of the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Association should be rewarded with the support of every horseman in the State. They have done as much, if not more, to demonstrate the worth of our horses than any men to be found, and every horseman in this part of the world owes them a great debt of gratitude.

THE STOCKTON TRACK.

The prime-movers in the work of building this, our first kite-shaped course, were L. U. Shippee, George Sperry, W. S. Hobart, C. E. Needham and Senator B. Langford, and the interest they took brought many other good men into the breach, and the work, under the supervision of the careful and experienced Fred Arnold, went rapidly forward, reaching completion about October 1, 1891. The cut of the track gives the dimensions of the stretches, turn from straight to straight and loop, also the width of the track. The turns are thrown up in a truly artistic manner, insuring safety as well as speed. In addition to the fine kite and regulation tracks, the praises of Stockton can be sung in many other ways. The weather at the time race meetings are held there is simply lovely, the accommodations for horses and stall room cannot be beaten on the Pacific Coast; splendid spring water is at every hand, while the many paddocks at the course are in keeping with the general excellence of the appointments of the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Association.

Common Sense Watering and Feeding.

A horse can live 25 days without solid food, merely drinking water, 17 days without eating or drinking, and only five days when eating solid food without drinking. An idea prevails among horsemen that a horse should never be watered oftener than three times a day, or in 24 hours. This is not only a mistaken idea, but a brutal practice, says the Buffalo Horse World. A horse's stomach is extremely sensitive and will suffer under the least interference, causing a feverish condition. Feeding a horse principally on grain and driving it five hours without water is like giving a man salt mackerel for dinner and not allowing him to drink before supper time—very unsatisfactory for the man. If you know anything about the care of horses and have any sympathy for them water them as often as they want to drink—once an hour if possible. By doing this you will not only be merciful to your animals, but you will be a benefactor to yourself, as they will do more work, they look better and live longer. If you are a skeptic, and know more about horses than anyone else, you are positive that the forgoing is wrong, because you have had horses die with watering them too much, and boldly say that the agitators of frequent watering are tools in your estimation, and you would not do such a thing.

Just reason for a moment and figure out whether the animal would have over-drunk and over-chilled his stomach if he had not been allowed to become over-thirsty. A horse is a great deal like a man. Let him get over-worked, over-starved or abused, and particularly for the want of sufficient drink in warm weather, and the consequences will always be injurious. Sensible hostlers in large cities are awakening to the advantage of frequent watering. Street-car horses are watered every hour, and sometimes oftener, while they are at work. It is plenty of water that supplies evaporation or perspiration and keeps down the temperature. What old-fogy methods amount to may be seen by the change in medical practice to man. Twenty years ago a person having a fever of any kind or pneumonia was allowed but little water to drink, and then it had to be tepid. To day practitioners prescribe all the iced water the patient can possibly drink, and in addition cold bandages are applied to reduce and control the temperature of the blood. What is applicable to man will never injure a horse. Use common sense and human feeling. Don't think it is a horse, and capable of enduring any and all things. A driver who sits in his wagon and lashes his worn-out, half-curried, half-fed and half-watered team should never complain of any abuse he may receive from his master or employer, for he is lower in character, harder in sympathy and less noble than the brutes he is driving, and deserves, in the name of all that is human, the same punishment as a criminal.

Duties and Powers of the Starter.

This very important subject, the duties and powers of the starter, has been commanding the attention of the best men interested in the trotting horse industry. Mr. C. A. Willis, of New York, has, after studying the views of a large number of prominent breeders, secretaries, trainers and drivers, summed up his own conclusions as follows:

First. He (the starter) should have complete control of the race or races so far as the calling of the horses for the heat; of entirely directing the movements of the horses on the track up to the time he gives the word "go," and should be empowered by rule to punish by fine, or by any other punishment described in the rule, any driver who breaks any rule which applies before the word "go" is given. After the word "go" is given his powers and duties should be co-equal of the powers and duties of his two associate judges, and, regarding all things happening during the contest after the word is given, the judgment of the majority of the three judges (the starter always being one of the judges) should be decisive.

Second. The two associate judges should have no power to overrule the starter as to any fine he may have imposed within his jurisdiction as above laid down, nor to allow a horse distanced in any heat by reason of said horse being sent off a considerable distance behind, or at any alleged disadvantage if the starter intended to send said horse off at such disadvantage as a punishment for the acts of the driver, or because the horse, being improperly broken or rattle-headed, has unreasonably delayed the start to the annoyance and disgust of the assembled patrons, or to the serious detriment of the fair and equitable chances of other horses in the race which were being worn out by the bad action of the horse and driver. And now a single word in conclusion:

I prophesy that the time will come, and soon, when the officers of the associations, be they ever so competent themselves, will find it policy to employ such a man as has been described by a number of writers herein quoted, instead of themselves officiating, because the fear of offending owners and drivers (which makes much scandal and does great harm to the trotting interests) will be absent from the mind of such a man as described, and the confidence of those who support the association by paying their money at the gate, patronizing the men who pay for the privileges and the pool-selling, will be restored, and the attendance each year will increase in greater proportion than the increase of population in territory adjacent to the location of the association's grounds.

The history of the trotting turf shows that progress is a necessity. Sincerely, CHARLES A. WILLIS.

It is taken for granted that the officers of any reputable association in selecting a person for the position of starter would have the fullest regard for his fitness for the place. Any argument based on the grounds of the contrary action is unworthy of notice.

IT MUST BE THE CLIMATE.

California's Representatives in the Great Brood Mare Table—A Wonderful Showing.

Following is a list of mares that distinguished themselves as matrons in California sufficiently to be placed in the Great Brood Mare Table of Wallace's Year Book for 1891. There are no less than 130 of these wonderful producing mares. Two of them (Bloomfield Maid and March Fourth) gained additional renown, for three of the produce of each went into the 2:30 list within sixty days—unprecedented in the history of the trotting turf. The new-comers to the Great Brood Mare Table that we print below (with their produce), are marked with an asterisk. Of the 832 mares in the Year Book's list, that 10.0 of them should be identified with California trotting-horse interests is certainly something that we can be proud of. May Day, recently sold at the East, produced two faster trotters than any mare, living or dead, in Margaret S., 2:12½, and Inca, 2:14½; besides this, she is a new one in the list of Great Brood Mares.

Speaking of the crack two-year-olds of 1891, a Sporting World writer says: "His Highness occupies a padded stall, and his four valuable legs are bound with red flannel. "Merely a precaution," as Mr. Hyland explains. The padding has been thoroughly done in soft leather. It gives His Highness' box a most comfortable and snug appearance. This crack colt, that as a two-year-old won more money in purses and stakes for his owner than the largest winning stable in England, has wintered well. He stands 16 hands and weighs about 1,100 pounds. He has matured into a sensible-looking three-year-old, his high-jowled head being a study of perfect conformation and maturity. Merry Monarch is of the plain, Hindoo-looking kind. He had pinkeye last fall, from which he seems to have perfectly recovered. Ludwig, Mr. Daly's representative, is a monster three-year-old; he stands nearly seventeen hands high, and is built in proportion. It would be difficult to find a grander-looking fellow. Contribution has bad legs, and has been blistered."

Thos. Kehoe, of Bridge, Idaho, was in to see us the other day. He said that most of the people in that State devote nearly all their attention to the cattle industry. There are some, however, who are taking quite an interest in the raising of good horses, and when a number of good stallions are introduced, the prospects will brighten considerably.

REMINISCENCES AND GOSSIP.

The deaths of D. D. Withers, W. L. Scott, George Hearst, August Belmont and Ben Bruce make one think how fast the older generation of turfmen (men who liked the turf for the sport there was in it and not for the dollars that they might win) are passing away. Going back a little further, there comes before us the forms and faces of a trio that have passed to their fathers, and whose places can never be filled. We refer to Price McGrath, J. W. Hunt Reynolds and General Abe Buford. A more enthusiastic trio of turfmen never existed than these, but, famous as they were in "their day," it is seldom you hear their names mentioned.

Hunt Reynolds was a notable figure on the turf, and owned scores of splendid thoroughbreds, among them Whisper, Fartaletta, Fortuna and Falsetto. The breath of scandal never touched his name. On his place was reared "the smoked Irishman," Isaac Murphy, than whom a better horse pilot never lived in America. Isaac was treated exceedingly well by the Reynolds family, and to this day almost invariably has it stipulated in his contract with an employer that wherever Mrs. Reynolds has a horse in a race he must be allowed to ride that one in preference to his employer's entry. Murphy is a respectful, observant, deserving student of the riding art who has amassed a fortune by close attention to business and failure to get that disease which attacks most good riders—"big head." The names of Price McGrath and Tom Bowling are inseparably linked together, and no man ever loved a horse better than did McGrath the old hero who helped to make him rich. Few ever "stacked 'em up" much higher than Price McGrath. When he cast off this mortal coil at McGrathiana farm, near Lexington, Ky., Tom Bowling was alive and in clover. Since that time, however, the old horse has passed from pillar to post, and the last indignity heaped upon him was his sale at Lexington recently for $50. If there is such a thing as coming back on earth again, I know Price McGrath must have risen up out of his grave to curse the auctioneer that let his hammer drop at such a measly sum when the old king of the turf was being sold. However, Tom Bowling was never a success in the stud. The best he ever got were Enniskillen (Black Prince) and McBowling, and they were far from first-class. However, Enniskillen was the handsomest horse I ever saw. Great as Tom Bowling was on the turf, he was mighty "short-bred" on the dam's side of the house, he having just the required number of crosses to make him a thoroughbred—five. That may account for his failure in the stud. An old gray mare at Rancho del Paso cooked Tom Bowling's goose in good style for him once upon a time. That mare was Lizzie Lucas, dam of Cambyses, Lytton and other good ones. She was among the last of the get of imported Australian, who sired Fellowcraft, Wildidle, Grinstead, Miser and numerous others of note.

General Abe Buford came from a family of turfmen, and although it is an old saying that "only cowards kill themselves," no one will ever make me believe that it is a trueism. General Abe Buford's "heart" was tested on many a hard-fought battle-field during the Mexican and Civil wars. He was a West Pointer, and if he had not been a brave man he would never have gone out of that institution of learning into the regular army, for his family was a wealthy one. General Buford had two special pets in the shape of horseflesh—McWhirter and Goodnight. To his mind two better horses never existed. As far as McWhirter was concerned, the General was nearly right, for the horse was a wonder in his short day. What a true friend was the florid-faced, massive old warrior! His devotion to his brother's cause cost him his beloved Bosque Bonita farm, his fortune and his life. Tom Buford shot and killed one day one of Kentucky's most noted jurists, Judge Elliott, and the slayer was bitterly prosecuted. The case was carried to the Supreme Court of the State, and by the time the final verdict declaring the scapegrace brother insane was rendered, the General's fortune was swept away—all except a few hundred dollars. General Abe then became a frequent visitor to the Louisville pool-rooms, and soon his little "nest-egg" was a thing of the past. Notwithstanding his terrible trials, the old turfman was ever courteous and sometimes very cheerful. After the departure of his last dollar General Buford turned evangelist, and his discourses drew large crowds. However, he did not preach very long. I shall always believe that the good-hearted old fellow's mind gave way to some extent when he turned preacher. He went to live with some relatives in Louisville, and his new life, so different from the gay old times, when he had a happy family about him, hosts of friends, fast horses and his beautiful bluegrass domain, touched him deeply, and the proud old West Pointer, the hero of two wars and Kentucky's most famous turfman, resolved that death was preferable to living on the bounty of his friends. He had sacrificed his all to save his wild brother from the gallows, and now, the family disgraced, with nothing to look forward to in his old age but dependence and misery, he took his own life. A truer friend, more enthusiastic horseman or more pleasant gentleman than General Abe Buford never lived, and there are few men to be found like him these days.

"Speaking about crackajacks," said an old turfman the other evening, "America has never produced a horse that went through two, three and four-year-old forms without suffering defeat. Hindoo and Salvator were the closest approaches we ever had. Hindoo was beaten twice as a two-year-old (by Thora and Crickmore), twice as a three-year-old (by Crickmore), and once as a four-year-old, by Checkmate. He started thirty times and won twenty-five. His percentage of winnings was 85⅚ per cent. However, as a three-year-old, Hindoo conceded some weight to Governor Bowie's gelding, and that accounts for his beatings. No horse has to his credit two such cup races as Hindoo—3:57¼ and 3:58—the first named with 117 pounds up and the latter with 108, when he defeated Eole at equal weights and Parole with his entitled weight for age. Salvator was beaten twice as a two-year-old, by Proctor Knott, as a three-year-old by Long Street, and as a four-year-old was never headed. He started eighteen times and won fifteen, a percentage of 83 1-3. We have had three unbeaten two-year-olds—Sensation, Tremont and El Rio Rey—and only one three-year-old that never had the dust of defeat thrown in his optics—Leonatus. To show you what a good horse he was it is only necessary to state that he beat Drake Carter three times easily, and Drake Carter to this day holds the record at three miles. Luke Blackburn, after he started in to win, was a regular Eclipse, for his fields were nowhere. Ten Broeck, the wonderful record-breaker at a mile, two miles, two and five-eighths miles and four miles, got a number of trouncings, King Alfonso beating him two or three times and Parole once easily. Some horses won't run kindly in races. I remember a filly in a California stable called Truxillo, that in her work showed up much better than Los Angeles or anything else on the track in the shape of a two-year-old. The smart people had her marked down as a sure winner. She had never been run with colors up, and when put in a race she got in the middle of the bunch and stayed there to the end. At the same time, had she not been afraid of colors, she would have taken the track and walked away from her field like breaking sticks. Truxillo never won a race that I know of, and it was all owing to her timid nature and failure to get accustomed to colors in her young days."

A gentleman of this city who landed from Our Faderland many years ago and has not lost the accent yet, always boasted of his ability as a "shoodge of goot hosses." He is a very well-to-do citizen, and loves to drive through the park. Some years ago he purchased a horse on New Montgomery street that proved a first-class shier, and had a tendency to get frightened at everything he saw. The gentleman disposed of him and purchased others, and finally after he had been "cinched" several times, he felt that "he had paid for his learning," and was "sooch a shoodge of goot horses dot id vould dake a schmart man to fool him." He was always on the lookout for a roadster that would suit, and one day he saw the great and only Daniel McCarty driving a very stylish bay gelding down Golden Gate avenue. Of course, he knew Dan, and hailed him with the inquiry:

"Hello dere, Dan, vot you got—a racehoss?"

"No siree," replied Daniel, "this is the finest road horse in the State. He's too good to speed on a race track."

"Vell, is he for sale? Can he go single or double? I say, Dan, I vant a hoss dot vood suit me. Does you tink he vood do?" asked the Teuton.

"Suit you? How do I know? All I can tell you is that no man's horse can beat him. I am going East next week, and you can have him for just what I paid for him, because I know you are a good judge of horses and can take care of him. Step right out here and examine him all over; there's not a pimple or blemish on him any place. Don't be afraid; he won't kick. Look at his teeth; he's only six years old—coming seven."

Thus advised, the "shoodge" walked all around him, felt of his legs, his ribs, "chinned" the animal and approvingly looked at Dan, and asked:

"Vat do you vant for him?"

"Two hundred dollars—just one-quarter of his worth."

The German chipped in: "Hold on, Dan, I forgot somedings. I vant to know ef he vill shy. I got a hoss dot vonce vas grazy like a loon ven he hear dem cars, und ef he saw his shadder he vould yump out of der harness."

"Oh, he's all right. He would not shy at anything. By G——, this fellow would go over a house if you headed him for it. He won't see any thing. He's a perfect driving horse, and is able to pull you and your wife over the road at a three-minute clip. I'll tell you what I'll do. You get right in and drive up to your residence and take your wife out and try the horse. If he don't suit, don't you take him. I'll not charge you anything."

The obliging Daniel got out, and the prospective purchaser got in and drove off. That afternoon he sent word for McCarty to come and get his money, at the same time assuring him the horse never shied. All went well until Sunday came, and as the German drove his steed out to the conservatory in the park he tied him to the hitching rail. Dan, the affable groom around there, almost paralyzed the German and his wife by saying: "That's a new harse yez have. It's a pity he's blind."

"Vot! plind! Mine gott, man, vot you mean? Dot hoss plind! Aind you misdaken?"

"No, siree! Look at his eyes. He wouldn't see a stone wall."

The German and his wife drove sorrowfully home, the wife reminding her spouse about his claiming to be a "shoodge."

He hunted up Daniel the next morning. How he slept between praying and swearing was one of those incomprehensible things that "no fellah can find out." Dan met his scowls with a smile.

"Well, what's the matter now?"

"Madder? Good Gott, McGarty, dot d—d hoss vas plind like a bat! You sheated me! I hev you arrested ef you don't gev me my money back!"

"Oh, no you won't," quietly said Dan, "you wait till I tell you something. The trouble with all smart horsemen like you is you don't pay attention to what is told you. No one can tell a horseman like you anything. It would be a waste of wind and time. You wanted a road horse. I told you all about this one."

"No, no, McGarty, so help me Gott you never said dot hoss vas plind," ejaculated the nervous listener.

"Now, hold on a minute, can't you," said Dan, "until I get through? If you don't, you'll be sorry. I told you all about the horse, as far as I knew. You asked me if he would shy. I told you no, that he wouldn't see anything. You examined the horse, was satisfied, took your wife out behind him, you liked him, your judgment was excellent, but your hearing was bad. You thought you were getting the best of me. Now, this is a lesson to you. I knew I would get that horse back, but I lost the use of him for four days in my business, and you have had a little pleasure out of him, I won't be hard on you. We will always be friends. You put the horse in my stable, I will give you a check for one hundred and eighty dollars, and never, as long as you live, forget to look a man or a horse in the eye when you are doing business. That's my plan, and I paid a big bag of money before I learned it. You got off very lucky my friend."

I heard a story recently about a couple of trotting horse men who laid in wait a long time for a "killing" in a three-minute class trot. One of them had a horse that could trot from 2:30 to 2:32 nearly all day, and brought his animal from the East about four months before the meeting commenced. He continually chuckled to himself over the prospective gold mine he felt sure of unearthing, for he knew the caliber of nearly everything he would have to tackle. On day an old friend, whom I will call Jones for short, drove into town behind a sorry-looking beast. "What's that you've got there?" said the man from the Atlantic shore. "Oh, an an old skate I've had up in the mountains. He's entered in the three-minute trot," said Jones. Taking a good look at the horse, Smith at length exclaimed: "You old son of a gun, I know that horse. "He's ———, and I saw him get a record of 2:21½ at Chicago last year." In vain Jones declared that his friend was never more mistaken in his life. "You might talk till your hair falls out," said Smith. "I know the horse, and I ain't going to let you get in and do me up, after all the trouble I've gone to to secure a good thing." "Well," said the driver of the ugly-looking trotter, "If you're onto me, what are you going to do about it? Your horse don't belong in that class either." "Let's compromise," said Smith; "I'll stay out for $500." "That goes," said Jones. The day of the race came. A mare that had shown miles in 2:30 repeatedly in her work was favorite over the field. The ringer brought $2 and $3 in $150 pools. The favorite got away with the first two heats, lapped by the ringer, in 2:32, 2:31, and the combination didn't let a pool get away. They turned the Eastern horse loose a little in the third heat, and he won from the mare by nearly a length in 2:30. Still the mare reigned favorite, and the result was that the ringer went out and won the next two heats, making a "record" of 2:27 in one of them. The two men on the inside carried about $20,000 out of that ring, and the job has not been discovered by the people of D—— to this day.

A well-known horseman, who delights in carrying a heavy overcoat on his arm wherever he goes, had quite an experience the other day. He came from Oakland, but as he did not care to tell anyone, he said he just arrived from Hotel del Monte, and while telling a story about the beautiful pebbles he saw there and how the young ladies gathered them (as only this gentleman can), a friend kindly placed a cobble-stone of huge dimensions in the pocket of his coat as it was lying on the table. The story-teller never noticed it as he picked up the coat and carried it around as usual. All day long, wherever he went, he packed that "loaded coat." At night he said to his friend, "Say, Steve, this coat is heavy as the d—l. I guess I'll hang it over in my room in the Grand Hotel." He had a beautiful new high hat in a nice box on the floor of the closet in his room, and as he threw the coat on the nail it pulled down the nail and made an impression on that stove-pipe hat that destroyed it forever. Hastily picking up the coat, the rock-filled pocket forcibly left its place in the bandbox and hit him on the shin. He dropped the coat, and as he heard the thud on the floor his astonishment knew no bounds. Quickly seizing the coat, he rammed his hands down into the pocket, extracted the innocent twelve-pound rock and ran with it into his friend's room, exclaiming: "My God, Steve! I forgot to show you one of those pebbles. The ladies knew I was going to tell about them, and so they put a sample in my pocket and never told me a word about it. Those Del Monte belles are d—d thoughtful, ain't they?"

Who says there's no such thing as luck? An old colored aunty, hearing that the enclosure was free on Derby and Clark days, made up her honest old mind to see "them ah hosses run w'at people was gwine so looney 'bout." She secured a good seat on a wagon, and, before the day's races were over, caught the betting fever. Signaling to a wee betting commissioner, she bade him name over all the horses in the race. When he got to Maggie May she said: "Hol' on, dah,' dat's enuff. Dat's a pow'ful peert name. Go ovah and buy me a Par's mutual on dat ah Maggie May." The boy returned with the ticket, and the old woman looked very happy. However, it must be known that Maggie May had been doing lots of running, but never yet had come close to the front. In fact, she was considered a skate of purest ray serene. This time, though, a battery must have been applied, or else a bucket of whisky must have been given her, for she went to the fore and stayed there to the end. The ticket paid $550, being about the only one sold on the mare. After that Maggie May sunk into the slough of skatehood. As far as that was concerned, it was her first and only win. And yet it has been said there's no such thing as luck and nothing in a name.

When Jim Gore came in bleeding behind Montrose in the Kentucky Derby of 1887, old man West's eyes were full of tears, for he believed the magnificent son of Hindoo and Katie was lost to the turf forever. Had Jim Gore "stood up" in his work that Derby would have been a mere gallop for him. Mr. West never expected to see the colt face the starter again. Henry Simons, well known in trotting horse circles at that time, came up just as Fitzpatrick had dismounted and Gore was limping toward the stable. "I believe you could get some more good races out of him," said Simons to the despondent old trainer, "if you would put trotting horse boots on him. I tell you they're good things." "I don't believe he'll ever be able to race again," said Mr. West, "but if you think those boots might do some good I'll try 'em." It was done, and Jim Gore won the rich Clark Stakes less than a week thereafter, and one or two other good events ere his weak leg gave way entirely.

Talk about your big "killings" on the turf, I tell you the stable boys never reaped such a harvest in their lives as they did the first time Major B. G. Thomas' May Lady ever won a race. It was at Louisville. The odds were 80 to 1 in almost every book, and every little coon that could dig up a dollar to put on that filly did so. If the "tip" did get out on her, the big odds scared people off, and outside of the rubbers, jockeys and stable boys, there was little "nibbling." Once in the homestretch, the race was never in doubt, and May Lady won by about two lengths rather easily. As she passed under the wire a perfect shower of hats fell on the track. The colored "gemman" of talent were rich for once in their lives, and hats cut no figure. The game wherein they cry "Come a seven, my honey!" "Fo' dollahs I 'leven befo' you seven!" "Now I got you!" etc., was lively for many days thereafter.

From every stock farm good reports reach us of the excellent appearance of stallions, mare, colts and fillies. The majority of the foals dropped so far are fillies; this is also good news.

The fine stallion Boodle, 2:27¾, that is at San Jose, is doing remarkably well. From his royal breeding, fine appearance and record he should become one of the best sires ever brought to this State.

Dan McCarty has traded a number of brood mares to E. Williams of Reno, Nev., for Our Dick, pacer, 2:17, and Our Jack, 2:30, trotter. Their horses are full brothers and by Gibraltar, 2:22½.

There was more truth than "poetry" about that offer of $125,000 for Advertiser, 2:16, after all. The Electioneer-Wilkes stallion must be considered "some pumpkins" by Senator Stanford, or this pricely amount would not have been refused.

At their annual meeting held at Des Moines recently, the Iowa horse breeders adopted a resolution asking the State Agricultural Society to have a veterinary surgeon examine and pass up on all horses entered for competition on the State Fair grounds.

The Macdonough string of six youngsters were among the first arrivals at Bay District track. From this time forth we can look for the horses of the young turfman to have a good deal to say about the landing of the stakes and purses on California tracks.

For many years Mr. Talbot drove a small chestnut mare, now eighteen years of age, over the road. He bred her last year to Mount Hood, 2:22¾, and last week she dropped a filly that is perfect as a picture. As this is her first foal, she is extremely jealous of it.

The old gray mare Lady Blanchard, 2:26½, that got her record nearly twenty years ago at Sacramento, is full of tret as a two-year-old, as she moves along after her filly by Waldstein, 2:25½, through the luxuriant grass in Mr. Ira Pierce's field near Santa Rosa.

Millard Sanders and his brother are "working like beavers" early and late preparing the string of youngsters at the Valensin farm for the Eastern circuit. These two trainers work intelligently and carefully, and their success in handling colts can be attributed to these excellent qualities.

The pedigree of McDoel, 2:15½, has been traced by a correspondent, and now reads something like this: Sired by the Waters Horse, first dam a dark brown mare, second dam a dun mare sired by a dun horse. It will be seen that McDoel is bred in the dun, which is good, if not so good as purple.

Among the improvements decided on for the kite track at Independence is an amphitheater to be 250 feet long, capable of seating 10,000 people, and to cost $25,000. It will be constructed in the latest modern style, provided with handsome cafes, and will be seated throughout with opera chairs.

Sidney, 2:19¾, foaled in 1881, has eighteen in the 2:30 list. He is, by the tables printed, the greatest sire of his age in the world. What will his list be ten years from now, if he is to be bred regularly to the class of mares that are now at the Valensin farm, is a question that is not difficult to answer.

The popular driver and conditioner of horses, Richard Havey, left for Sacramento last Tuesday, whither he goes to establish a public training stable. Havey has hosts of friends who wish him all the success possible, and we can expect to see "Dick" with a number of good ones on the circuit this season.

A "hoss" dealer who is business all through says: "Business an' sentiment should allus be kept separate. When you buy a horse for $50, dat's business. When you find he is a kicker an' a biter and no good, an' a preacher offers you $60 for him, dat's sentiment, an' you should let him go with rapid suddenness."

The Blood Horse Association did a good day's work last Monday when it secured James B. Ferguson as starter, Theodore Winters, of Nevada, as presiding judge. We now expect to see racing in California receive such an impetus that in a short time 7,000 people to witness a day's sport will be a common occurrence.

Cecilian is the grandest-looking son of Electioneer that has ever been seen in the East, says the American Sportsman. He has size, substance, style and finish combined with a wealth of good sense, while he is clothed in a rich bay color that dazzles your eyes in the sunlight. As for his racing qualities, the public will see later on.

The first number of the Horse Herald of Bloomington, Ill., has arrived. It is a typographically neat, well-printed, finely-illustrated paper, devoted to the trotting horse, is well-edited, and launches forth on the sea of equine literature in a very creditable manner all around. As a supplement there appears cuts, covering two pages, of Arion, Bell Bird, Fron-Fron, Fausta and the master reinsmen, Charles Marvin and Millard Sanders. The picture of the fine pear-shaped track at Bloomington adorns the initial page. If the Horse Herald keeps up its good work it will doubtless be well supported, for it is printed in a good "horse country."

The Louisville Jockey Club will abandon Churchill Downs, its historic race track. The club's lease has expired, and when an attempt was made to buy the grounds its owner named a price $25,000 more than the club is willing to pay, and as a syndicate has offered to donate 100 acres, a new track will be built.

A special dispatch from Butte, Mont., says: It is estimated that Marcus Daly's losses of colts at the Bitter Root Stock Farm for the season will aggregate $100,000. Five-sixths of the colts foaled have died immediately after birth. The best veterinary surgeons are unable to arrive at the cause, but consider it to be an epidemic.

In walking through Santa Rosa a visitor is astonished to see the number of extraordinary good-looking horses on the streets there, whether they are attached to buggies, trucks or business wagons; every steed shows quality. Surely the people in the City of Roses are entitled to the name of "all being excellent judges of horseflesh."

The two-year-old colt, Pinewood, by Artemas, that got a pacing record last season, in his yearling form, of 2:31¾, was sold during the late Lackey sale at Cambridge City, Ind., to G. W. Dungan, of Niles Mich., for $3,950. The pacing mare, Fedora, 2:15, by Tom Brown, Jr., was sold at the same sale to H. G. Wendt, of Chicago, for $2,250.

At this auction will be offered some of the best trotting stock ever placed under the hammer in California, and lovers of first-class trotters cannot afford to miss this sale.

Baronstein 6149, that splendid son of Baron Wilkes 4758 and Steinette, by Steinway 1808, has his book for 1892 nearly filled. It contains the names of fifteen mares with records of 2:30 or better. Viola Clay 2:24¼ has already received his embraces, as has the three-year-old filly Lasca, by Stamboul 2:11, out of a Guy Wilkes 2:15½ mare.

Silas Skinner never looked or felt better than at present. If no accident befall him what a race he will give some of our trotters in the free-for-all this year! His progeny are like him—stylish, game and natural trotters. John McCord, of Napa, has a Silas Skinner youngster that can trot fast enough to make a running horse exert himself.

Mount Hood 12,040, record 2:22¾, is looking splendid; he has filled out wonderfully since he was on the turf. His colts and fillies all bear a great resemblance to him in color and conformation. One of them, a colt called Tyhee Hood, has been given enough exercise and shown enough speed to warrant his owner giving him to a trainer this fall.

The promising colt Argyle, three years old, by Enquirer, dam Colossa, and therefore brother to Inspector B. and Bella B., owned by P. J. Dwyer and Son, wrenched his back in his stall at Gravesend on March 16th, and is lame in consequence. It is to be hoped that this colt will recover in time to be trained for the spring meeting, as he is a good race horse if looks count for anything.

F. P. Morton, of Marshfield, Or., has purchased of B. C. Holly, Flosden, Cal., the yearling colt Red Oak, by Redwood, 2:21¼ (son of Anteeo and Lou Milton), dam Victress, by Victor Patchen 1607; second dam by Echo 462. The youngster was shipped by steamer to Coos county, and should prove a most valuable addition to the trotting-horse interests of that part of Oregon.

The Roy Wilkes case was decided at Chicago on March 24th against the owner, L. A. Davies. The jury found for the defendant, the Kentucky Trotting Association. Davies sued for $500 won at Lexington, which was held back to set off a fine. Davies was defeated by the race-horse tribunal before he appealed to the courts. He has now prayed an appeal to the Appellate Courts.

Horse interests are very lively at Pleasanton. Orrin Hickok, John Williams, Geo. Starr and a number of other trainers are working their strings of horses on the fast track at Salisbury's. A number of horsemen were there last Sunday, and although the day was cold and disagreeable, every one present found that the day was well spent looking at the various trotters and pacers stabled there.

A match at five-eighths of a mile has been made between W. O'B. Macdonough's two-year-old Friar Tuck colt and Sidney Ashe's Ghost Dance, same age, by Jocko-Minuet. The stakes are $250 a side, and the race will come off some time during the spring meeting of the Blood Horse Association. The youngsters are untried-in-public, but as it has been whispered that they are "chain-lightning," a good struggle is expected.

The Electioneer gelding Express, 2:21, dam Esther, a thoroughbred daughter of Express, now the property of Michael F. Dwyer, of New York, was injured recently and cannot live. While rolling in the paddock two weeks ago, Express punctured the hock joint of the right hind leg, thus causing synovitis. The leg is very much inflamed, and the discharge of the synovial fluid is constant. The poor brute is in slings and is suffering untold agony.

Instead of being harmful, work will almost invariably be beneficial to the broodmare up to the day of foaling. It is quite often positively injurious to the mare to be allowed to "lay off" a week or so before foaling time, mainly for the reason that being awkward and unwieldy she prefers to stand around in corners and will not take sufficient exercise. Moderate work such as she has been accustomed to very seldom has an injurious effect.

One of the best and most pleasant ways of getting a good road horse is to buy a well-bred and well-broken colt, and bring him up carefully. Of course, one must buy where they will get treated fairly, and must remember that everything in horseflesh is subject to accidents; but there is no safer way than to purchase a young horse that has been well broken and gaited and has never been injured from abuse or over-driving.

Dave McLaughlin, "Happy Dave," who used to drive a six-horse stage to San Jose over the old toll road many years ago, has been for the past fourteen years conductor on the Donahue line. He looks as strong and hearty as when he used to handle the ribbons over the fractious mustangs. Whenever an old familiar face is seen, how his eye sparkles as he recalls the scenes and incidents of his early career away back in the fifties. Every one in Sonoma is well acquainted with him.

Richards & Murray have issued cards for their handsome young stallion Diablo. He is sired by Chas. Derby, 2:20, out of Bertha (sister to Bayard Wilkes, 2:23½), by Alcantara, 2:23; second dam Blandina (one of the foremost broodmares in the world), by Mambrino Chief 11; third dam the Burch Mare (dam of Rosalind, 2:21½, and Donald, 2:27). Diablo is one of the most symmetically-built colts in the country. He is only three years of age, and will be trained this fall.

A. J. Hook, of Paris, Ky., has sold to A. H. Moore, of Colmar, Pa., the sensational three-year-old filly Annorean, 2:26½. She is by Cyclone, dam by Twilight, and was the most remarkable trotting two-year-old ever known. Last year she won nine races out of thirteen and was second in the others. She also made her record in a race. The proposed match between this filly, Ralph Wilkes and Chimes Girl stands. The price paid has not transpired, but it is certain she cost a large sum.

A. T. Hatch, the well-known horseman and great fruit-grower, has reason to be proud of a young filly that made its appearance at Pleasanton last week; she is a handsome bay, sired by Guide, 2:16½, out of Stella, by Stamboul, 2:11; second dam Lady Fay, by Modoc Chief (thoroughbred). Mr. Hatch had another little filly appear in this world of ours recently which he also esteems very highly. She is by Simmocolon, 2:19, out of Lady Gamble, by Steinway; second dam the Tiffany mare.

J. C. Long, of Bradford, Pa., is in Columbia, Tenn., with six head of good ones from the Keystone State. He wants to be ready for the spring circuit. He has Marvineer, by Electioneer, dam by A. W. Richmond; Euber (4), by Eros 2074, dam by Madrid; Emma Wilkes (3), by Hector Wilkes; dam by Alexander Sherman; Lucy Wilson, by John Williams, by Happy Medium; three-year-old filly by Sunolo, dam by Index, and a four-year-old mare by Dictatum. He is at W. C. Jones' new kite track.

Arion, 2:10¾, can be registered under his famous name after all, for there was no rule against it. The rule in question read: "Any horse, mare or gelding which has started or obtained a record in a race and is eligible to registration may be registered by the name under which said start was made or record obtained, if such race shall have occured before January 1, 1892; but no mare foaled after January 1, 1890, shall be registered under a name by which another animal has been registered, except as above provided."

A recent conversation at the Phœnix Hotel, Lexington Ky., between John Madden, who is a staunch admirer of the great colt Monbars, 2:16½, and J. C. Lineman, of Lima, O., has resulted in a wager being laid between them concerning the son of Eagle Bird 2:21 and Lady Maud 2:18¾. The amount, $500 a side, has been posted in the hands of W. L. Simmons, the owner of Eagle Bird, the bet being that Monbars will this year obtain a three-year-old mark of 2:14¼ or better, Madden having the affirmative side of the wager.

L. A. Richards, of Grayson, writes that Elector never looked or felt better than at present. The class of mares that have been sent to him this year will do much, through their produce, of verifying the statements made in this journal regarding the merits of this stallion. It seems that every colt and filly sired by him can trot; if he inherits any of the gameness of Gilberta, his dam, and there is no reason why he does not, he should transmit quality and gameness enough to make trotters that will lower Fanny Witherspoon's two-mile record.

Ed. Corrigan's two-year-old chestnut colt Thrifty, by Spendthrift, out of Modesty, died at Mobile, Ala., on March 19, of intestinal stragulation and rupture, complicated with heart disease. Thrifty was one of the best yearlings in Corrigan's stable last fall, and as a two-year-old was the pride of the string. He was the heaviest engaged of all Corrigan's two-year-olds, being entered in all the prominent events for the coming season. He was also an entry in all the fixed events for three-year-olds next fall, as well as the World's Fair Derby of 1893 at Washington Park, Chicago, worth $60,000 to the winner. Mr. Corrigan would not have taken $20,000 for Thrifty, and regrets his loss very much.

On the 23rd inst. F. L. Duncan, of Chico, met with a very serious accident while out on the road exercising his colt, Woodburn Wilkes. A couple of dogs made a dash at the colt, scaring him. He broke and ran, throwing Duncan out of the cart, lacerating his face badly; breaking his under jaw, and fracturing his skull in two places, while his shoulder and hips were badly bruised. Mr. Duncan did not free himself from the cart at once, was dragged some distance and was picked up and carried home unconscious. It was some time before he gained consciousness. Dr. O. Stansbury was immediately called, and treated him with the best of his excellent skill and judgment, and has been in attendance upon him since. He is doing as well as can be expected.

The Southern California Circuit officials held a meeting on March 26th, at which the following counties were represented: San Diego, Orange, San Bernardino, Los Angeles and Ventura. The dates for holding the fall meeting were fixed as follows: San Luis Obispo, commencing August 9th; North Santa Barbara, at Santa Maria, August 16th; South Santa Barbara, at Santa Barbara, August 23d; Ventura, at Hueneme, August 30th; San Diego, September 20th; Orange, at Santa Ana, August 27th; San Bernardino, October 4th, and Los Angeles to be set later. The following classes were recommended to all the districts to adopt: Trotting, 3:00, 2:35, 2:27 and 2:22; trotting and pacing, 2:18; pacing, 2:40. Entries to close July 25th. The prospects for all the districts look promising. Good purses will be given, and successful meetings are sure to result.

Watsonville will have a first-class race track. Articles of incorporation have been prepared by the officials of the new association, and the following gentlemen were elected at a recent meeting held in the City Hall: John T. Porter, president; T. J. Horgan, secretary; J. J. Morey, treasurer; directors, P. J. Thompson, C. H. Willoughby, D. A. McEwen, John T. Porter, H. C. Struve, T. J. Horgan, A. B. Chalmers and J. W. Linscott. The association will be known as the Lakeview Driving Park Association of Watsonville. The capital stock was fixed at $10,000, divided into 500 shares at $20 per share. The stock has all been subscribed for, and there will be no trouble about increasing the amount of the capital stock. Several tracks of land are under consideration, but the sentiment among the majority seems to be in favor of a five-year-lease, with privilege of purchasing at the end of that time.

For some reason unknown Madam Baldwin (by The Moor, dam by Ben Lippencott) was left out of the great Broodmare Table of the new Year Book. She was the dam of Bay Rose, 2:20½ (Pierce Bros.' fine Sultan stallion) and Pasha (his full brother), sire of Moro, 2:27. Another California mare entitled to a place on this roll of honor that was left out was Buttermilk Sal, dam of St. Helena, 2:27½, and Gladiator 8336, he sire of two in the list and the dam of Almont Patchen, 2:15, pacing. This would make a total of 102 California mares in the great Broodmare Table.

Kentucky horsemen and qualified veterinarians are now clamoring for protection from quack veterinarirns by means of a stringent law to be passed by the State Legislature. If our Kentucky brethren have as many boodlers endowed with ignorance as we had in our last legislature they shall not meet with much success. Every horseman who has been forced to call in a quack to attend his horses during the epidemic that raged here for the past six months wishes that the veterinarians had succeeded in passing a bill protecting the honorable profession. There are only a few States in the Union that have not passed laws protecting veterinarians. Why should they not have as much protection as physicians and lawyers every sensible horseman would like to know?

The Macdonough colors are beautiful, as well as attractive to the eye, consisting of light green jacket, orange sash, white sleeves and cap. May they be seen much oftener in the van than in the background, for their genial young owner deserves success. He believes in having nothing but the best and paying well for that which he gets. In three years' time the Macdonough colors will be known from New York to California through the superior quality of the progeny of St. Carlo, Suwarrow and Sinfax. W. O'B. Macdonough is getting together some of the best-bred producing thoroughbred matrons in America, and the union of royalty with royalty ought to result in the production of "crackajacks." All of the Menlo Stock Farm stallions were first-class race horses and fashionably bred as well.

C. S. Eltinge, Secretary of the Butte Racing Association, gave us a call the other day. He reports prospects good for a grand series of meetings in Montana. The jumps on the circuit are very small ones, as follows: The circuit opens at Deer Lodge on July 4th; to the next racing point, Dillon, it is 70 miles; Dillon to Anaconda, 60 miles; Anaconda to Butte, 20 miles; Butte to Helena, 80 miles; Helena to Great Falls, 90 miles. On the return trip there will be racing at Missoula, Mont. The programme of the circuit has been so arranged that all the racing points in Montana can be taken in in time to participate in the Spokane races, and wind up on the Washington and Oregon circuits. Rich purses are hung up all along the line, and everyone that has taken in this section with their horses are loud in praise of the people they met and the liberality of the Associations.

News comes from the Forbes Farm, near Boston, the home of Arion, Nancy Hanks and other celebrities in the trotting horse line, that the Onward mare Houri, 2:17, gave premature birth to a foal by Axtell, it coming twenty-one days ahead of time. This is a severe loss to the owner of the mare, as in addition to being a fast and game trotter herself and by so good a horse as Onward, Houri was out of a mare by Mambrino Patchen, so that in the matter of blood lines it would be difficult to improve her. Her record of 2:17 was made a couple of years ago over the Lexington track, when she was still owned by Col. Pepper and driven by George Hayes. It was a short time after this race that Houri was put up at auction and sold for $12,000, changing hands in a little while at a reported advance of $3,000 and becoming the property of Mr. Forbes, who left her in Doble's hands for a season in order that she might, if possible, reduce her record.

The colts by Caliph (son of Sultan and the Sproul mare, by The Moor) are, according to Oregon advices, good-lookers and fast. Dr. M. W. Hicks, we are told, once owned Caliph and the Sproul mare. He traded L. J. Rose, of Los Angeles, Posey and Viola, daughters of Flaxtail 8132, for the Sproul mare and Madam Baldwin, dam of Bay Rose, 2:20½, and Pasha, sire af Moro, 2:27. The Rose mares were in foal at the time, and the Sproul mare was carrying Caliph. These matrons all turned out good producers. Posey is the dam of Murtha, 2:25½ at four years, by Stamboul; Viola is the dam of Sacramento Girl, 2:30, by Alcazar, while Madam Baldwin should be in the great Broodmare Table as the dam of Bay Rose, 2:20½, and Pasha, sire of Moro, 2:27. The Sproul mare is now owned by A. H. Cohen, of Alameda, and is the dam of a filly called Airy, by Sterling, that is almost certain to trot below 2:30 this season, we are informed. It looks as if that trade was a pretty even one all around.

The following is Senator Stanford's reply to the proposition made some days ago by C. W. Williams, Secretary of the Independence Driving Park Association, offering a purse of $10,000, without entrance, for a race between Allerton and Palo Alto, to be trotted during the second week of the August races at Independence: "United States Senate, Washington, March 17.—C. W. Williams, Independence, Iowa:—Dear Sir: Your telegram of the 15th inst. was duly received. Palo Alto's service will be very extensive this season, and I have not thought of sending him East, but I am very much tempted to give him the honor of trotting against your great horse. At present, however, I can not determine. If he is in good condition I hope to start him to lower his record, which he ought to do by a couple of seconds. Yours truly, Leland Stanford." It is stated that this letter does not meet Mr. Williams' expectations, as he wants to know what to depend upon, and will demand a positive answer.

This is the way an English turf writer looks at the American trainer: "Trainers congregate in knots on the track in the early morning while their horses are at exercise, gossip, chaff, and above all, time the horses of others. They make it their business to know what other horses can do rather than what their own can accomplish. They will tell you what your horses have done and make little secret about their own. If any fast time has been made the secret is in possession of everyone in about half an hour, but it is often soon forgotten. An English trainer could throw dust in the eyes of the army of touts with the greatest ease, because he knows that seven pounds makes three lengths and three lengths a second. Thus, with fourteen pounds extra, he might have done a splendid trial and the touts would be none the wiser, and would pronounce the horse to be a bad one. Trainers only feed three times a day in Yankee land. They themselves eat only three times a day. Why should horses require to be fed oftener?"

Articles of agreement between H. L. Nelson and S. G. Jackson have been signed, whereby they agree to run a horse race at Kerrville, Texas, on April 6, 444 yards, for the following stakes: Three hundred head of stock cattle, twenty head of saddle horses, 117½ acres of land and $4,000 cash each side. Nelson's horse is the iron gray stallion Grayback, five years old; Jackson's horse Jack, a gelding, dark brown, eight years old. A written contract has been entered into whereby each party has put up a forfeit of 200 head of cattle. The riders have not yet been selected, but neither is to weigh over 140 pounds. The gentlemen making the race are among the most prominent farmers and stockmen of Kerr County.

Wilfred Page has a colt that will be valuable on some stock farm, for he is bred in the purple. Mr. Page says he will dispose of him at a reasonable figure, as he has a number of others coming on. He is a beautiful bay, foaled 1891, sired by Eclectic (brother to Arion, 2:10¾), by Electioneer, dam Leoline, by Clovis 4909; second dam Leah (sister to the dam of Woodbrino, 2:25½), by Woodford Mambrino; third dam Maud (dam of King Jim, 2:20½, Attorney, sire of six in 2:30 list), by Abdallah 15; fourth dam, daughter of Robert Bruce, etc. Clovis is by Sultan, 2.24, out of Sweetbriar, by Thorndale; second dam Ulster Queen (dam of Volmer, 2:24½), by Hambletonian 10; third dam by Thomas Jefferson, son of Mambrino Paymaster Jr. He is a fine-looker, pure-gaited and perfect in conformation.

Frederick Bonner, son of Robert Bonner says Sunol will be sent to Marvin at Meadville as soon as spring opens, who will fit for her work. "Although she has a wonderful flight of speed for a young mare," said he, "I do not look upon her yet as the queen of the turf. Maud S. made her mark of 2:08¾ over the Cleveland track, and until Sunol does as well over the same course I shall call Maud S. the queen. To be sure Sunol was considerably younger than Maud S. when she attained her fast mark and is undoubtedly one of the greatest trotters ever produced. She will be given an opportunity to lower her record this year on both a kite-track and an ordinary track, and we have every reason, barring accidents, to believe that she can do it. Some time during the year she will undoubtedly be started at Cleveland to beat 2:08¾ and she may possibly start at Terre Haute and other fast tracks. Maud S. is at Tarrytown, N. Y., and never looked finer. She is 18 years old, and her trotting days are over.

The gallopers are coming in fast at Bay District track, and the outlook now is that there will not be half enough room for the accommodation of the horses at the coming Blood Horse meeting. Dan McCarty alone has twenty-five thoroughcreds, Porter Ashe ten, W. O'B. Macdonough about a dozen, Palo Alto will send up six or seven, John Appleby and Sidney Ashe, four; W. L. Appleby, four; Thomas Fisher, seven; J. W. Donathan, four; John Reavy, two; Ira Ramsdell, five; Elmwood Stable, five; Dan Dennison perhaps half a dozen; L. J. Rose, ten or eleven; Dickey & Thomas, four or five; E. Williams, three; Ocean View Stable, three; William Murry, six or seven; George Kennedy, three or four; W. O. Sanborn, four; Suisun Stables, six or seven; Charles Kerr, six or seven; Murphy Bros., two; Owens Bros., probably eight; E. F. Fallon, four; C. S. Sargent, three or four; Wilber F. Smith, four or five; outside stables from which we have no advices, probably 25 more. Taking the outside figures, there will be at the coming meeting 200 horses to participate in the various events.

From present indications it now appears as though Oakland would lose its only race track, and such surely will be the case unless some enterprising men take the matter in charge, says the Oakland Times. The lease, which is held by Mr. Laven, expires on the 1st of May, and if before that time some satisfactory arrangements are not made, in all probabilities the Oakland race track will be no more. Judge Mee, the owner of the property, has signified his willingness to spend any sum of money asked up to $25,000 in renovating the stands and in building a hotel or club houses, providing responsible parties lease the grounds and guarantee him a sufficient income on the money expended. The members of the Golden Gate Fair Association are interested in keeping up the track and have negotiated with Judge Mee with a view of leasing it. The Judge, however, does not wish to lease the grounds to any association unless the members will be individually responsible. This the association does not care to do, but as yet nothing is definitely decided. In the meantime the Italian gardeners who own a vegetable garden adjoining the track are making overtures to Judge Mee in the hopes of his leasing the place to them, so that they may transform the grounds into a garden.

Among the progressive horsemen in this city, perhaps none have achieved greater success than Lot D. Slocum. Some twenty-seven years ago he started a little livery stable on Sutter street, and by close application to business and attention to the wants of his patrons in furnishing the best of everything, prosperity shed a halo o'er his work, for the beautiful edifice, erected on the site where the old frame building stood, is an evidence of his success. In all its appointments it is first-class, and so far as safety, light and room are concerned, it takes first rank among the leading stables in this metropolis. It is not only as an owner of a splendid livery stable that Mr. Slocum is so well known, but also for the reputation he has for being a natural horseman, for he has shown in the past that he knows how to select a good one. Some years ago he visited Palo Alto and purchased a brown gelding by Electioneer, which was afterwards known as one of the gamest campaigners ever bred on this Coast; he was called Lot Slocum, and his record, 2:17½, was made in a hard race. This was not the only horse he owned, for he always bred a few good mares that he considered would prove valuable matrons. In this his judgment again proved correct, for he bred a mare called Ruth Ann, by Bell Alta, to Nutwood, 2:18¾, and got Luella; he then bred her to Anteeo, 2:16½, and every colt and filly she had by this son of Electioneer proved fast, notably the three-year-old filly, Myrtle, that beat the talent and Vida Wilkes at Sacramento last fall, and got a record of 2:19½. The sum of $10,000 has been refused for her. A sister to this flying one is now in Alabama, and her owner claims that 2:20 will not stop her this fall. A full brother is at present at Mr. Slocum's stable, which, so far as appearance and gait go, bids fair to be another "twenty" performer. He is called Don Lot, and is a horse of good size, a beautiful shade of bay in color. He is in conformation a racehorse, in disposition a lamb, and in courage a lion. Mr. Slocum is bound to give this fine young stallion a show to grow and develop, and in this determination he is making no mistake, for he will have a racehorse on the turf when other "phenoms" of his age will be in the infirmary. Mr. Slocum has a black Dexter Prince out of Luella that is pronounced one of the best lookers in the country.

THE GUN.

The Golden Gate.

BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.

"Make way! make way!" from the ocean wide,
Was heard the voice of its restless tide,
As the dashing waves, with ceaseless roar,
Knocked at the gates of the rocky shore

"Give back, we pray, and let us in,
Where we may rest from the ocean's din
The toil of ages has been our fate
One hour of slumber to compensate"

Thus the wild waves plead with sob and moan,
'Til they touched the heart of the cold, gray stone,
And the shore was moved by the ocean's fate,
And unlocked the bars of the Golden Gate;

And the waves rushed in, and, since that day,
Have found a haven within the bay,
Where the voice of children and breath of flowers,
Have rendered sweet their restful hours.

"Make way! make way!" comes another cry,
Filling the earth and the voiceless sky
From that ocean strange whose billows be
The troubled souls of humanity

With their wistful pleadings o'er and o'er,
They knock at the gates of a voiceless shore;
The boundless shores of their narrow sea,
Unknown, unmeasured eternity!

Though the shores be voiceless and tempests rage,
Hope sends a gleam for an anchorage,
And the tired souls gather of strength to wait,
'Til the bars shall drop from the Pearly Gate

The Country Club.

The Country Club met at Oakland Shooting Park on Saturday last for the purpose of engaging in the second monthly match of the club for this season. A number of gentlemen took the eleven o'clock boat and inaugurated the sport of the day long before the main body of sportsmen arrived. The day was fine, but in the morning a fresh wind was blowing smartly across the traps from left to right, which rendered the conditions at the trap much more unfavorable for the making of good scores then than at any subsequent hour of the day. As a result, the Messrs. A. C. and W. B. Tubbs, Tallant and King found that the birds were too vigorous to be grassed by them in anything like their usual form. The twisting driv ers and the delusive right-quarter rising birds proved too much for the sportsmen, and the way they broke the records of these gentlemen was a matter of surprise not only to them but also to all their friends.

The entire record of the day was full of surprises. The highest score, the lowest and percolating all the way from the one to the other was the element of surprise. This condition is manifest at every shoot at the trap. "It has ever been a matter of surprise to me," said one of the best shots on this coast to the writer recently, "why I should fail to kill one hundred birds straight with first barrel," adding, "an escaping bird is always a matter of surprise to me."

It is amusing to listen to the suggestions and comment heard among the sportsmen at the trap in explanation of how the goose-eggs came their way. Each one's well of resourses is deep and filled with an inexhaustible supply of excuses which are varied, interesting, plausible and amusing.

Mr. George Crocker, shooting a 14-guage gun, won the honors of the day by allowing only one bird to escape out of his first dozen fired at. Mr. Crocker shoots with his gun held down at his side, making a full arm movement in bringing it to firing position. His escaping bird was a right-quarter incomer. Shooting at a reduced distance an incoming bird becomes a very hard bird to hit if the shot be in the least delayed.

Messrs. J. M. Adams, R. H. Sprague and Edward Donohoe scored ten birds each and were the only ones in the second class. Mr. Adams is shooting well this season, his record thus far being very much superior to that made last year. Three of his kills during this match were remarkable, the birds being exceptionally swift and being struck at very long range, falling just within the boundary.

Mr. Sprague is surprising himself and friends by the effective manner in which he shoots his new gun, the stock of which, in twist and crook, suggests that it must have been patterned after some one of the recent California Assemblymen's records. He shoots with his left eye, holding gun at right shoulder, but he centers his birds and kills them very quick.

Mr. Edward Donohoe is one of the most graceful and effective shots of the club. Men take positions at the trap suggestive of every emotion of the human heart—from Ajax defying the lightning to that of the leopard crouching for the final spring upon its prey. Mr. Donohoe's position is the subject of much favorable comment from the onlookers.

Mr. Ramon E. Wilson was the only man in the club scoring nine birds, killing all save one by the use of his first barrel. His escaping birds were all very hard ones to kill, and few shots in the club could have done better than let them escape.

SUMMARY.

OAKLAND SHOOTING PARK, March 26, 1892. The Country Club's second regular match of the season for the club's regular trophies and prizes. Mr. F. R. Webster, President; Mr. J. M. Quay, Secretary; C. W. Kyle, Referee. The score:

A six-bird match, seventeen entries, terminated as follows:

A. C. Tubbs	2	0	1	1	1	2—5
W. B. Tubbs	2	2	1	0	2	2—5
F. W. Tallant	1	0	2	1	2	2—5

F. R. Webster	1	0	0	0	0	0—1
J. A. Donohoe	1	0	0	0	0	0—1
Alex. Hamilton	0	1	0	0	0	0—1

In a subsequent pool of the same nature Wooster, Kittle, Adams, W. B. Tubbs, Atherton, Woodward and Wilson tied for first honors on a score of five birds each. In the next Sprague stood alone with a clean score, A. C. Tubbs and Atherton forming the next tie with five each.

A "freeze-out" was won by Adams on three kills. In the next Webster and W. B. Tubbs divided on second bird. Sprague, A. C. Tubbs, Tallant, Kittle and W. B. Tubbs next divided on three kills each because of lack of birds. This wound up the sport for the day.

The Selby Medal Contest.

On the first of the week the second contest for the Selby medal took place at Oakland Shooting Park. There was a goodly number of the best shots in the country in attendance and the day was passed pleasantly. The birds were only an average lot, scarcely that, but some of them, in fact a number were as lively as one could wish to see, enough of them to make the records of the gentlemen contesting look much like a sieve; although a very large number of birds fell dead out of bounds. The score:

Crittenden Robinson	2	2	1	*	2	1	1	4	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	2	2	2	1	2— 8

Delmas	0	1	*	1	2	1	0	2	0	*	1	1	2	w
Smith	2	*	2	1	*	*	0	1	0	0	w

This make the third time that Mr. Robinson has won this medal and has but one more time to win it to become the absolute owner of it. This he will have an opportunity to do on Sunday April 24th at the Oakland track as it will be then contested for again.

Mr. Robinson shot in excellent form in this and the subsequent pool events of the day, losing his fourth bird and this fell dead out of bounds. He lost but two birds during the day's shoot killing fifty-four birds out of fifty-six, the whole number fired at.

In a six-bird match following the above match, the score stood:

Robinson	2	1	1	1	1	1—6
"Lake"	1	1	1	1	1	1—6
Haas	1	0	2	2	1	2—5
"Frank"	2	2	1	0	2	2—5

Another pool resulted as follows:

Robinson	1	2	1	1	1	1—6

"Jones"	0	1	0	2	2	2—4
Maskey	1	0	0			1
"James"	0					0

A large number of other pools were shot off, the sport continuing until late in the day when the birds were finally exhausted and the sport was brought to a close.

Sensible Remarks on Loading.

The following remarks by Mr. Charles E. Felton, in American Field are quoted with pleasure because of their sound practical ring. In speaking of the Budd Fulford contests in Chicago at the trap he says:

"The cartridges used by Mr. Fulford was so grossly overloaded and out of proportion to the caliber and weight of his gun, as to make it impossible to obtain respectable results. Strength of powder must be taken into consideration in relation to quantity. Eastern shooters, if we are to believe the reports of the press, have forgotten old muzzle-loading rules. Mr. Fulford has been around pigeon traps occasionally since a mere lad. He has seen without a doubt, many fast birds shot at, some superior to those shot at in this contest. He knows all about birds, and he should have known that 3¼ drams of Hazard's Electric, or Curtiss & Harvey's, or other high-grade black explosives, are sufficient to get the very best results obtainable in a 12-gauge gun weighing less than eight pounds. I never use exceeding three drams. The use of more not only injures the certainty of the aim, but also at times so scatters the shot as to be useless in the second barrel when the bird has reached a reasonable distance from the shooter. The quantity of nitro explosives, when substituted for black powder, should be governed solely by their comparative strength to the Hazard Electric or similar grade powders. Schultze powder probably, is the most uniform in strength of any of the nitros, and in quantity by measure is supposed to conform, nearly in strength to that of Hazard's Eclectric or the best makes of English powder. Next in uniformity and strength is the English E. C. Of the American E. C. I have no knowledge, but have prejudice against it, which may not be warranted. American wood powder I do not think uniform in strength. Its occasional seeming lack of strength is the excuse for the use of a larger quantity than is required of Schultze, while often its strength is equally great. Mr. Elliott in his last match at Chicago was out-ammunitioned by its use, his opponent using foreign nitros of less quantity and more uniform quality.

Mr. Fulford's gun was a 12-guage, Greener, weighing less than eight pounds; his cartridges were 3 or 3½ inch shells. He used as he stated 5½ drams of American Wood powder rammed; several wads, 1¼ ounces of shot with cardboard wad on top and the shell tightly crimped. This extraordinary load was a sufficient handicap to have beaten him, even were his contestant a less skillful man than Mr. Budd. This mistake made by Mr. Fulford in overloading his cartridges, is that which has caused the destruction of hundreds of guns on this side of the Atlantic, and it is a wonder that his did not yield to the excessive charges used.

Gentlemen buy fine English or other guns, overload them with nitro powders and do not obtain the results they desire. Stupidly they send them to some so-called expert reborer, who destroys the power to resist the strain of unreasonable charges. Result, destruction of gun. A gun when it leaves a first-class maker's hands, should never be rebored, but the quantity and strength of ammunition used should be that directed by the maker. It is simply veritable "stuff" for anyone to claim, that he can, by reboring, improve a gun's shooting qualities, without impairing the strength of the barrels. If a gun does not accomplish the result desired, only the maker should be permitted to meddle with the bore. Use the gun as the maker intended, with proper quantities of a uniform strength of explosives for charge of shot used, and very few, if any, guns will be injured, while better results, will be obtained than can possibly be by non-observance of these principles."

The State Sportsman's Association Doing Good.

The State Association recently had printed and distributed throughout the State, copies of the game and fish laws, with the latest amendments thereto. It is neatly printed on a card of convenient size to carry in one's pocket and is ready always for useful reference. They can be had by application to the Secretary, and will also be forwarded free of charge to any citizen of the State desiring one or more copies. As is well known, a knowledge of the law often very often prevents an infraction, and in no case or class of cases is ignorance so often pleaded, as in the game and fish laws, not only of our own, but every State. How clearly this is manifested one needs but take a trip into the country, in any direction, and enter into discussion with the average citizen he may meet perchance. The amount of knowledge upon the subject or rather the lack of it, is astonishing, and in fact, in many cases no such thing as a code of game laws is known to exist. A wide field of usefulness, in the dissemination of knowledge necessary to the observance of the law, is thus opened up before the association, and no effort is spared, nor will be, in an intelligent endeavor to educate the people throughout the State upon this subject of common interest to all alike. In very many instances the interior press have copied the laws in full, and we earnestly trust and ask the papers of the State generally, to follow so beneficial an example.

Col. R. A. Eddy, than whom no more thorough gentleman and sportsman does honor to the guild in any country, has been lying quite ill for ten days or more in his rooms at the Palace Hotel, with congestion of the lungs, which threatened for some time to develop into a serious case of pneumonia. We are sincerely glad, however, to be able to announce that the critical stage has been passed, and a rapidly convalescing one reached. The doctor informs him he can indulge in an outing within a week or so, which there is no earthly doubt will be availed of. Upon learning whom the winner of the Selby Trophy was on Sunday last, he immediately issued a challenge to him, and although the flesh was weak, the strength of spirit was unmistakeably made manifest, and it's the Pribiloff Islands to a weasel skin he'll answer at the score when his name is called on the 24th of April, the day set for the meeting. He wrested the medal from Crittenden Robinson and a large field of other competitors in February, on the unexceptional score of twenty straight kills, and was challenged by Mr. Robinson who succeeded in again getting it into his possession on Sunday last, and he in turn is now promptly challenged by Colonel Eddy as above stated. We predict an interesting meeting.

On Sunday, April 10th, at Alameda Point, the Lincoln Gun Club will hold a grand tournament. The shooting at inanimate targets has been very materially advanced at this point by this, the champion inanimate target organization of the west. The shooting will commence at 10 o'clock A. M., and will continue during the entire day. A large number of events have been provided so that all may choose to suit themselves as to entrance. The sole object of the tournament is to foster a closer bond of feeling between sportsmen interested in such events. The attendance will doubtless be quite large, and a splendid season of sport is assured. Everbody welcome and all sportsmen are cordially invited to attend and participate in the events of the occasion.

It is clearly the duty of all the clubs to join the State Association, and to join at once. It is true that individual membership is admissable, but only so in order to admit into the association sportsmen and citizens generally throughout the country where no clubs exist. The efforts of the association in conserving and fostering those interests dear to the heart of every true lover of sports by flood and field, are for the common benefit, and we believe and have received abundant encouragement in the belief that every club in the State will, ere long, have been strengthened by allying itself with the parent organization.

If a man goes to the score; shoots his first barrel at a bird in the air and it lights within bounds and on attempting to shoot the bird on the ground the second barrel proves a misfire what should be the decision of referee? Should the decision "No bird" be given at once or should the shooter be allowed his three minutes in which to attempt to retrieve the bird, and in case of the bird escaping, should the decision be "No bird?" Certainly the latter. The shooter is clearly entitled to take the full advantage of the effect of each of his shots. If he fail to retrieve the bird from the effect of his first fire he should have another bird, subject to rule of blank cartridge in first barrel.

The shooting contingent from the neighboring city of San Jose was well represented at the Selby Medal contest on the first of the week.

A number of the sportsmen from that city handle the gun in first class shape and are a pleasant party of gentlemen to meet. We trust that they may find it convenient to come up frequently during the season and participate in the shooting events at Oakland Shooting Park. The local clubs are always glad to receive and entertain visitors.

We were very sorry that sickness prevented Mr. R. A. Eddy from being present and participating in the last contest for the Selby Medal, he being the holder of it and the challenged party in this last event.

Salmon and Trout of the Pacific Coast.

[By Dr. David Starr Jordan.]

Of all the families of fishes, the one most interesting from almost every point of view is that of the Salmonidæ, the Salmon family. As now understood, it is not one of the largest families, as it comprises less than a hundred species; but in beauty, activity, gaminess, quality as food, and even in size of individuals, different members of the group stand easily with the first among fishes.

The Salmonidæ are found only in the North Temperate and Artic regions, and within this range they are everywhere almost equally abundant wherever suitable waters occur. Some of the species, especially the larger ones, are marine and anadromous, living and growing in the sea, and ascending fresh waters to spawn. Still others live in running brooks, entering lakes or the sea when occasion serves, but not habitually doing so. Still others are lake fishes, approaching the shore or entering brooks in the spawning season; at other times retiring to waters of considerable depth. Some of them are active, voracious, and gamy, while others are comparatively defenseless and will not take the hook.

All the Salmonidæ feed upon fish; the smaller ones upon worms, insects, and small fish; the larger forms on fishes and crustacea—whatever they can find. The eggs of the species are much larger than in fishes generally, and the ovaries are without special duct, the eggs falling into the cavity of the abdomen before they are excluded. The large size of the eggs, the fact that they do not stick together, and the ease with which they may be impregnated, render all the Salmonidæ peculiarly adapted for artificial culture.

Naturalists divide the Salmonidæ into nine genera: Coregonus, the White Fish; Prosopium, a little annual fish which is found in the waters of Japan, born in the spring, runs up the rivers in the summer, and dies in the following winter, only the young surviving; Brachymystax, a large and scarcely-known salmon-like fish in the waters of Siberia; Stenodus, the Inconnu, a large, weak-toothed salmon found in the Mackenzie River; Thymallus, the Grayling; Hucho, the Huchen, or Rothfisch of the River Danube, a large, voracious, pike-like salmon, which seems to be little known either to naturalists or to anglers; Oncorhynchus, the Pacific Coast salmon, or Quinnats; Salmo, the Salmon and Trout; and Salvelinus, the Charr, or Red-spotted Trout.

Of these, the various fishes commonly known as salmon and trout belong to the last three genera. The others need not be further mentioned in the present discussion. In order to get a better idea of the proper application of the vernacular names that are used in America, it is necessary to go back to Europe, the source from which these names have been drawn. First, we have a large fish, common in the salt waters of Northern Europe, spending most of its life near the shores in regions where the water is cold and clear, and ascending the rivers in the spring when the high water comes down from the mountains, going through rapids with great force, leaping cataracts, and finally casting its spawn on the gravelly bed of a small stream. This was known to the Latin writers as Salmo, the word coming from salio, which means "to leap," and in the different languages which are derived from the Latin having as its name some form of the word "salmon." The scientific name of this fish is Salmo salar.

Very similar to the salmon in all technical respects, like it having black spots over the surface of the body and rather large silvery scales, is a smaller fish which rarely descends to the sea, and makes its home in the rivers and lakes throughout Northern and Central Europe. This fish was known by the name of Fario to the old Latin writers, the most important of whom, in this regard, was Ansonius, who wrote feelingly and poetically of the fishes of the River Moselle. From the Latin word "Faro" comes the German name "forelle." This fish is the trout of all English writers, the trout of Izaak Walton, and its scientific name is Salmo fario.

Half way between the salmon and the trout there is a large trout which lives mostly in the estuaries of the rivers, sometimes mistaken for salmon, sometimes for trout, rarely ascending the river very far, and seldom venturing far into the sea. This is the Trutta of the Latin authors, from which the word "trout" originally comes, although, as it has happened, the word "fario" has become, in its various forms, the name of the trout in all the German* and Scandinavian countries, while derivatives of the word "trutta" have come to mean the same fish in the Latin† countries and with the English. The scientific name of this large fish, half salmon and half trout in appearance, altogether trout in fact, is Salmo trutta, and to this fish properly belongs the name of Salmon Trout.

There are thus in England, whence our names have come, three species of black-spotted silvery fishes of this family: (1) The salmon, largest of all and anadromous, that is, running up the rivers to spawn, and living in the sea; (2) the trout, living in the brooks and the lakes only; (3) the salmon trout which stands between the two. All three belong to the genus salmo, and the only difference of any importance between the salmon and the trout, so far as structure goes, lies in the fact that the salmon sheds the teeth on its vomer, that it, the middle part of the roof of its mouth, as it grows older, while in the trout these teeth are preserved throughout the life of the animal. Living in salt water and feeding on large fishes and crustacea, the salmon is the more vigorous, with coarser and more oily flesh, but this difference becomes of small importance as a matter of distinguishing species.

Besides these three, there is another and finer fish, found in the coldest and clearest lakes of the Alps and of Northern Europe, dark colored and spotted with bright red, the scales so small that they seem as mere impressions in the slimy skin, so that the average fisherman does not recognize their existence. This is a finer and more beautiful fish than any of the trout, and it is very much less abundant. This is known in England as the Charr, and on the Continent it has, in Germany, the name of Saibling or Salbling (both words from the low Latin name Salerlinus, which again is a sort of diminutive of Salmo—a little salmon); in France it is called the Ombre Chevalier, which in turn comes from the latin name umbla, given to the same fish in allusion to its dark colors and its love of shady places in the lakes and brooks. This charr differs from all the trout in various anatomical respects, the most notable of which is the entirely different form of its vomer, a form which could only be satisfactorily described by a series of comparative drawings. This character of the vomer distinguishes the genus Salvelinus, to which the Saibling belongs, its scientific name being Salvelinus alpinus.

Armed with these names of Salmon, Trout, Salmon Trout, and Charr, our ancestors came to America. The name "charr" was doubtless unfamiliar to most of them, for the charr is scarcely found in England except in the lake district of Cumberland, and for this reason, I suppose, it has never been in common language applied to any American fish.

Our ancestors found, running up the rivers of the Atlantic Coast, a large fish precisely like the salmon of Europe; in fact the very same thing, and so they naturally and correctly enough called it Salmon. In the fresh waters of New England and New York, in all the clear streams throughout the Alleghany region, and in the lakes of Canada and to the Northwest, our forefathers found a red-spotted, fine-scaled, dark-colored speckled beauty. Finding no real trout with black spots and large scales in the rivers, and having forgotten the name of "charr," they gave to this fish the name of Trout, or Speckled Trout, or Brook Trout, and in spite of the fact that in reality it is not a trout but a charr, the name of Brook Trout is likely to adhere forever to the Salvelinus fontinalis.

Real trout there are none on our Atlantic Coast, and Salmon Trout is likewise wanting, but the name Salmon Trout is often given to the brook trout, or charr, which has run out into the sea; and it is also often given to another charr, a very large, coarse species, in which the red spots have faded out to cream color, which is found in all the lakes, from Alaska to Maine, across the northern half of our continent. This is the Great Lake Trout (Salvelinus namaycush), and, except for its large size and comparative coarseness, it would never be mistaken either for trout or salmon. The name Salmon Trout is wholly inapplicable to it.

In the lakes of Greenland and the eastern part of British America, the European charr (Salvelinus alpinus) is as abundant as it is in Europe—a fact which has been only lately made manifest, and even yet there is some question whether some of these which are found in the lakes in New Hampshire have not some time or other been brought over and planted there from Europe.

In the lakes of Maine, and on to the north, there is still another charr, smaller and finer than the European one, the blue-black trout of the Rangley lakes, known as Salvelinus oquassa. Thus, instead of one of the salmon, salmon trout, trout and charr of Europe, we have in the Eastern States the same salmon, the same charr and three other charrs, but neither the trout nor the salmon trout.

In coming to the Pacific Coast, the settlers of California brought the names with them from the East, but found none of the fishes to which they had been accustomed. Salmon they found, similar in habits and in value as food, but many of them larger, finer and vastly more abundant than any of the salmon of Europe. California salmon differ from all the rest of the salmon family in the fact that the number of rays in the anal fin is from fourteen to twenty, while in all the salmon and trout on the other side of the Atlantic, this fin contains no more than nine or ten rays. The Pacific Coast salmon have also an increased number of branchiostegals, an increased number of gill-rakers, and a much larger number of pyloric coeca, or glands, about the stomach. They are, therefore, in strictness, not salmon at all, but something more intensely salmon than the salmon of Europe itself really is. They have, therefore, been placed in another genus known as Oncorhynchus. For the lack of any other common name they are always spoken of and will always be canned, as long as the canning industry lasts, under the name of Salmon. The Chinook name Quinnat was early applied to them, and if we feel the need of some other name to distinguish them from real salmon, we may call the Pacific Coast salmon Quinnat or Quinnat Salmon. These species all live in the ocean, ascend the rivers in the spring and summer, spawn in fresh water in the fall, the young, as soon as they are able to swim, floating tail foremost down the river and growing rapidly as soon as they reach the ocean and the peculiar ocean food. There are five species of these Quinnats, which will be described farther on.

Besides the salmon, the settlers of California found in the brooks an abundance of what they called trout. These are black-spotted, silver-scaled, and in every way closely resemble the trout of Europe, and are wholly unlike the charr, or so-called trout of Eastern States. The name trout by rights belongs to these fishes, and they are placed in the genus Salmo. The three species of trout found in the Pacific waters will be mentioned farther on. One of these is so similar to the Salmon Trout of Europe that it might fairly be called, as it often is called, by the same name.

A charr is also found in Pacific waters, but as the name "charr" had been wholly forgotten by our ancestors, they could only call this, like the others, a trout. In Oregon the red-spotted trout, or charr, is distinguished by the name of Bull Trout. In California it had, for a long time, no distinctive name. A landlady in some hotel in the neighborhood of the United States Fish Hatchery at Baird, on the McCloud River, at the time of the Dolly Varden craze, noticing the gaudy colors of this California charr, proposed to call it the Dolly Varden Trout. The name coming to the ears of Professor Baird, then United States Fish Commissioneer, pleased his fancy, and he directed me, who then had the classification of the trout in the Smithsonian Institution in hand, to continue for this species the common name of Dolly Varden Trout, and so, in the books at least, Dolly Varden Trout it is to this day.

Turning back to the Quinnat Salmon, or the Salmon of the Pacific Coast, we often find persons puzzled to distinguish its young from the various forms of trout. Any person who can count and will take the trouble to learn which of the fins is the anal fin—the one on the lower side just behind the vent—can distinguish the young Quinnat Salmon from any form of trout. All the so-called salmon of the Pacific Coast, all the species of Oncorhynchus, have an increased number of rays in the anal fin, from fourteen to twenty, while all forms of trout in whatever country, all the charrs, and the Atlantic Coast salmon, have in this fin but nine or ten rays. This is a matter of some importance, in view of the fact that the fishery laws of this State discriminate between trout and salmon, permitting the catching of the one, when to take the other is forbidden.

The existence of large salmon-like fishes in the Pacific has long been known. The different species were first recognized about one hundred and forty years ago by that most exact of early observers, Steller, who described and distinguished them with perfect accuracy, under their Russian vernacular names. These Russian names were, in 1792, adopted by Walbaum as specific names, in giving to these animals scientific names. Since Stella's time, writers of all degrees of incompetence, and writers with scanty material or with no materials at all, have done their worse to confuse our knowledge of these salmon, until it became evident that no exact knowledge of any of the species remained. In the current system of a few years ago [See report U. S. Pacific R. R. Explorations, 1858.], the breeding males of the five species known to Steller constitu a separate genius of many species (Oncorhynchus, Suckley); t females were placed in the genus Salmo, and the young formed still another species of a third genus, called Fario, supposed to be a genus of trout. The young breeding males (grilse) of one of the species (Oncorhynchus nerka) made still a fourth genus, designated as Hypsifario. Not one of the writers on these fishes thirty years ago knew a single species definitely, at sight, or used knowingly in their descriptions a single character by which species are really distinguished. Not less than thirty-five nominal species of Oncorhynchus have already been described from the North Pacific, although, so far as is now known, only the five originally noticed by Steller really exist. The descriptive literature of the Pacific salmon is among the very worst extant in science. This is not, however, altogether the fault of the authors, but it is in great part due to the extraordinary variability in appearance of the different species of salmon. These variations are, as will be seen, due to several different causes, notably to differences in surroundings, in sex, and in age, and in conditions connected with the process of reproduction. The writer and his associate, Prof. Charles H. Gilbert, have had, under the auspices of the United States Fish Commission, better opportunities to study the different species of Oncorhynchus than had fallen to the lot of any previous ichthyologist. Entirely similar conclusions have been independently reached by Dr. Tarleton H. Bean, of the United States Fish Commission, who has several times visited Alaska for the purpose of investigating its salmon fisheries, and whose means of studying the different species has been as extensive as ours. It is very gratifying to see that the results of these different sets of observations agree in all essential respects, and also agree fully with the observations made so long ago by Steller.

All of these authorities recognize the existence of five species of Oncorhynchus inhabiting both shores of the North Pacific. There is no evidence of the existence of any more on either the American or the Asiatic side. These species may be called: (1) The Quinnat, or King Salmon, (2) the Blueback Salmon, or Red-fish, (3) the Silver Salmon, (4) the Dog Salmon, and (5) the Humpback Salmon; or (1) Oncorhynchus tschawytscha, (2) Oncorhychus nerka, (3) Oncorhynchus kisutch, (4) Onchrhynchus keta, and (5) Oncorhynchus gorbuscha. All of these species are now known to occur in the waters of Kamtschatka as well as in those of Alaska and Oregon. These species, in all their varied conditions, may usually be distinguished by the characters given below. Other differences of form, color and appearance are absolutely valueless for distinction, unless specimens of the same age, sex and condition are compared.

The King Salmon, or True Quinnat, or Chinook Salmon (Oncorhynchus tschawytscha), has an average weight of 22 pounds, but individuals weighing 70 to 100 pounds are occasionally taken. It has about 16 anal rays, 15 to 19 branchiostegals, 23 (9–15) gill-rakers on the anterior gill arch, and 140 to 185 pyloric coeca. The scales are comparatively large, there being from 130 to 155 in a longitudinal series. In the spring the body is silvery, the back dorsal fin and caudal fin having more or less of round black spots, and the sides of the head having a peculiar tin-colored metallic luster. In the fall the color is often black or dirty red, and the species can then only be distinguished from the Dog Salmon by its technical characters.

The Blue-back Salmon (Oncorhynchus nerka) usually weighs from 5 to 8 pounds. It has about 14 developed anal rays, 14 branchiostegals, and 75 to 95 pyloric coeca. The gill-rakers are more numerous than in any other salmon, the number being usually about 39 (16 –|– 23). The scales are larger, there being 130 to 140 in the lateral line. In the spring the form is plumply rounded, and the color is a clear, bright blue above, silvery below, and everywhere immaculate. Young fishes often show a few round black spots, which disappear when they enter the sea. Fall specimens in the lakes are bright red in color, hocked-nosed and slab-sided, and bear little resemblance to the spring run. Young spawning male grilse are also peculiar in appearance, and were for a time considered as forming a distinct genus, under the name of Hypsifario kennerlyi." This species appears to be sometimes land-locked in mountain lakes, in which case it reaches but a small size. Such specimens, called "Kokos," by the Indians, have been sent us from Lake Whatcom, Washington, by Mr. T. J. Smith, of Whatcom. Similar specimens have been sent in from other mountain lakes.

The Silver Salmon (Oncorhynchus kisutch) reaches a weight of 3 to 8 pounds. It has 13 developed rays in the anal, 13 branchiostegals, 23 (10–|–13) gill-rakers and 45 to 80 pyloric coeca. There are about 127 scales in the lateral line. In color it is silvery in spring, greenish above, and with a few faint black spots on the upper parts only. In the fall the males are mostly of a dirty red.

The Dog Salmon (Oncorhynchus keta) reaches an average weight of about 12 pounds. It has about 14 anal rays, 14 branchiostegals, 24 (9 –|– 15) gill-rakers, and 140 to 185 pyloric coeca. There are about 150 scales in the lateral line. In spring it is dirty silvery, immaculate, or sprinkled with small black specks, the fins dusky. In the fall the male is brick-red or blackish, and its jaws are greatly distorted.

The Humpback Salmon (Oncorhynchus gorbuscha) is the smallest of the species, weighing from three to six pounds. It has usually 15 annal rays, 12 branchiostegals, 28 (13 –|– 15) gill-rakers, and about 180 pyloric coeca. Its scales are much smaller than in any other salmon, there being 180 to 240 in the lateral line. In color it is bluish above, silvery below, the posterior and upper parts with many round black spots. The males in the fall are red, and are more extravagantly distorted than in any other in the Salmonidæ.

Salmon and Trout.

The above headline was the subject of a most interesting and instructive lecture by President David Starr Jordan of the Leland Stanford University delivered some time since in this city.

President Jordan is a recognized authority on this subject than which no more important a subject is presented on this Coast standing in need of intelligent discussion.

The Board of Fish Commissioners of this State wisely recognizing the timely and able treatment of the above named subject have taken the opportunity of placing his lecture entire before the public in a neat pamphlet which may be obtained by addressing Ramon E. Wilson, Esq., the Secretary of this body at 419 California Street, this city. To all who are interested in this subject this publication will be hailed with delight as it is one of the most valuable contributions ever made to the, as yet extremely scanty volume of lucid literature existing on the important questions discussed.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths, in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

A Well-Defined Case of Rabies.

There can no longer be a doubt of the existence of this much dreaded disease. A miserable mangy cur known to the public by the self chosen appelation of "Can Can" has developed the undoubted symptoms of the disease. With the froth and drool of virulence dripping from his lips he sits on his haunches, and at least once a week he is seized with a frightful fit and for the space of several columns goes snapping and snarling at every body within sight.

He begins one of his recent fits by snapping at the management of the New York bench show. His is rendered harmless from the fact that his own action has long since deprived him, or any thing he may say or do of credence or respect. It is the wail of disappointed ambition. Since when has the New York bench show management recognized "Mason" or "Can Can?" He next turns the stream of his filthy virulence upon the Forest and Stream and its able and gentlemanly kennel editor, Mr. Lacy, in which paragraphs he also slurs Mr. George Raper and his work. The American Field is then showered with his filthy references. Then the poor dotard tugs at his chain and howls and snaps out his frothings over the remarks of this journal. The miserable, whining trickster avoids every issue raised and vents his spleen in vulgarisms and misstatements.

Mr. A. Russell Crowell then comes in for a share of abuse. We present Mr. Crowell to Mr. Mason in this issue. He may know him hereafter. We would not have so insulted Mr. Crowell, but as the Rockies and great plains intervene he may not be injured by the occurrence, and nature having made him a gentleman he is proof against the virulent germs which have developed so well defined a disease as the before-mentioned unfortunate is so sorely afflicted with. This self-elected Pooh-Bah and enduring hypocrite lays claim to being a gentleman and a scholar. Preposterous!

He a gentleman! He argue upon any question! The devil's claim to Christlike purity would be sooner allowed. This ligneous headed dolt claims to be a scholar and a gentleman, yet in the light of his own record as traced with his "steel pen" he stands revealed as an uncouth blackguard uncultured even in the art of lying—a naked Hottentot with but a clout and club. Instead of rapier thrusts, when challenged to combat on grounds of his own choosing, we have but the awkward wielding of an undressed weapon with which this unlettered savage beats into foam the filthy stream which flows from his own depravity. When his proven disreputable methods are referred to in the Belmont affair he does not answer save by the certain confession of the charge by howling and snapping at every thing in sight, giving evidence that he is affected with a genuine case of the rabies. If such a disease has never heretofore existed, the filthy rotteness of his own depraved nature furnishes a perfect and fitting breeding place for its virulent germs.

He lies where he intimates that he ever was debarred from the opportunity of stating his case in this paper. He lies when he intimates that we ever stated that "Mason" and "Can Can" were one and the same individual.

We have never so intimated until now, and if either or both of these supersensetive egotists can derive any comfort from the statement that we never seek to make distinguishment between the individual specimens of the genus mephitis they are welcome to do so.

"Can Can" proves himself to be of the nature of a fortuitous hybrid, a mixture of jackal and buzzard, from the fact that he makes the columns of his misnamed kennel department a dumping ground for all the putrid matter that the combined senses of these scavengers could discover and drag in. Relying mainly upon his diseased imagination to create conditions, with an utter disregard for truth, he proceeds to throw the froth of his own imbecility abroad with the supreme recklessness of the vicious, ignorant, termigant which he has proven himself to be.

So egotistical is he that his chief pastime is repeating his own name, at the sound of which his poor, weak, shriveled ego limps into the range of his distorted vision, and, shutting out all else becomes to him the universe! Unfortunate, weakling! What a pitable sight he presents as he works himself into a rage at the success of others, while he is left to revel in the cimmerian darkness of his own benighted being.

We are informed that this man Mason formerly judged at some of the smaller shows in the East and that when, because of his biased decisions, he was let severely alone, that he turned about and used what influence he then may have had against the subsequent shows held by these clubs. He is shown by his writings to be a querulous, petulant old woman to whom warm petticoats and frilled caps would be a fitting garb. When wandering through fields and meadows of bloom and beauty he returns with his arms full of thistles and thorns. If hunting he would naturally choose lizards, skunks and other vermine. They suit his palate. Perhaps nature constructed him with the sole object in view of representing to the balance of the race what they might become if shorn of every sentiment and principle of manliness. We have burned up "the devil's" last office towel to fumigate the room while reading his last. Requiescat in pace.

Mr. Mason, Permit us—Mr. Crowell.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman.—Mr. C. H. Mason answers my charges in the American Stock-keeper, in a comparatively speaking, gentlemanly manner and then turns around and fires a tirade of abuse and blackguradism at me over the nom de plume of "Can Can" in Turf Field and Farm. One can not tread on a snake without being hissed at and I certainly expected just about what I have read.

No other man whose name appears in our kennel papers would stoop to such low methods of retaliation. Mr. Mason charges me with aspiring to know him, stating that he does not know me.

Firstly, I never desired to become personally acquainted with Mr. Mason as I always had a supreme contempt for his littleness.

Secondly, Mr. Mason knows to his cost as to never meeting me that that is a deliberate falsehood. He asked for and obtained an introduction to me at Utica, N. Y. and the moment we were out of earshot he asked me why I persisted in attacking him. I replied that I reported things as they were. We met at the balance of the shows of the circuit and exchanged passing remarks only. I do not claim to be the equal of Chas. H. Mason as a judge or reporter, that is to say when that gentleman gives an unbiased opinion, but I do claim that Mr. Mason cannot give a fair decision or write a fair report to save his life. Why? Simply because he has scarcely a dozen friends left among the old fanciers and cannot resist the temptation of judging the wrong end of the chain. The prominent writers of the day do not dare tackle him because "one cannot touch pitch without becoming defiled," and most kennel papers will not adverties him by publishing a controversy. Mr. Mason's statement that he does not know me is about as good an acknowledgement of his ignorance of kennel matters as one could wish for. As bragadocio seems to be in order I would like to know who has done the most for the best interests of kennel matters Mr. Mason or the writer? Mr. Mason "worked" the Forest and Stream from one of our best papers to the very poorest. It has taken friend Lacy over a year, with all his popularity, to work it up again. Did anyone ever know Mr. Mason to say or write a good word of anything or anybody but himself? Did anyone ever know him to put his shoulder to the wheel and work for any specialty club or kennel club, as I have done? Have his writings ever assisted any good cause? He has drawn princely salaries from clubs for misjudging their dogs, the clubs have had enough of being hoodwinked and have refused to employ him. He has insulted friend and foe until every body knows him even the "cow-boy" editors of the far West. Has Mr. Mason ever imported or bred any dogs of any breed that are the equal of those that I have brought into the charmed circle?

How will the third rater Patsy compare with ch. Hesper and ch. Manon, Republican Belle, La Pucelle, Republican and others of several breeds? I have not made quite such a flourish of trumpets as "His Highness" but I fancy Boston, Lynn, Philadelphia and New York fanciers could show him Greyhounds, Setters, Pointers, Cockers, Schipperkes and Collies that I have bred and sold that will equal if they do not excel any of Mr. Mason's breeding or selling. How about the little shows held by a club in Eastern Massachusetts, in New Bedford one year and judged by Mason, and held in Taunton the next year and judged by the writer? Who gave the best satisfaction and who secured the largest entry? Did anyone ever know of my offering to "write up" anyone's dogs for a sum of money? "Our prize dogs" was supposed to represent America's most typical specimens, yet it is a published fact that Mr. Mason requested Mr. Belmont to pay him a large sum of money to "write up" and publish a picture of his Fox-terrier. Mr. Belmont refused and published the correspondence. Mr. Belmont has never owned a good dog, according to Mr. Mason's reports, since then. Call again, Mr. Mason. Call again.

Parasites in the Dog.

Mr. A. J. Sewell, in the Kennel Gazette, writing on "Internal Parasites Found in the Dog," says:

Besides the Ascaris Marginata there are several other varieties of round or lumbricoide worms found in the dog, and one in particular deserves some notice. It is a worm that is found in the cavities of the heart, and called the Cruel Threadworm or Filaria Immitis. This parasite is very common in dogs in China and Japan, but I have never found them in English dogs. A short time ago when making a post-mortem examination of the body of a Chow that had died in very great pain, and which was supposed to have been poisoned. I found a large number of these Filaria, which had induced inflammation of the heart, and, no doubt, death. I have heard of other cases occurring in imported Chinese dogs.

The symptoms induced by these worms are not very clear, and it is difficult to tell when a dog is thus affected. It is said that a dog may live a long time with his heart full of these parasites without exhibiting any bad symptoms, but I believe sooner or later they are the cause of death, in some cases by inducing fits, and in others by setting up acute inflammation of the heart, which is accompanied by great pain.

As to Treatment.—Up to the present there is no known remedy that is of any use.

There is another specimen of the lumbricoide or round worm, whose home is the kidney; it is called the giant strongle. I am glad to say its appearance is almost as rare as the heart worm, but its effects are as fatal. The male measures ten inches long, but the female measures sometimes as much as three feet. It causes acute inflammation and supuration of the kidney, inducing pain and tenderness in the region of the loins; blood and pus are passed with the water, the animal becomes emaciated, and in time generally dies from the effect of urea poisoning. I believe, as in the previous case, there is no agent known that is capable of destroying or expelling these parasites.

There are other round worms found in different parts of the dog, as the Filaria Hepatica, which is occasionally seen in the liver; the wrinkled threadworm (Trichosomaplica), found in the small intestines. These latter may be successfully treated with santonine, given in the usual doses.

Then there is the small lumbricoide, of a blood-red color, that is seen in the liver, and called the Spiroptora Sanguinolenta.

Another specimen, called the whip worm, being thicker one end than the other, and boasts of the name of Trichocephalus Depressinsculus. Its chief place of abode is the cæcum. These, like the three-corner headed worm, may also be expelled with small doses of santonine. Besides those already mentioned, there is the spiral flesh worm, called the Trichina spiralis; also a small worm that has been found in the eye, and called Filaria Trispinulosa. There are also the small thread worms occasionally found in the liver, called Filaria Hepatica. There is one other, which is occasionally seen in the venous blood of the dog, known by the name of Hæmatozoon Tubulatum. This, I believe, completes the list of round worms to which dogs are subject; and, I dare say, some readers will think a very good list, too.

I now come to another variety of worms, with whose appearances almost all dog owners are familiar. They are the tapeworms or Cestodes. There are five kinds, obtained from different sources, and though they are all somewhat similar in appearance there are distinctive differences. First we have the Gid tapeworm (Tænia Cœnurus), which dogs obtain by eating the brains of sheep suffering from Gid or turnside. Most people have heard of sheep suffering from this disease, which is due to a parasite (called a hydatid) in the brain, and when thus affected the animal generally walks round and round in a circle. Each of these hydatids contain a colony of tapeworm larvæ, numbering from three to five hundred, each of which when swallowed by a dog is capable of developing into a tapeworm. On the other hand, if when a sheep is grazing it swallows an egg from one of these particular tapeworms which may have escaped from a dog, the chances are, if things take their natural course, a hydatid will form in the sheep's brain. The same thing may happen if a dog suffering from these worms goes swimming in a pond where sheep or cattle are accustomed to drink, eggs, which may have passed from the bowels and be clinging to the coat, may be washed off in the water, and if afterwards swallowed by some herlivorous animal the same happens as above described. This cestode measures from twenty to fifty inches in length. It is not very common amongst dogs in this country, only about five dogs in every hundred are supposed to be affected, but it is more frequently found in some other countries, especially in Norway.

The California Kennel Club.

The coming bench show is occupying the time, and attention and calling for the labor of the executive committee of the club having the matter in charge. The list of special prizes is very large, and includes many articles of value beyond that of those usually presented. The entries are already quite large, and the outlook is most flattering for the coming event.

Many valuable dogs have been brought into the State since the last show, and it is probable that a large number of entries will be made from the East of dogs traveling the western circuit. The influence which the selection of Mr. Mortimer as judge of the shows, both here and at Los Angeles, is clearly manifest. No better man could have been selected, and certainly no more practical and thorough man to-day is to be found within the entire circle of dogdom in this country. A man whose reputation stands, like that of Judge Davidson, solely upon his knowledge and experience in the practical questions of the subject, he comes with these, the very best recommendations as to his fitness.

The office of the secretary of the club, Mr. Frank Silvey, is at 436 Montgomery street, where all information regarding the arrangements for the coming event may be obtained by application either by letter or in person.

The Southern California Kennel Club.

Our neighbors of Los Angeles are pushing forward actively, the preparations for the coming bench show at that point. The probabilities are that their coming event will exceed in the number and quality of dogs entered, all of their previous attempts in this line. We understand that their entry list already passes the point which assures the complete success of the venture. The southern part of the state possesses some really excellent dogs and their quality, especially as to field dogs, has been preceptably improved during the past year.

We trust that the attendance at the show may be fully commensurate with the efforts of the gentlemen having the event in charge, being satisfied that if it should the success of the show will be assured from a popular standpoint.

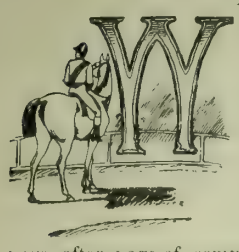
Floral Show.

The numerous and valuable premiums offered by the Californir State Floral Society are stimulating both professionals and amateurs to renewed efforts. Outside premiums are being daily added to the list, the latest being $100, from the White House, for the most artistically arranged exhibit. The value of the premium list is $3,000.

Mr. F. L. Wooster has been quite sick for a month or more, the fore part of the week marking his first appearance after his close confinement under his physician's charge. He celebrated his recovery by participating in the Country Club match on Saturday last.

More failures in shooting are made, we are persuaded, both in the field and at the trap by good shooters by reason of overloading than from any other cause. Follow the advice of the manufacturer of the gun as to the charge to be used.



Mr. E. D. Fulford has challenged Mr. J. A. R. Elliott for the American Field wing-shot cup. We trust that the battle between these giants may be fought with each in the best of form so that it may be a test of their highest skill.

In shooting at inanimate targets, nothing is more important than to shoot a charge which will throw the most even pattern possible. The charge should never be so heavy as to have a tendency to spread the shot too much, and any tendency in this direction is too much.

The State Sportsman's Association is making strenuous efforts to crystalize the sportsmen of the State into a body that shall be effective in forwarding the interests of that organization which means the protection of game and fish by the enforcement of the laws already upon the statute books of the State and the enactment of further laws to the same end.

LANGTRY STOCK FARM.

A Picturesque Ride to the Far-Famed Place—The Home of Friar Tuck and Some Beautiful Thoroughbreds.

WHEN THE sun goes down on the last day of the last year of the present century the chroniclers of events of these five-score years of progress will begin their labors. Some will write of the discoveries in science and mechanics, others will write of the growth and spread of civilization; some will devote page after page of compilations upon the increase of commerce during every decade, while the men who will gather up the silken threads of biography and place them before their readers at the dawning of the century, will have indeed one of the most agreeable tasks of all. "The Famous Men and Women of the Nineteenth Century" may be the title of their large work, and within its beautiful covers will be found biographical sketches of statesmen, physicians, inventors, soldiers, sailors, artists, authors, poets, orators, and men and women who have become famous because they have attracted the attention of civilization by their gifts. Among the latter, the name and picture of Mrs. Constance Langtry, or as she is more familiarly known, "The Jersey Lily," will receive an honored place. Her travels around the globe and the pleasant remembrances of her California trip will not be omitted, for it was here in this favored State of ours that she resolved to make her home. Whether that resolution will ever be acted upon is a question that cannot be decided at present. Her choice of a home is a most beautiful spot in the "Switzerland of America," as all travelers call Lake county. Many of our readers have no doubt read something about the stock farm she purchased, yet few of them have an idea of its size or resources, and thinking that perhaps a description of it might prove interesting, one of our representatives with a well-known Eastern horse-owner paid it a visit a few weeks ago.
